SEVENTY THOUSAND MEN WILL FIGHT TO STAY WITH EMPIRE

Nothing More Would Delight Soul of Ulster Than a Call to Battle

Belfast, Dec. 16.—I am assured officially to-day that there are 75,000 rifles in the hands of Ulstermen and that each rifle has paid a [illegible] to the British Government to be legitimatized, which means that every rifle which has been brought into Ulster has been made so Britishly regular that no amount of red tape can tie it up. That is why every man who has a British registered rifle in Ireland is laughing at the half-hearted attempts to search the boats.

Ulster is fully armed.

Scrap Would Delight Ulster.

Ulster has a thousand rounds of ammunition per man, and I think what would delight a certain section of Ulster's soul more than anything would be the signal for onslaught. Ulster is more than ready. Ulster is ready to take the aggressive at any time, and there are machine guns and pompoms which practice have brought up to South African perfection.

Stay in Empire or Know Why.

To make claims of this bellicose part of the Empire good, Ulster will remain in the United Kingdom or there will be sixty or seventy thousand trained men to know why. I have seen some of them drilling and have been with them when they have made rides which the best German despatch riders could not have made. Ulster is the most militarily perfected part of the British Empire to-day and no one could win it over.

PLANS TO REORGANIZE REPUBLICAN PARTY

Two Proposals Were Put Before the National Committee at Washington To-day.

Washington, Dec. 16.—Two proposals for reorganization of the Republican party, and to find a basis upon which [illegible] can unite, confronted the Republican National Committee to-day.

Foremost was a proposal for a special national convention to readjust the system of delegate representation. The other was that no convention be called, but that the national committee fix a plan of reapportionment for ratification by Republican State conventions.

A resolution for a special convention was prepared by a special committee, which also framed another resolution in accordance with a compromise suggestion by Charles B. Warren, of Michigan, chairman of the law committee, proposing that after the National committee fixes a basis of delegate reapportionment, the plan be ratified by two-thirds of the States which cast Republican pluralities for President in 1916.

CALLS UPON AN OLD TREATY

Hudson Bay Company's Defence For Buying Furs Illegally.

Sudbury, Ont., Dec. 16.—Police Magistrate Brodie of Sudbury will hear a case this week in which charges have been laid against the Hudson Bay Co. factor at Biscotasing, for having in the possession of the company skins including muskrat, otter, and beaver. It is said the company will fight the case with a defence involving the interpretation of the old Indian treaty, under which Indians can hunt and fish as long as grass grows and water flows.

TO USE WIRELESS FOR TRAIN SIGNALS

General Use Will be Made of it on American Railways, Says Official

New York, Dec. 16.—Operations of train signals, transmission of commercial messages, and receiving of news reports on speeding trains by wireless will be common in the near future, according to the belief of L. B. Foley, superintendent of the telegraph of the Lackawanna Railroad, here to-day. Foley has been making wireless experiments on the Lackawanna, the first of which was receiving of news from the United Press report on a train speeding sixty miles an hour. The news matter was sent from Scranton, Pa.

Foley declared that it has been shown that train signals can be operated by wireless. If a despatcher desires to set a signal for a train but is not in communication with it, he can cause the semaphore blade of the signal post to rise or fall by sounding the [illegible] dots and dashes. Commercial messages have been sent from Lackawanna trains, said Foley. They are sent by wireless from the train and then relayed to land lines for final transmission.

No Aerial Post in U.S.A.

Washington, Dec. 16.—The House yesterday voted down a bill authorizing the Postmaster-General to enter into contracts for transporting the mail by aeroplane.

ASTRONOMICAL SOCIETY DR. MARSH'S FAREWELL

The chemical laboratory of the Collegiate Institute was crowded last evening, on the occasion of the annual meeting of the Peterborough Centre of the Royal Astronomical Society. Mr. T. A. S. Hay was re-elected President. Mr. T. C. Elliott was re-elected vice-president and was also elected secretary-treasurer in the place of Rev. Dr. Marsh, who is leaving the district. Mr. W. A. Logan, in the name of the Society, presented Dr. Marsh with a handsome travelling bag as an expression of appreciation of his seven years' service to the Centre as secretary and lecturer.

Having suitably acknowledged the gift, Dr. Marsh gave an interesting lecture on the sun as a tropical planet. The sun spots were explained as due to the cooling down of gases driven forth from the sun, as they return back to the sun. These sun spots cause magnetic disturbances, to which the Aurora Borealis, earthquakes and volcanic eruptions are due. We are now passing through a minimum sun spot period. Hence there are no eruptions of volcanoes, and no volcanic dust to lessen the result of the sun's radiation. To this cause is due our long spell of fine warm weather. The flames of the sun, we are told, sometimes rush out four hundred thousand miles. Portions of the flaming substance become detached as comets. The earth passed through the path of what was once a comet. Thus we get shooting stars, as comet dust impinges on the earth, and we pick up on the earth, in the form of meteorites, fragments of the sun.

ALONE ON OCEAN WITH DEAD

New York, Dec. 16.—A despatch from Miami, Fla., to The Tribune, says: After having been adrift for twelve hours in a small launch, which she was unable to manage, Mrs. M. E. Bogree, tourist from St. Louis, was rescued early this morning. In the boat with the woman was the dead body of her companion, George D. Smith, who in the early 90's was a restaurant king on 14th street, New York.

Shortly after the couple started out for a boat ride the engine became stalled and while working over it Smith dropped dead from heart disease. Mrs. Bogree knew nothing about running the boat and drifted about in the darkness until her cries were heard by fishermen. She is in a critical condition as a result of her experience.

LEMIEUX ACT BE OVERHAULED BY MINISTER OF LABOR

Commissioner Price in Vancouver Strike Report Makes a Suggestion

Ottawa, Dec. 16.—Amongst the important measures which will be before the House of Commons this session will be a revision of the Industrial Disputes Act, better known as the Lemieux Act. Hon. T. W. Crothers, Minister of Labor, has had the matter under consideration for some time and it is likely the Act will be completely overhauled and a number of important amendments added which experience has shown are necessary.

Mr. Samuel Price, K.C., Commissioner appointed to investigate Vancouver Island strikes, in his report made a number of recommendations which are under consideration by the Minister. Some of them are likely to be adopted.

"Strike" or Just "Holiday."

Mr. Price's recommendations were four. First, he recommended that the bill define more clearly the word "strike." This was suggested as a result of the men in the Pacific Coast strikes insisting that they were simply taking a "holiday" and for this reason refusing a board. This proposal will probably be followed.

MONTREAL "PLAY" INSULTING TO KING, IS DONE IN FRENCH

Montreal, Dec. 16.—Caricatures of King George and Prince of Wales and offensive references to the late King Edward form part of a "Comedy" called Baptiste [illegible] Tour, now being played in french at the Novelty theatre.

The offering is a sort of mixture of revue and burlesque, being a more or less plotless series of "Experiences," met with by the Mayor of St. Scholastique, his wife and daughter, on a world tour. They met with the King the Prince of Wales, and other notables and the antics of the high personages from the subject matter of the piece.

The King of England who in make-up is an excellent likeness of King George, is represented as a sort of weak-kneed cockney, attired in pyjamas, which he covers with a cloak of purple when the occasion demands. He is depicted as treating with levity the exalted position he holds; the general trend of the conversation amongst himself and other royalties present, being a reference to the King business as a huge bluff.

His Majesty is further represented as officially opening the cow stables of Sir David Lafortune, at St. Laurent, and authorizing the latter by cable to name one of his strongest bulls after the Sovereign. The Prince of Wales is depicted as a "sissy," who endeavors to engage in flirtations with the daughter of the visiting Mayor, of St. Scholastique. His capers give rise to an unsavory reference to the memory of the late King Edward. Effort is made to give a political touch.

The King is represented as receiving Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Premier Borden, the latter of whom submits a cheque for $35,000,000 as a contribution to the imperial navy. Sir Wilfrid Laurier is shown as urging the Sovereign to refuse to accept the cheque, as it has not been endorsed by the Canadian people. The King thereupon complies with the representations of the Opposition leader and urges Mr. Borden to make use of the money for good roads and education.

EARTHQUAKE IN TOKIO

Tokio Dec. 16.—The strongest earthquake in several years occurred here yesterday, and was felt over an extensive area. Houses in Tokio and Yokohama were violently rocked, and the people were greatly alarmed. So far as can be learned there were no casualties, and the damage was confined to windows and bric-a-brac.

The yearly average earthquake record for Tokio is 60. During the last fifty years only two severe shocks have been experienced.

LEANCE TO SCARE GHOSTS

Passaic, N. J. Dec. 16—To "shoo away ghosts that have troubled the home of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Vanderpile of this city, for several weeks, spiritualists from Paterson will hold a seance at the house at midnight to-night. Since the family was first awakened about two months ago by knockings on the wall, the "visitations" have been regular.

PUZZLE IN CASE OF GIRL, WHO SHOT BETRAYER

Youth She Says Promised to Marry Her Claims an Alibi for Drugging Story

New York, Dec. 16.—Social workers as well as the police were today puzzled by little Margaret Lima, 15 who is held charged with shooting and seriously wounding Meyer Simmons, a 17-year-old clerk, who, she said, refused to marry her. The Lima girl fired six shots at Simons in front of a "movie" theatre Saturday night, and besides shooting him in the back brought down a 13-year-old boy who was struck in the leg by a stray bullet.

Many points in the story told by the child have yet to be cleared up before the police are ready to believe the charges she made against Simons are true.

If the story is not true, social workers declare, it reveals terrible conditions in the city which make it possible for a child of her age to be so informed as to be able to concoct a story of being drugged, taken to a hotel and wronged and then led to shoot down her assailant because he refused to marry her.

Young Simons may recover. He insists he never saw the Lima girl before she approached him Saturday night, and shot him. His mother declares he was at home the night the girl said she was taken to the Sixth Avenue hotel. The girl has not been able to give the name of the hotel and to-day will be asked to point out the place.

ITALIAN BADLY INJURED

London, Ont., Dec. 16.—Antonio Loiri, of Toronto, an Italian laborer of a C. P. R. section gang was badly injured in an early morning riot in which half a dozen Italian laborers attacked each other with shovels. Loiri has such serious wounds about the head that it is not yet known whether he will recover. The row started over a game of cards and the first took place in a car.

MR. F. S. SPENCE REPUDIATES HARBOR COMMISSION SCHEME

Declares That it Would Entail Heavy Annual Deficits to be Borne by the Citizens in the General Tax Rate

Toronto, Dec. 16.—A clear exposure of the heavy debt that would be incurred by the Harbor Board's plan for a rapid transit service to the suburbs, and the yearly drain it would be on the exchequer, was made by Mr. F. S. Spence this afternoon, at a luncheon given by the Municipal Improvement Association. Mr. Spence had no grievance against his fellow-Commissioners to air. But he pointed out that the first start on the plan had been made in the middle of October, that it was submitted to the Commission in November, and the final stage rushed through in a week, while he was out of the city. Regarding the proposal to purchase, Mr. Spence said that regard should be given to the result of the purchase or non-purchase upon the demand to be made on the taxpayer, the result financially to the people who use the street cars, the result upon the health, convenience and comfort of the public, the effect upon the growth and development of the city, and the results as they may affect the questions of better housing, congestion of population, and slum conditions.

Loss Would Be Enormous.

He then analyzed existing conditions, showing that on 17.4 miles of [illegible] the city was losing a good deal more than $100,000 a year without allowing for sinking fund charges. The total loss on an [illegible] would amount to [illegible] by 1921. This loss [illegible] [illegible] by year from the [illegible] [illegible] estimated at $1,805,806, making a total burden to be borne by the people between now and 1921, a sum of $5,157,602.

Next Mr. Spence reviewed the plan put forward by Mr. Stewart Lyon, which he said would serve to transfer some of the loss of the street car users to the general taxpayers.

APARTMENT EXITS CUT OFF

New York N.Y., Dec. 16.—A city fireman, his mother and sister, were burned to death early to-day in a fire which practically destroyed a five story apartment house in which they lived at 306 Amsterdam avenue. It was one of the most spectacular apartment house fires in this city recently, seven persons being seriously injured by flames or by jumping from windows.

The fifty occupants found all exits cut off when the flames shot up from the basement. The firemen effected many thrilling rescues but Thomas J. McManus, one of their number, who was on 24 hours leave from the station house in the vicinity, was trapped in his apartment with his mother, Mrs. Mary McManus, and his sister, Mary. One of his mates, Michael O'Sullivan was probably fatally injured by falling from a ladder while trying to make his way to the McManus apartment. All three members of the family were dead when the firemen finally reached them.

McManus was a cousin of Thomas J. McManus, prominent Tammany leader, familiarly known as "The McManus." The loss is estimated [illegible].

MAN'S BODY FOUND IN GAS CHAMBER OF RUBBER WORKS

Robert Lofthouse, Employed by Gutta Percha Co., Crawled to Death

Toronto, Dec. 16.—Mystery surrounds the death of Robert Lofthouse, 42 Wright avenue, an employe of the Gutta Percha Rubber Company, Limited, O'Hara avenue, whose body was found wedged in a chamber containing carbonic acid gas in the chemical department of the plant, shortly before one o'clock yesterday afternoon. No person saw the unfortunate man in the vicinity of the chamber where he met his death, nor can the management offer any reason why he should have entered it. When discovered the body was lying inside the chamber or tank, which measures eight feet, by six by four.

Wife Was Anxious.

Entrance is gained through a manhole in the bottom of the receptacle and through this the man must have crawled to his death. But for the fact that he did not return home to lunch, it is not unlikely that the fatality would have been discovered as soon as it was.

Mrs. Lofthouse, however, visited the factory shortly after noon yesterday to ascertain the reason why her husband had failed to put in an appearance for dinner. Some of the other employes then recalled that he had not been seen around the plant for some little time, and a search was at once instituted.

When he could not be found, two of the more [illegible] employes visited the tank, and peering through the manhole noticed the body inside.

Dr. W. Harris was at once summoned and [illegible] his apparatus, an effort was made at resuscitation, but on arrival the physician pronounced death to have taken place some time before. A coroner was notified, but so far no decision has been made as to an inquest.

FARMERS OF WEST ASSAIL PROTECTION SEE PREMIER BORDEN

Free Wheat, Free Farm Implements, Free Cement is Urged Show Opposition to Sample Market

Ottawa, Dec. 16.—On acceptance of the reciprocity pact which they claim still stands on the American statute books; food products not included in the reciprocity agreement put on the free list; an acceptance of the countervailing offers of the Underwood tariff of free flour, free wheat and free potatoes; an increase in the British preference to 50 per cent. with free trade in five years; free agricultural implements and free lumber and free cement, were the main demands of the farmers' delegation which waited on Premier Borden and the members of the Government at noon to-day.

A lengthy memorial which consisted largely of an arraignment of the whole protective system, was read by Mr. Roderick Mackenzie, secretary of the Manitoba Grain-Growers' Association, and then followed a series of resolutions dealing with each of the above points and elaborating why the Government should grant the requests.

Each resolution was followed by a speech.

He Didn't Take It.

George—"Did yer get that job, Henry?"

Henry—"I wouldn't take it. I sent 'im wot he was askin' fer give me, [illegible] said as much as I was worth. I told 'im to his face that wouldn't do for me."

George—"I shud think not, Henry. Did 'e expect yer ter work for nuthin'?"

HIS POINT OF VIEW.

Uncle Ransom, Told to Quit, Is Anxious About His Master.

"Uncle Ransom," said the planter, "you rode my best horse twenty miles to that festival Saturday night. You kept him out all day Sunday and nearly killed him Sunday night. How many times have I told you to let my horses rest on Sunday?"

"Yes, suh, Marse Robert; dat's so, but"—

"How many times have I told you if you didn't quit that you and I could not get along together on this place?"

"Dat sho' is the truth, Marse Robert. You p'intedly tole me dat. But you knows a nigger. He jes' nachally forgits."

"Every negro on this place believes that he can do exactly as he pleases."

"Dar now, bless Gawd, you sho' spoke a parable. Dese young niggers is gittin' mighty triflin'."

"It has come to this, Ransom—Roseville is not big enough for you and me. Tomorrow morning we part. You go your way and I go mine."

"Yes, suh."

The old negro looked sorely troubled and bewildered. He glanced over his shoulder at the rippling lake, the open cotton, the perfectly level fields. Ransom had been born on Roseville and had never known any other home. His heart went out in supreme pity for the man who had to leave it.

"Well, Marse Robert, ef we jes' can't git along together, if we's jes' boun' ter sep'rate, would you mind tellin' me whar'bouts you 'spects ter go?"—Everybody's Magazine.

Speaking of Bromidioms.

"Yes, I think my baby is not at all pretty. There are a number of babies in the community much better looking than mine. My baby gets its ugliness from my side of the house and not from its father's."

"I have no opinion about governmental affairs. I regard problems of statesmanship too deep for me, so I never meddle."

"Yes, I tried to get him, but I am glad he chose the other girl. She is so much more attractive than I am."

"I like my husband to cultivate the acquaintance of other women. It would be manifestly unfair to expect him to devote his time exclusively to me."

"I appreciate highly the confidence my party has thrice expressed in me, but I feel that I have no right to enter another race or to meddle with public affairs."

"Undoubtedly Mr. Taft's quiet regime is preferable to my egotistic foolhardiness."

"Looking over my Christmas presents, I was convinced that my wife is an excellent judge of cigars and neckties."

Too Much Persistence.

Sanford—Is Trailer making a good detective?

Tittsworth—No. He has too much persistence.

Sanford—Too much persistence? I should think the more persistence he had the greater his success would be.

Tittsworth—But Trailer's persistence is fool persistence. Four days ago a thief whom Trailer was chasing jumped from a bridge into the river below, and ever since that time Trailer has been waiting for the man to come to the surface.—Chicago News.

A Sweet Moment.

Cy Warman's young son had been naughty and had been sent to bed supperless.

Presently, when Mrs. Warman wasn't looking, Cy slipped upstairs and whispered through the door of the boy's room, "Son, could you eat some honey in the comb?"

"Dad," the boy said, "I could eat it in the brush."—Saturday Evening Post.

Mutual Interest.

A few days after a farmer had sold a pig to a neighbor he chanced to pass the neighbor's place, where he saw their little boy sitting on the edge of the pigpen watching its new occupant.

"How d'ye do, Johnny?" said he. "How's your pig today?"

"Oh, pretty well, thank you," replied the boy. "How's all your folks?"—Wasp.

THE MIDDLE AGED MAN.

Finding Happiness in a Life That to Youth Is Irksome.

"Younger people," said the middle aged man, "want variety. They want to be always on the go. Routine galls them. They hate to have to do the same thing over and over and over again day after day.

"They want to go somewhere or do something different all the time. Older people are happiest in a life of routine, most disturbed when variety is thrust upon them.

"For myself I welcome my daily task, endlessly repeated and always the same. I should be lost without it, disturbed if it were changed. A life of habit suits me best. I like the old places—familiar friendly surroundings. I don't want to change.

"Nor do I want fresh outside pleasure. In fact, I think I should be bored with some. I like my groove. It fits me, and I fit it. I don't want change. I just want to be left alone to work in my accustomed ways. It is in my groove that I am most comfortable. I like a life of labor and routine.

"And could there come to one a greater blessing? Nature and the customs of men enforce routine upon us whether we like it or not. In youth this irks us, but in our matured years in a life of routine, in the undisturbed enjoyment of familiar labor, we may find our greatest happiness."—New York Sun.

A MAGIC CLUB.

"Lau melomelo" is the name of a decoy used by the native fishermen of Hawaii. It is made of the hardest wood to be found on the islands and is carved and rubbed till it assumes the shape of a club with a little knob at the smaller end, to which the line is tied.

The club is from one to three feet long. A village sorcerer performs certain rites over it over a sacred fire. After this is done the club is magic, and the fisherman must be extremely careful of it. If a woman should step over it or enter a canoe in which it lies the club would lose all its power and would be useless ever afterward.

After the club has been charmed the fisherman mixes candlenut and cocoanut meat, bakes it and ties the mixture in a wrapper of cocoanut fiber.

At the fishing grounds the club is covered with the oily juice of the stuff and is then lowered carefully to the bottom. The scent of the baked nut meat attracts certain kinds of fish, which soon gather and begin to nibble at the club. As soon as enough fish are around the decoy a small bag shaped net is lowered very gently until its mouth is just over the club. The latter is then pulled up carefully and cunningly till it is within the bag. The fish are so eager for the stuff with which the club is covered that they follow it into the net without fear. As soon as all the fish are in it a fisherman dives and closes the mouth of the net, whereupon the rest haul it up quickly.

CHRISTMAS APPEAL
FOR
The Hospital for Sick Children
COLLEGE ST., TORONTO

Dear Mr. Editor:—

Thanks for your kindness in allowing me the privilege of appealing at this Christmas time on behalf of the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto.

It would take more space than you can spare to tell of the good work done for the sick and deformed children of this Province. Let me, however, in a few words, tell you of the progress of the work of the Hospital.

One nurse, six little white beds, a few dollars, a few friends—this was the beginning. The beds have grown to 250, the dollars to thousands, the friends to hundreds. 1875, the first year, 44 in-patients, 67 out-patients; 1912, last year, 1,648 in-patients, [illegible] out-patients; 1875, 1 nurse; 1912, 70 nurses.

Since 1875, thirty-eight years ago, the Hospital has admitted within its walls 21,018 children as in-patients, and 159,231 as out-patients, a total of 180,249, or an average of 4,743 per year. Of the 21,018 in-patients, 15,200 were from Toronto, and 5,818 from other parts of the Province; 16,150 of the total in-patients were cured, and 4,287 were improved.

In the Orthopedic Department last year, of the 1,648 in-patients, 378 were treated for deformities, 25 hip disease, 37 Pott's disease, 3 knock-knees, 19 bow-legs, 62 club feet, 8 lateral curvature of the spine, 44 infantile paralysis, 6 wry neck, and 75 tubercular disease of knee, hip and ankle. In 1912, the Surgical Apparatus Shop manufactured 427 appliances for in-patients and out-patients, including ankle braces, spinal braces, hip splints, bow-leg splints, club-feet splints, plaster jackets, etc.

In this Department in 25 years nearly 800 boys and girls have been treated for Club Feet and 650 corrected. Half of these came from places outside of Toronto. Surely we have a fair claim for help from the people of this Province.

Will you, the reader of this letter, help to give crippled children a fair start in life?

Busy dollars are better than idle tears. The sympathy that helps is good, but the Hospital has to have the sympathy that works.

While Christmas Bells are ringing to the glory of Him "Who made the lame to walk and the blind to see," give, give, give, and help the Hospital to help God's little ones, upon whom the heavy hand of affliction has been laid.

Will you please send a dollar, or more, if you can spare it, to Douglas Davidson, the Secretary-Treasurer of the Hospital, or

J. ROSS ROBERTSON,
Chairman of the Trustees, Toronto.

Green Sunsets Seen.

The green sunsets seen by the Russian explorers in the newly-discovered Polar land have been matched as near home as Chelsea. Throughout November and December, 1883, the sunsets and afterglows were of wonderful intensity and varied colors. At Chelsea especially the sun went down over the Thames amid a blaze of unearthly beauty ranging from deepest red to green, as may be seen in a series of watercolor sketches made at the time, and now preserved in the Chelsea Free Library. Sir Norman Lockyer and other astronomers attributed these winter sunsets to the volcanic dust projected by the great eruption of Krakatoa, in Java, in the previous August.

Precautions of Old Time Doctors.

It was formerly the practice among physicians to carry a cane having a hollow head, the top of which was gold, pierced with holes like a pepper box. The top contained a small amount of aromatic powder or of snuff, and on entering the house or room where a disease supposed to be infectious prevailed the doctor would strike his cane on the floor to agitate the powder and then apply it to his nose; hence all the old prints of physicians represent them with canes to their noses.

BRITISH CHANNEL TUNNEL

It is probable that in a few years the abstract idea of a railway tunnel between France and England will be realized most literally in the concrete object—reinforced with steel. Mr. Asquith has fulfilled his promise to have the question fully reconsidered, first by the war office, the admiralty and the board of trade, and finally, when their reports are presented, by the committee of imperial defence. When the project was considered on previous occasions its way was always blocked by the military advisers of the British government. They dreamed of an invading continental army coming through the tunnel, and thus reducing the great line of naval defence to impotence. But while the sea has been held the air has been conquered; there have been wonderful developments in the application of electrical power, in gunnery, and in engineering; and altogether the new circumstances have so changed the case that the old objections have lost their force.

France never objected. The British Peggoty has constantly heard from the French side the message that "Barkis is willin'." And the better acquaintance of the two during a long period of amity has led to the recognition of mutual interests in easier and more rapid means of communication. The railway companies who would build the tunnel, the French Great Northern and the English South eastern, have it all planned. It would begin at Dover, behind the castle, and end between Sangatte and Wissant, some 12 miles south of Calais, connecting with the Calais-Amiens line to Paris. Toward the middle of the channel its maximum depth would be 300 feet below the bed of the sea, with a drainage gallery underneath; and each of its two railway tubes would be 18 feet in diameter, and would here and there have connecting passages. In the chalk the work should be safe and simple.

A few timid people say that French friendship might some day turn to enmity. If it did, the tunnel under the channel would be of less use for war, and more easily closed, than the four tunnels under the Alps, in which other nations see no danger. And what could be better calculated to preserve friendship than the increase of intercommunication? The tunnel might be called a strategic work for the promotion of peace, and it would be a monument to the peace of a century that will be complete in 1915. The sooner it is made the better

No More Asthma
A Cure Discovered
That Really Does Cure

Thousands Testify to the Lasting Benefit Derived by This Marvelous Preparation

The country is simply wild over the wonderful cures of chronic asthma that are being made every day by Catarrhozone. It is a scientific surprise a perfect marvel the way it brings old chronics back to health. You will say so yourself after you have used it once say so after the very first time. Ever since people first began to have asthma, Catarrhozone is certainly the best remedy discovered.

Creighton E. Thompson, well known in Calgary, writes:—"Nothing too strong can be said for Catarrhozone. I suffered four years from asthma in a way that would beggar description. I went through everything that a man could suffer. I was told of Catarrhozone by a clerk in Findlay's drugstore and purchased a dollar package. It was worth hundreds to me in a week, and I place a priceless value on the benefit I have since derived. I strongly urge every sufferer to use Catarrhozone for Asthma, Bronchitis and Catarrh.

The one dollar package last two months; small size, 50c.; sample size, 25c.; all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Canada.

PUPLIC OPINION

THE DALHOUSIE ST. BRIDGE

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I am so glad to see that your paper to which I am a subscriber, is opposed to the expenditure of either $86,000 or $110,000 as proposed by the Council towards a bridge across the Otonabee at Dalhousie street. This bridge would only accommodate a limited number of our citizens, whilst every ratepayer would have to pay interest on debentures for the same. As you intimate, it is only a short time before the present Hunter street bridge will have to be replaced by a more extensive structure.

I would suggest that, in so important a matter, affecting, as it does, the pockets of every man in Peterborough that a public meeting or meetings be held at which, in all probability indignant protests will be raised against saddling the ratepayers of this city with the cost of an unnecessary and unwarranted addition to their taxes.

Citizen.

WHY LABOR HAS LEFT THE LIBERALS.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—Permit me to draw your attention to the following remarkable admission in Monday's Globe. The latter says editorially: "The British bye-elections indicate that if the labor party desires to destroy the Liberal Government at the next general election it will be able to do so by launching a third candidate in all urban seats where the Liberals and Unionists are evenly matched."

The answer to this piece of wonderment on the part of the chief Liberal organ is that labor has found that free trade means free trade in labor as well as in other commodities. Free trade in labor means a free labor market, with all sorts and conditions of people in China, India, Africa, South America, etc., in open and free competition with the white man at home. Free trade puts the strong in possession of the weak, body and soul. Protection, whilst not a perfect system by any means, preserves the home standard in all things. These are the two outstanding features of the two systems. That is why The Globe mourns over the attack of labor on liberalism. For the very same reason the farmer is now attacking liberalism which would sacrifice him and his work (as in England) to the rice-eating denizens of China or the naked savages of northern Brazil or central Africa. Protection looks to a perfect balance of the home market in food and manufactures with as high a standard of life as the people choose. In free trade countries the lowest grades of labor correspond precisely with their free trade rivals in the middle of the dark continent. While sometimes things go wrong, even in protected countries, the cause is not protection, but greed. The remedy is easily found and easily applied. Not so in the case of free trade.

Yours truly,

J. H. Burnham.

THE BRIDGE QUESTION

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—In looking over the columns of your esteemed journal of date, December 12th, my attention was drawn to a letter signed "We Who Know," wherein the writer takes a slap at yours humbly for being opposed to the by-law re the Construction of a bridge at Dalhousie Street, costing some $78,000.00, to connect the south end of East Ward with the South Ward. Wherein he notes the scripture text "to love thy neighbor." Let me say to my unknown friend that it is just because I love my neighbor that I am opposed to the bridge.

Let me point out for the benefit of "We Who Know" that there has been an agitation for some years going on re the building of a high level bridge at Hunter Street to avoid the dangers of the shunting to and from the mills of the Quaker Oats Co. And may the shunting ever increase to and from said mills.

As I was pointing out this agitation has been going on and will to my mind, continue till such times as said bridge is built and when built will be the main artery of communication between the East and West of our City. And, in the face of all this would it not become the height of folly for the citizens to vote the sum asked for to build a bridge, the terminus of which would be right in the midst of all the C.P.R. shunting to and from the Quaker Oats mills, the freight sheds and yards of the railway, involving as it would the provision for a swing and gates at the crossing to protect the public.

Come now and let us reason together, says common sense and see if there is not a cheaper and more feasible way of building the desired link of communication and, in doing so, let me say that I have taken the trouble to look over the map of the city showing, as it does, the course of the river, also the many points where the bridge could be built at a very much less cost than the one proposed. There is a most admirable spot for a bridge at the south end of what is known as Burnham's point, crossing over to point St. Charles, utilizing Rink street as an outlet and by opening up Crescent through to the Lake an outlet could be provided there. Then there is the alternative to building a bridge at the end of Townsend street, connecting, the new wharf and bridge in which no doubt the Government could be interested to contribute a proportion of the cost. Either of these sites could be used in conjunction with George St., which is shown on the plan of Burnham's point, running north over the C.P.R. on the high bridge now in use by the Peterborough Lumber Co., connecting (as it does with Maria Street, Ex-Lebarn and Burnham St., East City.

And now, Sir, as this letter has grown beyond my original intention and with due apology for trespassing thus far upon your patience and the columns of your paper, I will leave the subject just here. And subscribed myself, Yours truly.

W. S. Robinson.

SHE CALLED HIS BLUFF.

Wifey Puts Test on Hubby's Knowledge of English Politics.

Mrs. Dabbs fixed her husband with one of those looks which presupposes his ignorance.

"I don't suppose you realize the significance of the political situation in England," she said.

"Upon the contrary, I fully realize it," he replied, exhibiting a cockiness quite unlike him upon such occasions as this. "I may be a dead one on most subjects, but I happen to have looked this one up myself."

Mrs. Dabbs was dumfounded.

"You!" she said. "You know something about it?"

"Sure!" he replied. "I got tired of three men in every five trying to make me realize what is going on over there. I am doing a little of that now myself. I can say George Lloyd as slick as the next one, and only today I cornered a fellow who frankly admitted that he didn't realize what the refusal of the budget may mean in the end. I'll bet he won't read anything but Reviews of Reviews, Nations and Literary Digests for the next thirty nights."

"Is that where you get your information?" she asked.

"Of course," he said. "I wasn't always going to be the goat. After about ten men in one day had made me admit that I didn't realize what was occurring I decided to get wise myself, as they say on the floor of the Merchants' Exchange."

"And did you get wise?" she asked.

"You may judge for yourself," he responded. "I met two men today who were under the impression that they understood the situation perfectly, but I convinced them in a very few minutes that the real import of what impends had never occurred to them at all."

"Let's hear you say Asquith," she said.

"Asquith-h-h-h," he repeated, sibilating the "th."

She passed her hand over her forehead as one dazed.

SHE WAS NO SHIRK

And She Had No Patience With Modern Cooking Methods

Different persons have varying ideas as to what constitutes a good housekeeper. The ideas held by Mrs. Dana Goodyear were her own and firmly fixed. "I've got nothing to say against those that follow after these modern notions of cooking, like the minister's wife," she remarked one day, "but all I can state is that her ways aren't my ways and never would be."

"She's been to a city cooking school, I hear," said Mrs. Goodyear's visitor, "and does her work all the newfangled ways."

"I presume so," and Mrs. Goodyear's chin took on its firmest expression. "She was telling me yesterday how she could do a morning's baking—bread, cake, pies—and get the regular dinner, too, and only have three bowls and three or four spoons to wash when she's done aside from the dinner dishes. She told me 'twas by cooking school system she did it, planning and clearing off as she worked, and so on.

"She seemed real proud of it, but it struck me as a pretty slack way of doing kitchen work. There isn't a lazy bone in my body, if I do say it, and when I've done a Saturday's baking I'm safe to say that there's hardly a bowl left on my pantry shelves, and I've got a good hour's work before me right in my kitchen sink where anybody that comes in can see it."—Youth's Companion.

KING OF THE METALS

The Importance of Iron to the Electrical Industry

The very root of the electrical industry is iron. Without iron it is doubtful if the large generators and the mighty motors could be built, for the powerful magnets upon which these inventions depend for their power are all made of soft iron either in the form of thin plates or long wires covered with insulation.

Nearly every one is familiar with the common horseshoe magnet, which is but a piece of steel bent in the shape of a horseshoe and charged with magnetism. When a steel bar of this shape is rubbed against another magnet it is "charged" and will remain so for a long time. The magnets used in electrical machinery are of the induction type—that is, the magnetism vanishes just as soon as the current is taken away from them. If you wind a long insulated wire tightly around a soft iron core and send through this wire a weak current of electricity the core will be instantly possessed of strong magnetic qualities. This fact is the basis of all electric motors and generators. The field coils are usually made of a soft iron core wound with yards and yards of insulated wire. When the current is sent through this wire the soft iron core is turned into a powerful magnet, and this magnetic power is used to drive motors or to generate more electricity.—Electrical Bulletin.

Hopi Courtship.

When a Hopi maiden decides which of the eligible young men of the tribe she wishes to marry she goes and sits in his house and grinds corn until he is sufficiently impressed by her industry to marry her. After the ceremony, which is an elaborate one, the couple go to live in the wife's house. If she tires of her husband she can obtain a divorce by merely throwing his saddle out of the house. After marriage the house, fields and all their property except the herds belong to the wife.

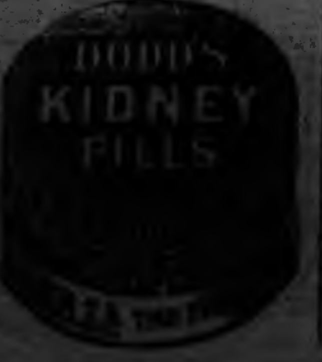
The futility of hunting criminals with bloodhounds when [illegible] of those sought lead [illegible] the modern oiled thoroughfares was demonstrated recently in [illegible], a suburb of Chicago. [illegible] recently added to the police force of two bloodhounds. Tests were made of the dogs' ability to follow trails, and all proved successful until the person making the trail took to an oiled street. The scent was immediately lost, according to the police, and the dogs were unable to pick it up again.—Popular Mechanics.

Bitter Cold.

A south side man claims that the janitor of the flat building in which he lives is the meanest janitor on earth.

"He never gives us half enough steam during the day," said the complainant, "and at night the conditions are simply awful. Why, I frequently wake up and hear my wife's teeth chattering on the bureau."—Chicago [illegible].



SLIPS IN WRITING

Curious Blunders Made by Reporters and Correspondents

Every once in awhile some schoolteacher comes forward with a list of ludicrous mistakes made in composition by her infant charges. The following laughable "breaks" were not made by school children, but by newspaper reporters and correspondents. Writing is their business, but they often make ridiculous mistakes in the haste of "catching an edition."

In a story about a mad dog scare on Staten Island the reporter wrote, "Policeman Jones drove the dog into ambush and killed it."

The head of a prominent Wall street house, in telling about the action of the directors of a certain company, was quoted as saying, "It came like a cannon ball out of a clear sky."

The report of the result of a damage suit: "Cornelius Cornell was awarded a verdict of $2,000 for injuries received by the jury from the Erie Railroad company."

This one might have been due to an error in typewriting: "The girl was afflicted with typhoid fever."

A correspondent in a small town on Long Island, evidently laboring under great excitement, wired, "Mrs. George K. Black was the heroine of the holocaust." (She played a garden hose on a burning barn.) In further describing the blaze he said, "The flames swept into furious environment."—New York World.

Ankle Bracelets.

A novel and startling fashion in women's jewelry has arrived in London from Paris. This consists in the wearing of a light anklet of plaited gold wire just above the left ankle. In some cases these "ankle bracelets" are very ornate, jewels such as turquoise, coral or mother of pearl being worked in. Gold and copper with amber beads is popular, but in all cases the ornament is light and flimsy. These queer decorations cost anything from $5 to $25.

Forgot the Book.

A lady who ordered some [illegible] coats to be sent up on "appro" on Saturday returned them on the Monday following with the message, "None were suitable." The next morning she received a courteous communication from the head of the department returning her prayer book, which had been found in the pocket of one of the coats.—Liverpool Post.

How Eggs Are Hatched in China.

There is in China a curious method of hatching eggs. First the eggs are placed in tiers in a large basket, twice the size of an ordinary barrel, which is thickly lined with hay and carefully closed from the air by a tight fitting cover of twisted straw. In three days' time the eggs are taken out and replaced in a different order, those at the surface being put in the lower tier. This is repeated every third day for a fortnight, when the eggs are removed from the basket and placed on a shelf in another room, being carefully covered with bran. In a day or two the chickens chip the shells and make their appearance into the world. The success of this method is attributed to the fact that the animal heat of the egg, being retained by the basket, which is formed of material not conducting caloric, is sufficient to support animal life and develop it.—Detroit Free Press.

Prof. Mulveney Known All Over the World

Proprietor of World's Famous Tape Worm Exterminator

Tape worm is bred from a parasite. It is of flat shape, having two, four and six suckers. It lays its eggs, which are connected together. They develop and form a body, which is the worm. Each section is an individual, having a mouth. The worm grows much longer than the bowels where it is located, and sometimes a whole colony of them are found, enough to fill a quart of solid worms, and when put in a basin of water would apparently fill it. It is the hardest task in the world to destroy this parasite, without doing injury to the individual who may be so unfortunate as to have it, as the parasite clings to the bowels, freeing itself from the body of the worm, and remains there to breed another. It is an internal demon, and causes its victim to suffer all the symptoms of disease imaginable. The ablest physicians are led to believe the patient is suffering from some other disease, as nearly every person has different symptoms. Some have been treated for cancer of the bowels, consumption of the bowels, consumption of the lungs, chronic dyspepsia, nervous prostration, melancholia, hypochondria, hysteria, inflammation of the bowels, appendicitis, and other complaints, when one or more of these worms were eating their lives away.

Prof. Mulveney has made the discovery to free the victim without injury to the system, destroying the parasite as well as expelling the worm with one dose of medicine without any previous starvation. Visit his office, where he has in his possession the most wonderful collection of these parasites which have been expelled from hundreds of people by his famous remedy, some bottles containing colonies of worms, and anyone seeing them cannot imagine how a person could possibly live with them in his bowels. It is surprising the number of people that have them. Thousands have them and are not aware of the fact. The letters and testimonials the professor has in his possession are enough to convince any of this alarming fact. Some of the most prominent symptoms are ravenous appetite, dizzy spells, headaches, cramps in the bowels, a feeling of something moving in the bowels. Segments may be in evidence at any time, and this is complete proof of the presence of tape worm. There are many other feelings of distress which take too long to enumerate. Strange to say some people of strong constitution have very little distress.

ADAM'S PEAK.

A Shrine Sacred to Three Conflicting Religious Sects.

Throughout Asia "holy places" are almost as numerous as leaves on a tree, but in Ceylon is a mountain which enjoys the unique distinction of being a very holy place to the devotees of three absolutely distinct and conflicting religious sects. This is Adam's Peak, or Samanala.

According to the Mohammedan belief, Adam, after the fall, was taken by an angel to the top of Samanala, and a panorama of all the ills that through sin should afflict mankind was spread out before him. His foot left an impression on the solid rock, and his tears formed the lake from which pilgrims still drink. The Buddhists contend that it was not Adam, but Buddha himself that made the footprint in the rock, that being the last spot where he touched the earth before ascending to heaven, while the Brahmins have still another legend. All, however, Brahmins, Mohammedans and Chinese, agree that Samanala is a very holy place, and to perform a pilgrimage to the spot is to the Buddhist what a visit to Mecca is to a Mohammedan. In mixed crowds the worshipers come, each pitying the ignorance of the other, who is so far from the "true way."

It requires no little faith and some imagination to trace in the depression in the rock the likeness of a human footprint. It is 5½ feet long by 2½ feet wide, on the top of a huge bowlder. The natives, however, insist that it is the footprint of Adam.—Emmett Campbell Hall in Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

MINIATURE GARDENS.

Tiny Lakes, Trees and Houses in Diminutive Japanese Parks.

The Japanese have the art of dwarfing trees to mere shrubs and of cultivating plants in a similar way. The people take great delight in their miniature gardens, which require a special gardener to keep them down to desired limits. A Japanese garden is generally about ten yards square, and in this small space is found a park and demesne, with lake, summer houses, temples, trees, all complete and in keeping with the dimensions available.

One such garden shows a lake four feet long and full of goldfish. On the border stands a pine tree exactly eighteen inches high and fifty years old. Beneath its shade is a temple carved out of one piece of stone the size of a brick. On a lofty crag of some two and a half feet stands a fine maple tree, perfect in form and shape, fifteen years old and twelve inches high.

One household in Japan boasts of a complete garden contained in a shallow two dozen wine case. Everything is complete down to the fish in the lake, a sheet of water only a few inches square, and the footbridges over the water course. Ten houses there are and numerous trees of various kinds, each about six inches in height. Old as the hills are these diminutive trees, but full of vitality, and yet never growing bigger.—New York Press.

THE CANNY SCOT.

As every one who has ever met him knows, Harry Lauder is a thrifty sort of a Scotchman, wise as to the values of dollars and dimes and never overlooking a good investment. Not long ago, as Lauder proudly announced to all his friends, he bought a fine old Scottish estate near Dunoon and thus became a real laird after years of saving and planning.

Every Scot hopes and dreams that he will some day be a laird, and the truest proof of Lauder's Caledonian blood is shown in the eagerness with which he bought the old estate and the pride with which he assumed his new dignities.

Harry's thrifty soul, however, was doomed to a joyous jar before he had long been a laird of Dunoon.

A day or so after he acquired the old place he summoned one of the tenants, a gray old cotter, and questioned him as to the lives and habits of the previous lairds.

"Ye wull ken, Sandy mon," said Harry, "that I wanta to follow a' the [illegible] customs o' the lairds o' Dunoon. Will ye speak to me o' these customs?"

"That I wull an' gladly," said the old fellow. "First o' a', it has been the custom o' the laird o' Dunoon to gie a grand supper to a' the lads an' lassies o' the estate. When wull it please ye to hand the first one?"

"As ye say in America," says Harry ruefully, "I waur the goat." The festival was duly held, and Mr. Lauder's tenantry say that the new laird did them well, but Harry has been careful since about inquiring as to the ancient customs.—Chicago Journal.

Christmas Announcement

WE take pleasure in once more presenting to your our Annual Announcement in connection with the Holiday Trade, and would respectfully call your attention to the fact that we have secured from the leading markets of the world an up-to-date stock of holiday goods, suitable for Christmas and New Year presents, which we are selling at a bargain. This year we are better prepared than ever to cater to the wants of the public.

In both quality and prices, we defy competition. Our expenses are comparatively insignificant as compared with the other larger stores in the city, and the fact that we have not got to look to the profits from our bookstore trade to carry us through, but have a large printing and book manufacturing business as well, in addition to our rapidly expanding newspaper business.

We have made extensive preparations for the Holiday Trade, and invite the public to call and inspect our stock and get our prices before purchasing elsewhere.

Calendars, Handy Booklets, Christmas and Text Cards

We have in Calendars, Booklets, Christmas and Text Cards a stock of the latest designs, and a very large assortment to choose from. Special discounts to parties taking a number.

Fancy Goods

In Fancy Goods, as in every other line, our stock is up-to-date. We can supply you with presents for young and old, rich and poor, wives, husbands and sweethearts. We only give a mere hint here of the articles with which our shelves are ladened:—Brush and Comb Setts, Manicure Setts, Writing Desks, Collar and Cuff Boxes, Glove and Handkerchief Boxes, Ladies' and Gentlemen's Travelling Companions, Jewel Cases, Photo Boxes, Albums, etc., etc. These goods are all new, and made in designs and of material not shown before.

Books for All

We ask an inspection of our stock and prices. We aim to give our customers the best possible value for the money. Dainty Gift Books, Padded Poems, and an endless variety of Cloth and Leather Bound Works. Also Bibles, Hymnals, Children's Illustrated Books, etc.

Games for Young and Old

Our stock in Games is very complete, including Fishpond, Flips, Game of India, Halma, The Century Ride, Lost Heir, Authors, Checkers, Dominoes, Nations, Lotto and all the popular 10 cent games.

New Souvenir Novelties and Small Wares

The following are but a few of the many very desirable articles suitable for Yuletide remembrances: Purses, Card Cases, Burnt Leather Blotters, Pen Wipers and Book Markers: Tea, Crumb, Pin and Ash Trays, Ink Wells, Bon-bon Dishes, Japanese Cups and Saucers, Bread and Butter Plates, Rose Bowls, Vases, Biscuit Jars, all kinds of bric-a-brac, etc.

For Dolls We Lead—Others Follow

We propose to lead this season in the Doll Trade, and are showing Dolls at prices that defy competition. Handsome Kid Dolls, Dressed Dolls in all sizes, Bisque and Composition Dolls, Wax and China Dolls, Rubber Dolls and Dolls that may be used for Fancy Pin Holders. Dolls from 15c up.

Please Remember

1.—That The Times Bookstore has everything marked close to cost.

2.—We can sell cheaper than any other house. The reason we can afford to do so is, because our expenses are practically nil compared with other concerns.

3.—We are large manufacturers of stationery supplies and books, employing about 40 persons, so that in these lines we have goods at first cost.

4.—We sell to the wholesale trade, who again sell to the bookstores and stationers throughout the country, so that by purchasing direct from us you save, in many cases, the profits of two "middle men."

5.—The Times Bookstore is confident that it can give you satisfaction, and would urge an early inspection of our stock before the rush begins. You only have to select what you want and have the goods put aside for delivery when required.

Soliciting the favor of your esteemed patronage, and wishing you the compliments of the season, we remain,

Very respectfully yours,

Times Bookstore

THE TIMES BUILDING, 141 HUNTER ST.

P. S.—If you have any books to bind at any time, kindly let us hear from you, and we will quote prices and show samples of our work. We make a specialty of printing Wedding, At Home and Calling Cards. A trial order is all we ask. We leave the rest to you.

CURIOUS COLOR NAMES.

There Was Once an Extensive Group of Flea Shades.

"Puce," which was for a long time the name given an exceedingly popular hue, is when translated from the French simply "flea." It appears that the accidental admission of a flea at a court festivity in France and the subsequent discovery and capture of the uninvited guest gave rise to a host of jokes and anecdotes, and so a new color was jocularly named in the insect's honor. Indeed, there was an extensive group of flea shades—old flea, young flea, flea's feet, lively flea and others. Puce, which was a kind of drab, is still familiar to the reading public through its frequent mention in literature, drama and letters of noted personages in the past.

Few of us, however, know anything of the following colors, each of which was a favorite in its day and as familiar in the speech of [illegible] ladies and gentlemen as are the cerise, [illegible], etc., of our own time. Here is a little list of them:

[illegible], drooping poppy, green of [illegible], triumph of Augustin, [illegible], bridal blush, canary's belly, [illegible], dying [illegible], [illegible], thunderbolt, [illegible], caterpillar brown, fading hope, Cinderella ruined, smoke of Vesuvius, [illegible], dissolving pearl, Cupid's feather, captain's glory, [illegible], [illegible], [illegible] of Ninon, faithful shepherd, [illegible] and [illegible].

Adulterated Tea.

Tea was commonly adulterated in England seventy-five years ago. The London Times of May 14, 1833, reports the case of a defendant charged with gambling, who stated that he earned from $1.20 to $1.44 a day by picking sloe leaves and black and white thorn leaves in the fields and selling them for a penny (2 cents) a pound to a local cow keeper. The cow keeper was visited, and it was discovered that he disposed of the leaves to tea dealers in London. As the duty on tea was then [illegible] cents, and the cheapest tea on the market brought [illegible] cents a pound, huge profits must have been realized by the fraudulent dealers.

Doctor's Opinion of Diabetes Cure

Believes No Remedy So Effective As SANOL'S ANTIDIABETES.

In the treatment of Diabetes Mellitus we distinguish between remedies for the disease itself and those for complications which may arise. Within the last few years numerous preparations, promising complete cures, have made their appearance, but none of them have been able to reduce, or even eliminate sugar, as ANTIDIABETES. This preparation is taken as effectually as SANOL'S ANTIDIABETES successfully applied in cases where sugar remains in spite of a diet free of carbo-hydrates. Experience has proven that this remedy has caused no bad effects, whatever.

The above paragraph is made up of extracts from a written statement of one of the most eminent physicians on the Continent of America. We strongly request anyone suffering from this dreaded disease to write to us for a copy of his letter. We can also send testimonials from some of the most prominent people in nearly any town in Canada who think it a privilege to be able to recommend a medicine which brings such relief to any person who has suffered like themselves.

This remedy is manufactured by the Sanol Manufacturing Company, of Winnipeg.

Price $2.00 Per Bottle.

A Machine With Fingers.

Among the exhibits at the Seattle exposition was shown a device for feeding and removing sheets to and from a platen job printing press, which may truly be termed an "uncanny machine." It consists of two arms, which possess a reaching and retracting movement resembling that of a human arm and each of which terminates in five long, crooked fingers, the grasping power of which depends upon an automatic suction force in the finger tips. The arms work alternately. One delivers the blank sheets, and the other removes them as they are printed and deposits them on a platform.—Denver News-Times.

Two Chicago Streets.

The longest city street in the United States is Western avenue, Chicago, which is exactly twenty-two miles long. Its nearest rival is Halsted street, also in Chicago, which is two-thirds of a mile shorter. Halsted street is so much more closely built up that it is usually spoken of as the longest street in the world. Interspersed with the native Americans on this one street are Germans, Italians, Russians, Jews, Bohemians, Poles and Greeks. Halsted street is crossed over and under by twenty railroads.—Boston Globe.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES.

GREAT STEAMING RADIUS.

The North Dakota Can Travel 9,000 Miles Without Recoaling.

The people of the United States recently, and it is safe to say somewhat to the surprise of a large number of them, found themselves at the top of the list in naval matters in a fresh respect. They discovered that so far as battleships are concerned they had done just what Great Britain did in commercial vessels when the two great Cunarders came out. They had captured from the world the battleship records at one sweep.

In the sister ships, the North Dakota and the Delaware, America has two unequaled war vessels. Of the two the trial trips seem to indicate that the North Dakota leads. So marked are her accomplishments in some particulars that she has been declared to be in a class by herself.

Equipped with turbine engines of American design and construction, a detail in which alone she differs from her sister ship, which is fitted with reciprocating engines, the North Dakota broke the speed record for battleships and demonstrated that she has a greater steaming radius than any other. The dispatches indicate that when steaming at 12 knots an hour she can travel 9,000 miles, or nearly three-quarters the distance from New York to San Francisco by way of the Magellan strait, without recoaling. At 20 knots an hour she can travel approximately 4,600 miles without refilling her bunkers, while she could reach the European coast when traveling at her maximum average speed of 21½ knots, a speed exceeded by only eight transatlantic liners.

This vast steaming radius is due to her modest coal consumption in proportion to the horsepower produced and made effective in the turbine engines. According to the figures given out by the builders, on her trial trip she burned less coal at the speeds of 12 and 19 knots an hour and on the maximum speed developed more horsepower and made a higher speed than did the Delaware. The fastest run over a measured mile for the North Dakota was at the rate of 22.25 knots an hour, while the Delaware's best speed was 21.98 knots. The average of five high runs for the former was 21.83 knots and for the latter 21.44. The full power trial horsepower developed was 31,400 for the North Dakota and 28,600 for the Delaware. The North Dakota's speed was slightly and unexpectedly surpassed by the smaller British battleship Vanguard of the Dreadnought type. In the course of her eight hour trial she attained a speed of 22.4 knots.

In offensive and defensive details the North Dakota and her sister ship are the superiors of any other fighting ships afloat. They carry ten twelve-inch rifles in five turrets besides fourteen five-inch rapid fire guns and a secondary battery of twelve guns of the one and three pounder types. The twelve inch guns throw projectiles weighing 870 pounds each, 340 pounds of powder being required for the purpose. With this force behind them it is estimated that the guns can throw these shells a distance of twelve miles and force them through a steel plate eleven inches thick at a distance of five miles.

The United States will not be behind in the race if other nations launch vessels the equal of the North Dakota, for the Arkansas, the Florida and the Utah, now on the ways, will be greater by 1,000 tons displacement.—New York Tribune.

Calamity Averted.

"If I remember rightly what the psalmist says about bloody and deceitful men," remarked Uncle Allen Sparks, "it's to the effect that they shall not live out the half of their days. You see from this that if old King Leopold had been a little better man he might have hoped to live to be 150 years old, and what a calamity that would have been!"—Chicago Tribune.

Frank About It.

The day after the club meeting the lady speaker and the sarcastic lady met again.

"I suppose," said the former, "that the rest of you talked about me after I left."

"Oh, no," rejoined the latter. "We tired of that subject while you were there."—[illegible] Observer.

Weak, Tired Folk Given New Vigor

STRENGTH RETURNS, HEALTH RENEWED, VITALITY OF YOUTH RE-CREATED

Exhaustion and Bodily Tiredness Every Day Being Turned into Vigor and Ambition by Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

From Chebogue Pt., N. S., comes the following from Mrs. H. A. Reynolds: "A year ago my health began to fail, I lost appetite, became nervous and sleepless. My weight ran down, I became thin, hollow-cheeked, and had black rings under my eyes. I really felt as if the charm of life had left me and when springtime arrived I was in the 'blues.' I read of Dr. Hamilton's Pills and got five boxes at once.

"Within a month my apetite and color were good. I gained strength and felt like a new woman. New life and vigor returned, and my friends scarcely knew me. A medicine that will do this should be in every home."

Good health means much to you. Success and happiness depend upon it. The maintenance and source of health is found in Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. per box, or five boxes for $1.00, at all druggists and storekeepers, or by mail from the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

St. Mary's School.

Yesterday morning His Lordship Bishop O'Brien sent a big Christmas tree to St. Mary's school. The pupils will gather round the tree and hold a concert.

An Anonymous Letter.

The Times is in receipt of a letter dealing with the civic elections, particularly in regard to Mr. Dobbin's candidature, which does not bear the signature of the writer. It therefore cannot appear in these columns.

Hotel Not Sold.

The paragraph which appeared in yesterday's Times, to the effect that Mr. Sam Long had disposed of his hotel on Hunter street, is not correct. The negotiations which were under way fell through, and the sale is now off.

Judgment Reserved.

Judgment was reserved yesterday by Judge Huycke in the Heard vs. [illegible] action, in which the plaintiff, Richard Heard of this city, seeks to recover from the defendant, [illegible], of [illegible], the sum of $[illegible].

Orangemen Meet.

A meeting of the Peterborough Orangemen was held last night in the Orange Hall, Simcoe street. There was a large attendance of members from all the Lodges of the city. The business transacted was of the usual character incidental to the season of the year.

A Triangular Bout.

There are up-to-date three candidates for the Mayoralty, as Mr. J. J. Hartley has decided to remain in the field. Mr. Hartley has given the matter serious consideration and is now out with a definite statement. The Trades and Labor Council meet tonight and may endorse Mr. Hartley as their candidate.

Receives Good News.

Mr. Geo. [illegible] received word [illegible] that his [illegible], who was injured in the [illegible] last Friday, was doing as well as could be expected. Mr. [illegible] sustained a fracture of the bone in both of his legs.

Public Are Invited.

The fine new C.P.R. freight shed at the foot of Charlotte street will be open this afternoon from 2 until 4. The public are cordially invited to be present. Much interest will be taken by those present in this, one of the most modern and well equipped plants of its kind in Canada.

Scotsman in Trouble.

At yesterday's police court, Alexander Thompson was charged with vagrancy and begging without having a certificate from a priest or clergyman. Thompson pleaded guilty and said he had been in Winnipeg for three years, coming here from Scotland. He was told to get out of the city inside of an hour.

An Undesirable.

At a meeting of the Charity Board, Relief Officer Miller reported that Mrs. Profit who was deported from here last spring, was trying through the Salvation Army to come to Canada again. He had written the S. A. in regard to the matter. The Board approved Mr. Miller's actions and instructed him to take any further action in regard to the matter to prevent her from coming to Canada.

A Public Meeting.

Owing to the many important matters of local interest directly affecting the tax-payers' pocket, that will at the first of the year be voted on, it would seem advisable that a public meeting should be held at once to discuss such matters. The subjects that would naturally come under discussion at such a meeting are of too vital an importance to be submitted to the average voter without an intelligent understanding.

A Big Local Crane.

Mr. W. St. Clair, representing the Northern Crane Works, Ltd., of Walkerville, Ont., is in the city. He is installing a huge crane at the Vermont Marble Company's works in East City. This crane will have a lifting power of 30 tons. It is being erected over the tracks to the south side of the Marble works and will be used for unloading cars.

Case to be Appealed.

Yesterday, as noted in another article in this issue, former C.P.R. special policeman was fined $1 and costs for an alleged assault on a boy. At noon a Times' representative interviewed Mr. Weller, and without commenting on the Magistrate's decision asked "You may possibly make an appeal in this case?" Mr. Weller replied, "Mr. Gordon, my counsel, has gone to Havelock, but you can bet your bottom dollar, I shall appeal against the Magistrate's decision."

Physician Heal Thyself.

A well known local man doing business on George street, was in Toronto on Monday. Not having time for a shave before leaving he called Tuesday morning at a Toronto barber shop and got a "scrape." The tonsorial artist who operated recommended a bottle of hair tonic as the local man has on his north west cerebral pole a bald spot the size of a silver dollar. The Peterborough man, looking at the barber saw that the latter's forehead, uncovered by hair, extended to the back of his neck—replied, "Physician, heal thyself."

One On the Chief.

At yesterday's police court, David Crowley, of Monaghan, a blacksmith, was charged, for the second time within two days of being under the influence of liquor. P. C. Heyward said, after the prisoner pleaded not guilty, that he saw Crowley with a man around Comers. He saw prisoner enter Bell's grocery store and saw he, the prisoner, was under the influence of drink. Crowley told him he had been home for dinner and said he had got some drink he had had over at his house. He, the prisoner, said he went into Bell's store to borrow the $10 he was fined on Monday. P. C. Reid arrested the prisoner. The witness said Crowley was arrested on Simcoe St. P. C. [illegible] said that prisoner was "under the influence" when brought to the station. The prisoner was discharged as no evidence was brought to show Crowley was on the blacklist.

County Constable Fined.

At the police court yesterday, Thos. Weller, a former C.P.R. detective, and a County Constable, was charged with assault. He, through his counsel, Mr. Gordon, pleaded not guilty. Matthew [illegible], the complainant, said he with other boys was on Albert street. He was whistling. Defendant grabbed and shook him. [illegible] Weller's [illegible], was struck in the face by a chunk of ice. The Constable was fined $1 and costs. Mr. Gordon remarked "that decision is the worst blow the authority of the local police has ever received, as is noted by the applause of the crowd in Court."

A Japanese Peculiarity.

"When a Japanese servant is rebuked or scolded," says a traveler, "he must smile like a Cheshire cat. The etiquette in such matters is very misleading at first. I often used to think that Taki, my rikisha 'boy,' meant to be impertinent when he insisted on smiling when I was angry at him. But when he told me of the death of his little child with a burst of laughter I knew that this was only one of the curious details of etiquette in this topsy turvy land."

"Why is that?" the visitor asked. "They lie down to sleep in the jungle."

J. J. HARTLEY for MAYOR

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY OF PETERBOROUGH:

Ladies and Gentlemen:—At the earnest request of a large number of the ratepayers I have consented to be a candidate for the position of Mayor for the year 1914.

Being born and having lived all my life in Peterborough, and my whole life's savings being invested in Peterborough, I naturally have a deep interest in the welfare and prosperity of the City.

Should I be elected I promise you that I will guard to the very best of my ability, the interests of the ratepayers and will oppose all unnecessary expenditure. I will do my utmost to keep down the ever increasing rate of taxation consistent with needs of a growing City.

I may say that I am in favor of Municipal Ownership, and am in favor of having all city work done by our own people instead of bringing in outsiders to do it.

I will endeavour to see that the ratepayers get value for every dollar that is expended.

I have had considerable experience in municipal matters, having served ten years in the Council and fourteen years on the Board of Education, being Chairman of that Board for two years, I was also Chairman of the Board of Health for several years, so that you will see that I am not without a fair share of experience.

Should you do me the honor to elect me as Mayor of our City I will do my best to serve you to the extent of my ability.

Yours respectfully,

CENTRE CITY ILLUMINATED BY HYDRO-ELECTRIC LAST NIGHT

Mayor Bradburn Asked for Light, Bands Played, Thousands of People Acclaimed, "and There Was Light"

To the stirring strains of two brass bands—the Maple Leaf and the Salvation Army—and the appreciative acclaims of thousands of citizens, Mayor Bradburn, figuratively speaking, touched the button which flooded Central Peterborough with Hydro-Electric light, exactly at eight o'clock last evening. The lamps are magnetite arc, and it is difficult to conceive of any electric illumination more softly brilliant than that offered by the new order of things in street lighting in this city. In fact, in so far as our business section is concerned Peterborough may now be safely characterized as the best lighted city in Canada, and the thousands of people who lined the streets last night were not stinting in expressing their pleasure that Peterborough's first experience of Hydro-Electric had exceeded their most sanguine expectations. This result has been acquired by Council's wisdom in selecting the new magnetite arc lamp, the latest achievement in electric street lighting. In very truth, George, Charlotte, Simcoe and Hunter streets, with modern illumination and street pavement (where completed) gave Peterborough for the first time in its history the appearance of an up-to-date city in so far as those streets are concerned.

The current for the lamps last night came from the Peterborough Light & Power Company, who are under contract to furnish the Hydro-Electric Commission with power for Peterborough's municipal system until such time as expropriation proceedings are concluded.

THE POWER COMMITTEE.

The Council's Power Committee, upon whom the executive responsibility for the installation of Hydro-Electric in this city rests, is composed of the following gentlemen:

Mayor W. H. Bradburn.
Ald. Johnston, Chairman.
Ald. Buller.
Ald. Gordon.
Ald. Duncan.

And the big crowd of citizens gathered on the streets last night gave them three rousing old-time cheers in demonstrative approval of their labors.

THE CEREMONY.

The City Council drove to the corner of George and Charlotte streets in three hacks, at 7.45, accompanied by Engineer Jeffrey of the Hydro-Electric Commission.

In reality there was no button to touch, but arrangements had been made for his worship to figuratively do so exactly at eight o'clock. This arrangement was [illegible] carried out as timed, and at the moment Ald. Johnston was climbing into his hack, after pointing out to one of the bands that his voice was hardly [illegible] enough to drown their very acceptable efforts.

HIS WORSHIP'S ADDRESS.

Mayor W. H. Bradburn, at 7.45, from his hack briefly expressed his pleasure at the momentous occasion which marked a new era in Peterborough's municipal history. Hydro-Electric, he said, had been before the Council for some time, and much labor and attention had been given to the scheme, which to-night is to culminate in a demonstration of what the system means to Peterborough in offering a proper and approved method of street illumination. Next year's council will have to take up the work of extending Hydro-Electric through the city generally, until the whole scheme is perfected, every portion of Peterborough properly lighted, and domestic and mercantile requirements met. In conclusion he eulogized Alderman Johnston for the satisfactory and indefatigable manner in which he had filled his office as chairman of the Power Committee. At this juncture the Mayor's exclamation of "let there be light" was followed by the juice being turned on, and Centre City shining resplendent in an illumination, which, his worship contended presented Peterborough to its citizens as the best lighted city in the Dominion.

Mayor Bradburn was here given many rounds of the heartiest of hearty cheers, rally after rally of acclaims being fired at him in the most approved manner.

ALD. JOHNSTON SPEAKS.

Ald. Johnston spoke briefly, and to the point. He was proud to be present on an occasion when there would be exemplified the grandest principle which had ever been introduced into the Dominion of Canada—Municipal ownership of public utilities. We are starting here to-night, he continued in a small way; it is the beginning of a scheme for the benefit of the masses of the people. He assured his hearers that this grand Hydro-Electric system would be extended without delay until the whole electric system in this town is controlled by public ownership, thus affecting a big saving to citizens in light and heat and power. He hoped that in the near future all power along the Trent waterway would be taken out of the hands of a monopoly and vested in the people themselves. In conclusion he stated, that the new lights would be kept burning until midnight for public criticism. He resumed his seat amid endorsive applause.

INSPECTION INVITED.

Mayor Bradburn here informed the crowd that Council would drive down to the municipal substation in the old roller rink building, George street, and invited inspection of those premises by citizens at any time.

CANADA IS TO HAVE A NEW MINING ACT

British Investors Fight Shy of Canada Because of the Lack of It.

Ottawa, Dec. 17.—Legislation to be passed at the approaching session of Parliament is almost certain to include a Dominion Mines Act. At the present time mining in all the Provinces with the exception of the three prairie Provinces is under the jurisdiction of the Provincial Governments. In these three Provinces, in the Yukon, and in the unorganized territories the Dominion Government exercises control over mining operations. The only Dominion Mining Act really in force is the Yukon Placer Act. Apart from this, mining outside the Provinces which own their own natural resources is controlled by regulations and these are subject to frequent change. As a consequence of this situation, involving as it does, lack of permanency in mining conditions, British investors and others have been disposed to fight shy of the Canadian field.

OTONABEE POWER CO'S PATRONS ARE PROTECTED

Mr. W. G. Ferguson, President of the Otonabee Power Company, was seen regarding the statement of Alderman Buller that a meeting between the Electric Power Company and the Hydro-Electric Commission was held on Tuesday to arrange for providing light and power for the Otonabee customers. Mr. Ferguson stated that no meeting regarding Otonabee matters had been held or ever contemplated as far as Electric Power officials knew. But he stated that he had yesterday been in communication with Mr. Colkille, the Vice-President of the Electric Power Company, and that a joint communication from the Otonabee Power Company and the Peterboro Light & Power Company has been placed in the hands of the Council containing a proposal that will insure continued service to the Otonabee customers until such time as the City obtained possession of the plant of the Peterborough Light & Power Company.

Mr. Ferguson further stated that the proposal was such a fair and reasonable one that he had no doubt the Council would consent to it, and the citizens using Otonabee power would therefore be caused no loss or inconvenience.

NEW C. P. R. FREIGHT SHED IS INAUGURATED IN GOOD STYLE

Last night the commodious new freight shed and admirably appointed new freight offices of the C.P.R. at the east end of Charlotte street, were the scene of a gay and festive gathering. A house warming which took the form of an assembly and dance was arranged by the C.P.R. staff. The spacious shed so used, 150 feet long by 50 wide was transformed into a ball room, gaily decorated with flags and streamers by Messrs. Turner & Sons. Specially noticeable were the British and American national flags draped together at either end of the hall.

The music was provided by the Grand Opera House Orchestra, Messrs. Hooper served refreshments in their usual excellent style. Hundreds were present and all seemed thoroughly to enjoy themselves.

The duty of receiving the guests was gracefully performed by Messrs. W. S. Dodds, local agent, J. E. Ivey, J. W. Burgess, W. E. Curry and A. E. Edwards. The floor committee were Messrs. A. E. Moore, T. U. Guerin, N. King and J. H. Wilson. Messrs. J. H. Carey, J. W. Brooks, T. Hateman, C. Taber, G. Torrance and R. Cuff officiated in the cloak room. The printing and advertising was arranged by Messrs. L. Bowes, J. Skinner and W. McGibbon.

W. J. Wren, Esq., District Superintendent C.P.R., was present during the evening. Among those who accepted complimentary tickets were Mayor Bradburn, the G.T.R. Division Superintendent and train master, Police Magistrate Dumble, Police Chief Thompson and Fire Chief Howard.

Notes.

There were about 125 couples present.

Mr. W. S. Dodds in a brief speech extended an official welcome to the guests.

The committee in charge are to be congratulated on the splendid success of the event.

The catering was under the supervision of Mr. T. H. [illegible] and was most satisfactory.

He Illustrated It.

"This sailor told me a very interesting story as he shaved me."

"Indeed."

"Yes, and also illustrated it with cuts."

THE WEATHER.

To-day—Fair and somewhat colder.

AUSTRIA ADDS TO NAVY PLANS

Triple Alliance Means Business in Mediterranean

London, Dec. 17.—As though to give point to Mr. Churchill's speech of yesterday, a Vienna despatch announces to-day the acceptance by the Common Ministerial Council of the programme of the new naval commander-in-chief.

It surprises even the Australia public to learn that the five dreadnoughts are now contemplated, instead of four as planned in the first programme.

The cost of $80,000,000 will be spread over five years. Four cruisers and a number of other units are also to be laid down for completion by the end of 1918.

GRAIN FROWERS, FRUIT MEN, TO CO-OPERATE IN SELLING

Shipments of Fruit to West Under Eye of Both Organizations May Lessens prices

Ottawa, Dec. 17.—Although rival farmers' organizations which waited on Premier Borden yesterday could not agree on the question of tariff, they did stand together on the question of co-operation and both deputation urged upon the First Minister the passing of more advanced legislation.

It is very possible that a co-operative bill will be introduced this session. However, if a general bill is not advanced, the measure of Hon. Arthur Meighen, introduced last session for the establishment of co-operative agricultural credit banks, is pretty certain to pass.

Grain Growers of the East and the fruit men of the West also discussed last night the question of closer co-operation in shipping fruit West. The Ontario co-operative association will probably sell direct to the Western co-operative grain association.

PANAMA AS THEATRICAL MECCA

New York, Dec. 17.—A number of theatrical managers are planning an invasion of Central America next spring, it is announced here, in connection with the opening of the Panama Canal. One of the most pretentious of the enterprises thus far announced is the staging of a pageant on the site of the city of Old Panama, some seven miles from the present city.

The chief idea will be to present a living picture of the history of Panama from the discovery of the country up to the time of the opening of the canal. To this end the plans call for several hundred actors and actresses from this country and the enlistment of a small army of natives to fill in minor roles.

THEATRE SOON CHANGES TONE

"Play" Which Made Light of King Censored

Montreal, Dec. 17.—The management of the Novelty Theatre, where the French piece, Baptiste on tour, which contained a caricature of King George and the Prince of Wales, was played, have agreed to eliminate the scenes in which reference is made to His Majesty and his Royal Highness and have substituted the King of Zanzibar as the monarch who entertained the Mayor of St. [illegible] his wife and daughter in his pyjamas.

GUNMEN MAKE APPEAL SIMILAR TO BECKER

Say They Were on Scene of Rosenthal Murder Merely to Talk.

Albany, N. Y. Dec. 17.—Arguments on the appeal of the four gunmen, convicted of the murder of Herman Rosenthal began to-day before the Court of Appeals.

The appeal was similar to that made in the Becker case. Reversal of judgment was asked, and the order of Judge Goff in denying a new trial was attacked. It was asserted that the presence of three of the gunmen Whitney Louis near the scene of the shooting was due solely to an arrangement they had to meet Jack Rose to discuss the arrest of Zelig, another gunman. While they were engaged in conversation, it was set forth the fatal shot was fired.

QUEBEC GOVERNMENT TO END DELIVERY LIQUOR AFTER HOURS

New Temperance Laws to be More Drastic Than at First Indicated

Quebec, Dec. 17.—Further details of the bill to amend the Liquor License Law indicate that the Government will go to greater lengths than at first stated. The proposals include:

Bars shall not open until 7.30 in the morning; shall remain closed on Dominion Day and Labor Day, and there shall be no delivery of liquor after closing hours, that is: stores, after eleven o'clock p.m. on week days and seven o'clock on Saturdays will be prohibited from delivering orders even if they were placed before closing hours.

Eliminate Telephone Orders.

Another clause provides that liquors shall not be sold c.o.d. This will, to some extent, eliminate telephone orders.

Another striking clause prohibits statements in advertisements published in periodicals of any kind, which claim that the liquor advertised is "beneficial to health or mind." The same applies to illustrations.

The Government has not, in the course of its temperance programme, forgotten to look toward its own revenues.

Pay 20 p.c. to Government.

It is provided in the transfer of club licenses that twenty per cent of the transfer price shall go to the government, and another clause provides that licence holders operating public bars shall pay 25 per cent. more than those operating under the European style of tables. This is, it said, to encourage the elimination of the bar. The government also defines what liquor is by stating that "anything with more than two and a half per cent. of spirits shall be classed as liquor."

CLAIMS P. L. & P. CO. PLANT WORTH $600,000

Great interest was taken yesterday over the adjourned hearing before His Honour Judge Huycke, of the City's application to take possession of the Peterborough Light & Power Company's plant.

Six hundred thousand dollars is the valuation set by engineering experts for the Peterborough Light & Power Co. on the plan which the city proposes to expropriate under the by-law passed some time ago.

Judge Huycke said he could not make the order for examination of the witnesses. It would make the city a laughing stock if an order were made without the required authority.

NEW RULES TO AID SHIPPING

Safety Conference Sure to Bear Results, Says Expert

London, Dec. 17.—Mr. Alexander Johnston, Deputy Minister of Marine for Canada, now attending the International Life Saving Conference here informs your representative to-day that two results will follow the deliberations, which are expected to end about the middle of January. In addition to providing better safeguards for ocean travel, commerce on the high seas will be facilitated by the establishment of uniform regulations.

Vexatious delays to ships will be avoided. These often are caused by difference between the regulations at ports of arrival and departure. Certificates of standard of a ship of one signatory nation will be accepted by all others. That will be a great boon for the delay of one day to a big ship is a serious matter.

SCHMIDT IN TROUBLE ONCE FOR FORGERY

Escaped Punishment on Father's Promise to send Him to Asylum.

New York, Dec. 17.—Mr. Alcott told the jury he would show that in 1904 Schmidt got in trouble in Germany for a foolish and profitless forgery and only escaped punishment by his father's promise to put him in an asylum. From this institution the defendant escaped and came to America.

Heinerich Schmidt, the father was the first witness for the defence. He is a prosperous appearing man of about 65 years. He described himself as railroad inspector.

The father described how at the early age of eight the prisoner exhibited marked religious possibilities. He erected an altar and kept the vestments of a priest in the room.

"He used to catch his mother's geese," said the father and cut off their heads. These he would put in his pocket and then play with the blood, imitating religious ceremonies.

CANADIAN TRADE FOR CANADIAN CHANNELS IS BORDEN'S POLICY

(Special to The Times.)

Ottawa, Dec. 17.—The building of a new Welland Ship Canal and the improvement of the French River as part of the Georgian Bay Canal scheme, were vainly urged upon the late government. It was pointed out that by the construction of these works Canadian traffic could be kept in Canada. The late government despite repeated appeals, pursued its policy of sending Canadian trade through American channels to American ports.

The Borden Government has four sections of the new Welland Canal under contract and is calling for tenders for the improvements of the French River section of the Georgian Bay Canal.

IN CANADA'S INTEREST.

The opposition press condemns the expenditure necessary for the construction of these important works. The Government is serving the best interests of Canada in the building of the Welland and Georgian Bay Canals and in the improvements of Canadian lake and ocean ports. The state of N.Y., which enjoyed for years the benefits of a large share of Canadian traffic by rail and water, is alarmed over the [illegible] of the present Government. Martin H. Glynn, Governor of New York, speaking before the National Rivers and Harbors Congress of the United States at Washington on December 8, appealed for a share of the annual harbor appropriations to be used in deepening the channels of the Hudson River.

AN AMERICAN OPINION

"Canada," he said "is going to spend $50,000,000 on the Welland Canal and is planning to spend $200,000,000 more on the Georgian Bay Ship Canal. St. John is spending $8,000,000 for a port and the city of Toronto alone is spending $15,000,000 upon its lake front to draw away from this country the freight of the Great Lakes. We can't do little on the Hudson River [illegible]

"Many engineers contend that with a deeper channel in the upper Hudson a large percentage of the freight of the Canadian border would be diverted to American ports."

BLACKWELL'S JAIL NOW UNDER PROBE

New York, Dec. 17.—An investigation into prison conditions on Blackwell's Island has been in progress for more than seven months, ever since a Supreme Court grand jury was sworn in the first Monday in May by Justice Seabury.

This grand jury has found instances of mistreatment of prisoners in the penitentiary and mismanagement along financial lines. These were announcements made today by Assistant District Attorney Joseph Du Vivier, who has been working in conjunction with the investigation.

The work of the grand jury has been conducted with the utmost secrecy, and it is only today that an inkling of the conditions found on the island was made. Indications are that several indictments may follow.

At least one instance has been found where a prisoner died after mistreatment, and it is believed that the death can be traced directly to this cruelty.

More than a dozen individual cases of this nature have already been investigated. The jurors have acted for the most part in committees, going over to the penitentiary two or three at a time. [illegible]

BEATING OF PRISONERS.

"There have been numerous instances of the beating of prisoners," said Mr. Du Vivier today, "and in some cases there has been something much worse than beating. The grand jury is going into the matter thoroughly."

The grand jury has also been investigating reports of frauds in the workshop and of general financial mismanagement. [illegible]

A FAMOUS PICTURE

Rosa Bonheur's Stirring Masterpiece, "The Horse Fair."

A PRIZE THAT FRANCE LOST.

The Artist's Native Land Permitted the Great Canvas to Find a Home in This Country—The Story of the Painting and Its Replicas.

One of the chief glories of the Metropolitan museum in New York is Rosa Bonheur's stirring masterpiece, "The Horse Fair," a picture which for its irresistible movement and living portraiture of man's most useful friend holds a unique position in the annals of art and the affections of lovers of paintings.

Few, however, are acquainted with the intimate history of that notable canvas, and fewer still are aware that there are no less than five horse fair pictures in existence. The one in New York is the original and, it will be remembered, was first the property of A. T. Stewart and then purchased for the Metropolitan by Cornelius Vanderbilt for 280,000 francs.

It was painted in Paris, the models used being the horses of the Paris Omnibus company and a few animals studied at the horse market of the French capital. It was first exhibited at the salon of 1853, but went back to the artist unsold.

A part of the further history of the famous painting is recorded by Ernest Gambart in his manuscript memoirs, which have been freely drawn upon for the "Reminiscences of Rosa Bonheur."

"After the closing of the 1853 Paris salon 'The Horse Fair' was intrusted to the Society of Artists of Ghent for exhibition in that town, where it had a great success, but whence it also came back unsold. In the spring of 1854 I expressed to Mlle. Bonheur the desire to buy it from her. At that time it was in Bordeaux, her native town.

"Her preference was that the municipality should purchase it for the city museum, and a price of 12,000 francs had been mentioned at which the town authorities might acquire it. But she said to me that if the canvas came back to her again she would let me have it. However, she would not let it go to England for less than 40,000 francs.

"I unhesitatingly accepted the bargain, and it was agreed that the picture should be mine unless sold to Bordeaux. As the picture was back in her studio again in the following year, I told Mlle. Bonheur that I wished to take it at once in order to have it in my 1855 exhibition and that I should like to have it engraved by Thomas Landseer, the celebrated engraver and brother to the painter.

"She was delighted at the idea of the picture being engraved and said to me: 'I have asked you 40,000 francs for my picture, although in France I cannot get 12,000, and I am pleased at your consenting to my terms. On the other hand, I don't mean to take undue advantage of your liberality. How can we arrange matters? Let us see. Well, the picture is very large, and it will be difficult to find a place for it in an engraver's studio. Besides, you want to exhibit it. Wouldn't it be better for me to paint you a smaller copy?'"

That suggestion she carried out and explains how the second canvas came into existence. That smaller copy was the one from which Landseer's well known steel engraving was made and is the picture which is in the British National gallery.

When she heard that it had become the property of the British nation Mlle. Bonheur decided to make a third copy, thinking the second was not good enough for the London collection; hence "The Horse Fair" No. 3. But the National gallery authorities were not able to accept the substitute, as the painting which it was designed to replace had been given to them as trustees.

Besides these three, Mlle. Bonheur executed a water color replica and a drawing based on a large photograph. Of all these, however, the picture in the Metropolitan is by far the finest work, which is only as it should be in view of the fact that the artist always found her best public in America.

This was recalled to her detriment when the rosette of the Legion of Honor was requested in her behalf. "She has ceased exhibiting at the salon," objected the president, "and sells in America everything she paints." The complete answer to that was that the French government had had the opportunity to buy "The Horse Fair," but had neglected it.—Argonaut.

An Accurate Description.

"Did you ever run into a telegraph pole?" inquired the elderly passenger.

"Yes, ma'am," said the chauffeur, slowing up the taxicab to avoid a collision with a street car. "I've bumped into telegraph poles, I reckon, two or three times."

"Brings you to a pretty sudden stop, doesn't it?"

"No, ma'am; the machine stops, all right, but I always keep on going."—Chicago Tribune.

Curious.

"I had a curious experience yesterday," said Fosdick Caraway.

"What was it?"

"A stranger came along and told me a funny story and didn't try to sell me anything."—Washington Star.

Obedience is not truly performed by the body of him whose heart is dissatisfied.—Saadi.

Helping Her Out.

"Have you a young chicken? I am rather green at cooking."

"Such being the case, madam, don't you think you'd better have an old, experienced fowl?"—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Mirth.

Harmless mirth is the best cordial against the consumption of the spirits. Wherefore jesting is not unlawful, if it trespasseth not in quantity, quality or season.—Fuller.

PURE GLYCERIN.

One of the great advantages of glycerin in its chemical employment is the fact that it neither freezes nor evaporates under any ordinary temperature. No perceptible loss by evaporation has been detected at a temperature less than 200 degrees F., but if heated intensely it decomposes with a smell that few persons find themselves able to endure. It burns with a pale flame, similar to that from alcohol, if heated to about 300 degrees and then ignited. Its nonevaporative qualities make the compound of much use as a vehicle for holding pigments and colors, as in stamping and typewriter ribbons, carbon papers and the like.

If the pure glycerin be exposed for a long time to a freezing temperature it crystallizes with the appearance of sugar candy, but these crystals being once melted it is almost an impossibility to get them again into the congealed state. If a little water be added to the glycerin no crystallization will take place, though under a sufficient degree of cold the water will separate and form crystals, while the glycerin will remain in its natural state of fluidity. If suddenly subjected to [illegible] pure glycerin will form a gummy mass which cannot be entirely liquefied or crystallized. Altogether it is quite a peculiar substance.

As George Sees the Peers.

"David Lloyd George," said the miner from Wales, "is a very witty speaker. I've heard him many a time in Carnarvon. Speaking in Welsh, he once ridiculed in Carnarvon the house of lords. He said the average peer thought so much of himself at family prayers he always made one well known passage run:

"'Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life, and I will dwell in the house of lords forever.'"—London Globe.

His Wish.

"Life is something of a game after all," said the cynical person.

"Perhaps," replied Mr. Meekton, "but I wish Henrietta wouldn't regard it as bridge, with me forever playing opposite as dummy."—Washington Star.

MacGregor's Name.

From 1603 to 1661 the name of MacGregor was proscribed in Scotland. Certain oppressed Scots of that clan took the name of a loch. These were the Docharts of the Dunblane district, who were descended from a group of the MacGregors. Fleeing from their pursuers, a party of the fugitives saved themselves by swimming the stream which issues from Loch Dochart and in gratitude for their deliverance assumed the name Dochart. Dean Ramsay tells how a lad going to Glasgow gave his name to a minister as Dochart, while his letter of introduction called him MacGregor. "I fear there is some mistake about your identity; the names don't agree," said the minister. "Weel, sir, that's the way they spell the name in our country."

CHRISTMAS APPEAL
FOR
The Hospital for Sick Children
COLLEGE ST., TORONTO

Dear Mr. Editor:—

Thanks for your kindness in allowing me the privilege of appealing at this Christmas time on behalf of the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto.

It would take more space than you can spare to tell of the good work done for the sick and deformed children of this Province. Let me, however, in a few words, tell you of the progress of the work of the Hospital.

One nurse, six little white beds, a few dollars, a few friends—this was the beginning. The beds have grown to 250, the dollars to thousands, the friends to hundreds. 1875, the first year, 44 in-patients, 67 out-patients; 1913, last year, 1,648 in-patients, 25,567 out-patients; 1875, 1 nurse; 1913, 70 nurses.

Since 1875, thirty-eight years ago, the Hospital has admitted within its walls 21,018 children as in-patients, and 159,231 as out-patients, a total of 180,249, or an average of 4,743 per year. Of the 21,018 in-patients, 15,200 were from Toronto, and 5,818 from other parts of the Province; 10,150 of the total in-patients were cured, and 1,967 were improved.

In the Orthopedic Department last year, of the 1,648 in-patients, 275 were treated for deformities, 26 hip disease, 37 Pott's disease, 2 knock-knees, 10 bow-legs, 62 club feet, 6 lateral curvature of the spine, 44 infantile paralysis, 6 wry neck, and 75 tubercular disease of knee, hip and ankle. In 1913, the Surgical Apparatus Shop manufactured 427 appliances for in-patients and out-patients, including ankle braces, spinal braces, hip splints, bow-leg splints, club-foot splints, plaster jackets, etc.

In this Department in 38 years nearly 900 boys and girls have been treated for Club Feet and 680 corrected. Half of these came from places outside of Toronto. Surely we have a fair claim for help from the people of this Province.

Will you, the reader of this letter, help to give crippled children a fair start in life?

Busy dollars are better than idle tears. The sympathy that helps is good, but the Hospital has to have the sympathy that works.

While Christmas Bells are ringing to the glory of Him "Who made the lame to walk and the blind to see," give, give, give, and help the Hospital to help God's little ones, upon whom the heavy hand of affliction has been laid.

Will you please send a dollar, or more, if you can spare it, to Douglas Davidson, the Secretary-Treasurer of the Hospital, or

J. ROSS ROBERTSON,
Chairman of the Trustees, Toronto.

A Strange Likeness.

An extraordinary resemblance has recently been discovered at the London Natural History Museum between a specimen of the huge African elephant and the pygmy shrew mouse. Sir E. Ray Lankester suggested comparison of the two, and the result has been that practically every bone, muscle, blood vessel and nerve of the giant beast has been found identically reproduced in the little animal, which is scarcely two inches in length. In the museum a stuffed mouse has been placed between the fore feet of its enormous mounted prototype for the purpose of showing the curious likeness.

The Trouble.

"So she doesn't return your affection, eh? Well, I shouldn't get mad about that. What's the use of bothering about a girl?" said Watkins.

"I don't mind her not returning my affection," said Dobleigh, "but, confound it, she won't return my diamond ring, either!"—Harper's Weekly.

Our Point of View

Don't forget the winter is the time when you most need fresh air.

British Columbia housewives are rejoicing over the arrival of 3,000 dozen eggs from China. Thus does Chinese cheap labor threaten the country's cold storage industry.

Chickens hatched in an electric incubator are said to be the best. Of course they would sell at the highest current prices.

According to The Chicago Tribune "one hundred thousand men are walking the streets of the city jobless, homeless and hungry." Of what good to them is the new U. S. tariff with its free food schedules?

• ● •

In a letter to the Toronto Globe H. J. Pettypiece proposes that every municipality have the option of issuing light wine and beer licenses only. There is sense in the proposal. It would be a measure of practical temperance.

GREAT BRITAIN'S RACE PROBLEM.

How serious is the race trouble which in Western Canada, South Africa and Australasia has arisen to plague the British government which has conferred imperial citizenship upon its Indian subjects and has an alliance with Japan, is shown by the admission of even so ripe a statesman as James Bryce that he sees no practical remedy for it. Addressing the National Liberal Club at London, he stated that each of the self-governing dominions was master in its own house, and "when the action of self-governing dominions came into opposition with what were supposed to be the interests and feeling of a branch of one of the other races inhabiting another part of the empire, and when that race thought that in the person of members of the same race it was injured or wounded, a painful dilemma arose." He could not see a satisfactory issue from it, and might only hope that in time the feeling would wear out. Meantime, while the position was so acute, it would perhaps be better for each race to stay within its own country. There is no help in this discourse for improving the situation. The East Indians like the Japanese, with their advancement in civilization, have become the more sensitive, and are rapidly developing a spirit of nationalism. Being British subjects they especially feel they have a right of entry into any British possession.

Mr. Bryce has thorough acquaintance with the United States and Canada. He understands the determined objection of our Pacific provinces to Asiatic immigration, and the insistence of British Columbia that Asiatics, even though British subjects and citizens of the Empire, shall not have free admission there. Primarily the antagonism is the same in the American republic and in the Dominion; it is based on uncompromising objection to the competition of Asiatic labor, and to the introduction of Asiatic standards of living. No persuasion or sentimentalism will affect the case. An apparently irreconcilable difference between races has arisen, which may prove much more embarrassing to the British government than imperial statesmen care to admit.

Blinding Headaches From Catarrhal Irritation Now Quickly Cured

The New Inhaler Breathing Treatment Does Away With All This Sort of Thing.

"A stuffy cold in the head, or an old-fashioned attack of Catarrh are simply ancient history to me nowadays," writes S. Nathan Smith, from Cornwall, Ont. "I used to have the worst kind of blinding headache. They were torture to me on damp days when my catarrh was bad. I would still perhaps be suffering but for the fact that I saw a friend inhaling Catarrhozone with apparent pleasure, and I got the dollar outfit in the Windsor Hotel Pharmacy in Montreal. I could scarcely believe the way Catarrhozone cleared out my head. It let me breathe easier than I had breathed for five years. Catarrhozone has cleared away every vestige of Catarrh from my system. My breath used to be rank—now it is sweet. My digestion was constantly disordered, but since the catarrh is cured I have no stomach trouble. I am a perfectly well man, and Catarrhozone did it all."

For speakers and singers and persons troubled with an irritable throat, bronchitis, asthma, catarrh or [illegible]tone, Catarrhozone is of inestimable value.

The inhaler can be carried in your pocket and may be used at any time or in any place.

Large size, guaranteed, and sufficient for 2 months' use, costs $1; smaller size, 50c.; sample size 25c.; all storekeepers and druggists or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

THE PRICE OF COAL.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I saw in your paper of yesterday a letter asking why coal is sold in Port Hope at $8 whilst $8 50 is demanded in Peterborough? Possibly the most concise and shortest reply to this conundrum is the word "coincidence." Of course, there is no combine among the local coal barons! Perish such a thought! Still that little word "coincidence" steps in. By a funny, and of course undersigned "coincidence" every time the price of coal is raised in Peterborough every dealer that advertises ON THE SAME DAY has an advertisement in the local press with exactly the same raise as advertised by his competitor. Oh, no! There is no coal combine in this city! Rats!

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I would like to ask for information concerning the $120,000 voted for expropriating the Seymour Company's plant. For this purpose already some $16,000 or $17,000 has been spent. I understand that the city has offered $95,000 for the plant. The city has taken expropriation proceedings to acquire the Company's plant. The valuators will of course have to make an estimate of the value of the company's poles, etc.

RATEPAYER.

—Reply—Our correspondent asks a question which it would be somewhat difficult to answer. Should the award of the arbitrators exceed the amount provided under the by-law, no doubt another by-law would have to be submitted to the ratepayers for their approval. Should that by-law be defeated the only other course left open that we can see would be to carry the amount over as an overdraft until legislation is provided. Should legislation be refused, and should any ratepayer decide to contest the legality of the procedure, we are advised that a very serious condition would arise. In fact, in such event, we are further advised that members of the council may be held personably liable. —Ed. Times.

Clerk.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES.

SYNOPSIS OF PROPOSED BY-LAW

—ENTITLED—

"A By-Law to authorise borrowing $78,000, by the issue of debentures, to construct a bridge over the Otonabee River from, at or near Dalhousie Street to, at or near Maria Street."

The purpose of the proposed By-law is to enable the Council to construct a bridge over the River Otonabee for vehicular and foot traffic between the Hunter Street bridge and the bridge of the Canadian Pacific Railway from, from at or near Dalhousie Street to, at or near Maria Street.

The amount required and authorised to be raised by the proposed By-law, is the sum of $78,000.

The Debentures to be issued to raise the said sum are to be payable within 20 years from the date of their issue.

The amount to be raised annually for the payment of the debt is the sum of $[illegible], of which $3,900.00 is for the interest and $[illegible] is to form a sinking fund for payment of the Debentures at their maturity.

TAKE NOTICE that the foregoing is a synopsis of a proposed By-Law of the Corporation of the City of Peterborough to be submitted to the votes of the electors at the same time and at the same places as the annual election for the Municipal Council and the Deputy Returning Officers appointed to hold the said election shall take the vote and that the third day of January, 1914, at ten o'clock in the forenoon at the City Clerk's Office in the said municipality has been fixed for the appointment of persons to attend at the polling places and at the final summing up of the votes by the Clerk and that if the assent of the electors is obtained to said proposed By-Law, it will be taken into consideration by the Municipal Council of the said Corporation at a meeting thereof to be held after the expiration of one month from the date of the first publication of this notice and that such first publication was made on the 11th day of December, 1913.

TAKE FURTHER NOTICE that a tenant who desires to vote upon said proposed By-law must deliver to the Clerk not later than the tenth day before the day appointed for taking the vote a declaration under the Canada Evidence Act, that he is a tenant whose lease extends for the time for which the debt or liability is to be created, or in which the money to be raised by the proposed By-law is payable, or for at least twenty-one years, and that he has by the lease covenanted to pay all municipal taxes in respect of the property, of which he is tenant other than local improvement rates.

S. R. ARMSTRONG,
Clerk.

ERNIE MARKS STOCK COMPANY supporting
MISS KITTIE MARKS.

Mr. Ernie Marks has chosen "The Canadian Gentleman" for his initial appearance in this city on Monday Dec. 22nd. The story of "The Canadian Gentleman" though easy of synoptical presentation, is deep and complex in its rendering, demanding intricate development of characters and environments to build a suitable foundation for the play, which leaves a lasting impression.

"The Canadian Gentleman" is a play and a story that sounds the depths of human emotions, and intense anger, hate, tenderness, compassion, pathos, and sympathy are all interwoven—one scene following another in such thrilling panorama that the audience is held spellbound from start to finish.

Mr. Ernie Marks' former appearances will be remembered for his originality, grace and ease, as well as his entirely different conception of the many roles he has portrayed. He has never been known to play any part twice alike, and easily proves himself an actor that is at home either in comedy, drama, or romance.

Mr. Marks will appear in the following repertoire during his engagement in the city:

Monday, "The Canadian Gentleman." Tuesday, "Sweet Clover," Wednesday, "Oliver Twist," Thursday Matinee. Thursday night, "Two Jolly Tramps," "Friday, "When the Shamrock Grows," Saturday matinee "Kidnapped for Revenge," Saturday night, "The Girl and the Holy Bread."

There will also be a complete change of vaudeville acts including singing, dancing, talking, and musical numbers. Seats on sale Friday 9 a.m., at box office. Special Xmas matinee "Ishmael." Prices 10c, 20c and 30c.

GILLESPIE FOR MAYOR

To the Electors of the City of Peterboro

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—

At the urgent solicitation of many of my business and personal friends, I have consented to become a candidate for the position of Mayor of your City, and respectfully solicit your votes and influence.

As in the past, I shall not make any rash promises, to gain the vote of any elector, but, if elected, my attitude on every question will be to stand firm for the best interests of our Progressive City.

Having been interested in Peterborough all my life, and one of your Aldermen for five years, I may fairly claim to be in close touch with every section and every interest of the municipality, and familiar with its needs and ambitions.

I believe that in all respects the will of the people should prevail; that a vigorous but economical administration is the best administration, and that if your Chief Magistrate is able to devote a fair proportion of his time to his civic duties, it will not be to your disadvantage if he brings with him the experience and energy he displays in the conduct of a large and successful business of his own.

If my course in the Council during the past five years has in the main met with your approval I shall esteem it an honour to have your further approval and support in the coming contest.

Yours respectfully,

G. A. GILLESPIE.

November 29th, 1913.

To the Electors of the West Ward

Ladies and Gentlemen,

At the request of a number of the ratepayers of the above Ward, I have consented to offer myself as a candidate for the Council at the approaching Municipal Elections.

If elected I will do everything in my power to promote the best interests of the city.

Yours very truly,

James B. Brown

J. J. HARTLEY for MAYOR

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY OF PETERBOROUGH:

Ladies and Gentlemen:—At the earnest request of a large number of the ratepayers I have consented to be a candidate for the position of Mayor for the year 1914.

Being born and having lived all my life in Peterborough, and my whole life's savings being invested in Peterborough, I naturally have a deep interest in the welfare and prosperity of the City.

Should I be elected I promise you that I will guard to the very best of my ability, the interests of the ratepayers and will oppose all unnecessary expenditures. I will do my utmost to keep down the ever increasing rate of taxation consistent with needs of a growing City.

I may say that I am in favor of Municipal Ownership, and am in favor of having all city work done by our own people instead of bringing in outsiders to do it.

I will endeavour to see that the ratepayers get value for every dollar that is expended.

I have had considerable experience in municipal matters, having served ten years in the Council and fourteen years on the Board of Education, being Chairman of that Board for two years, I was also Chairman of the Board of Health for several years, so that you will see that I am not without a fair share of experience.

Should you do me the honor to elect me as Mayor of your City I will do my best to serve you to the extent of my ability.

Yours respectfully,

J. J. HARTLEY

Forest Fires.

Contrary to popular belief, forest fires seldom travel more than two or three miles an hour. Even in extreme cases it is questionable whether they burn at a rate of more than six to ten miles an hour.

RUBBING UP THE ARMS.

Said to Have Excellent Results in Cases of Fainting.

When my wife faints, which is miserably often, says a writer in the London medical journal, the Lancet, I do not apply friction in the usual aimless [illegible] backward and forward, which must alternately check and accelerate the passage of the blood, [illegible] both of my [illegible] round her wrist and then pass them firmly up [illegible].

Having brought them back [illegible] to the wrist, I [illegible] up again, and when I have repeated the operation two or three times, sometimes on both arms, I have the pleasure of hearing the ejaculation, "I feel better now." When I first had recourse to this means of resuscitating my lady she exclaimed instinctively on two different occasions, without being at all aware that I had had any particular intention, "Oh, that is what I seem to want!"

From the invariable and immediate effect of this mode of friction I flatter myself that it is not unworthy the notice of the medical practitioner in the friction of cholera patients, a process which should be much oftener resorted to and more energetically persisted in than it generally is.

A Heavy Call.

The political boss of a small city drove his buckboard at top speed down the main street on the morning of an election.

"Hey, Johnnie," he yelled to his son, "[illegible] down in the Fourth ward quick! There's people down there voting as they [illegible]."—[illegible] Magazine.

Those Dear Girls.

Young Bride—I didn't accept Harry the first time he proposed. Miss Ryval—No, dear; you weren't there.—Boston Transcript.

Without the spiritual world the material world is a disheartening enigma.—Joubert.

Beauty of a Norway Fiord.

The Naero fiord is incredibly narrow and deep. Its abrupt shores lay in an abandon of color past mortal conception. Sun tipped peaks, like icebergs, rose sheer from fathomless green water, their adjacent crevices and rocky distance alike lost in a violet haze. As the way broadened the sun played lower upon the mountains, and gulls circled with a dazzling glimmer of wing as they darted from the shadow into the upper sunlight. Purple silhouettes of the western mountains lay upon the still sunny cliffs to eastward, but astern through the gateway of rock the inner fiord was already hidden under a veil of wind driven rain. Suddenly the sun burst forth, and such a wave of color engulfed us as made it seem that we were ourselves in and a part of the sunset. Then over the glorified world once more came that strange twilight which is called night. Between and beyond two peaks, the color of amethyst, a vast snowy summit reared its head, and above its dazzling whiteness hung a pale moon, the symbol of all things cold.—Caroline Thurber in Century.

Watch Jewels.

Each watch jewel is shaped to a circle and bored through the center, each boring being just a little less than the diameter of the pinion used in the factory where it is finally to be placed in the upper or lower plate of a watch. Before the jewel gets to the setter it has been put into a lathe, and by means of a minute steel point covered with diamond dust and oil the center has been enlarged to fit the steel pinion which shall be housed in it. In the hands of the setter the cylinder is put into a lathe. With a moistened finger the jewel is picked up and placed inside the cylinder as it revolves on the tip of the revolving lathe shaft. With a pointed tool the cutter presses against the revolving cylinder edge, forcing the soft metal to overlap and close upon the sapphire or ruby till it is imbedded firmly in the metal casing. Then a pressure upon a lever at the other end of the lathe brings a cutter to bear upon the metal circumference, turning it to the exact size of the jewel hole in the plate of the watch, with the hole in the center of the metal setting.—Exchange.

Christmas Announcement

WE take pleasure in once more presenting to your our Annual Announcement in connection with the Holiday Trade, and would respectfully call your attention to the fact that we have secured from the leading markets of the world an up-to-date stock of holiday goods, suitable for Christmas and New Year presents, which we are selling at a bargain. This year we are better prepared than ever to cater to the wants of the public.

In both quality and prices, we defy competition. Our expenses are comparatively insignificant as compared with the other larger stores in the city, and the fact that we have not got to look to the profits from our bookstore trade to carry us through, but have a large printing and book manufacturing business as well, in addition to our rapidly expanding newspaper business.

We have made expensive preparations for the Holiday Trade, and invite the public to call and inspect our stock and get our prices before purchasing elsewhere.

Calendars, Handy Booklets, Christmas and Text Cards

We have in Calendars, Booklets, Christmas and Text Cards a stock of the latest designs, and a very large assortment to choose from. Special discounts to parties taking a number.

Fancy Goods

In Fancy Goods, as in every other line, our stock is up-to-date. We can supply you with presents for young and old, rich and poor, wives, husbands and sweethearts. We only give a mere hint here of the articles with which our shelves are ladened:—Brush and Comb Setts, Manicure Setts, Writing Desks, Collar and Cuff Boxes, Glove and Handkerchief Boxes, Ladies' and Gentlemen's Travelling Companions, Jewel Cases, Photo Boxes, Albums, etc., etc. These goods are all new, and made in designs and of material not shown before.

Books for All

We ask an inspection of our stock and prices. We aim to give our customers the best possible value for the money. Dainty Gift Books, Padded Poems, and an endless variety of Cloth and Leather Bound Works. Also Bibles, Hymnals, Children's Illustrated Books, etc.

Games for Young and Old

Our stock in Games is very complete, including Fishpond, Flips, Game of India, Halma, The Century Ride, Lost Heir, Authors, Checkers, Dominoes, Nations, Lotto and all the popular 10 cent games.

New Souvenir Novelties and Small Wares

The following are but a few of the many very desirable articles suitable for Yuletide remembrances: Purses, Card Cases, Burnt Leather Blotters, Pen Wipers and Book Markers: Tea, Crumb, Pin and Ash Trays, Ink Wells, Bon-bon Dishes, Japanese Cups and Saucers, Bread and Butter Plates, Rose Bowls, Vases, Biscuit Jars, all kinds of bric-a-brac, etc.

For Dolls We Lead—Others Follow

We propose to lead this season in the Doll Trade, and are showing Dolls at prices that defy competition. Handsome Kid Dolls, Dressed Dolls in all sizes, Bisque and Composition Dolls, Wax and China Dolls, Rubber Dolls and Dolls that may be used for Fancy Pin Holders. Dolls from 15c up.

Please Remember

1.—That The Times Bookstore has everything marked close to cost.

2.—We can sell cheaper than any other house. The reason we can afford to do so is, because our expenses are practically nil compared with other concerns.

3.—We are large manufacturers of stationery supplies and books, employing about 60 persons, so that in these lines we have goods at first cost.

4.—We sell to the wholesale trade, who again sell to the bookstores and stationers throughout the country, so that by purchasing direct from us you save, in many cases, the profits of two "middle men."

5.—The Times Bookstore is confident that it can give you satisfaction, and would urge an early inspection of our stock before the rush begins. You only have to select what you want and have the goods put aside for delivery when required.

Soliciting the favor of your esteemed patronage, and wishing you the compliments of the season, we remain,

Very respectfully yours,

Times Bookstore

THE TIMES BUILDING, 141 HUNTER ST.

P. S.—If you have any books to bind at any time, kindly let us hear from you, and we will quote prices and show samples of our work. We make a specialty of printing Wedding, At Home and Calling Cards. A trial order is all we ask. We leave the rest to you.

Choose an Wit.

There are witty sayings which carry a concealed suspicion of ridicule, of which sort is that of the Sicilian who, when a friend of his made lamentation to him saying that his wife had hanged herself upon a fig tree, said, "I beseech you give me some shoots of that tree that I may plant them." Of the same sort is what Crassus said to a certain bad orator who, while he imagined that by [illegible] at the close of a speech, asked our [illegible] [illegible] "Very great pity," replied Crassus, "for I believe that there is no one here so hard [illegible] your speech seemed [illegible]."—Cicero's Oratory.

The Hangman's Stone.

There is a large bowlder lying in a field near Foremark, England, which is known throughout Derbyshire as the "hangman's stone." The exposed portion of the bowlder rises about six feet above the surface of the surrounding field and has a narrow notch or indentation running across the top. The mark, so tradition says, was made in this way: A sheep thief in the dead of night, while leaning against the bowlder to rest, placed his booty above on the flat surface of the stone. The poor had the sheep tied with a rope, and by its efforts to escape the creature slipped on the opposite side, and the rope, catching under the thief's chin, choked him to death. The indentation in the stone was made by the friction of the rope while the dying man was engaged in an effort to extricate himself.

A Good Loser.

Arthur's, Almack's, Boodle's and White's were the chief clubs of the young men of fashion. [illegible] play at all [illegible] and brought [illegible] the country [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]—From Thackeray's "The Four Georges."

The Poster.

The poster may be said to date from 1836, when a design by Lalance was used in France to advertise a book, "Comment Meurent les Femmes." His example was very quickly followed, most of the early designs being printed in black on white or tinted paper. The color poster began about 1850 and attained to the dignity of a high art with Jules Cheret, "the Watteau of the pictured placard." The first English theatrical placard to attract widespread attention was one of Fred Walker's advertising a dramatic version of "The Woman In White."—London Chronicle.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS.

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at the office of any Local Agent of Dominion Lands (not sub-agent), on certain conditions.

Duties.—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required in every case, except when residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside of his homestead. Price $3 per acre. Duties—Six months residence in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and 50 acres extra cultivation. The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land after report by Homestead Inspector on application for patent.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy of the Minister of the Interior.

Doctor's Opinion of Diabetes Cure

Believes No Remedy So Effective As SANOL'S ANTIDIABETES.

In the treatment of Diabetes Mellitus we distinguish between remedies for the disease itself, and those for complications which may arise. Within the last few years numerous preparations, promising complete cures, have made their appearance, but none of these have been able to reduce, or even eliminate sugar, except ANTIDIABETES. This [illegible] is done so effectually by SANOL'S ANTIDIABETES [illegible] applied in cases where sugar remains in spite of a diet free of carbo-hydrates. Experience has proven that this remedy has caused no bad effects whatever.

The above paragraph is made up of extracts from a written statement of one of the most eminent physicians on the Continent of America. We strongly request anyone suffering from this dreaded disease to write to us for a copy of his letter. We also have testimonials from some of the most prominent people in nearly every town in Canada who think it a privilege to be able to recommend a medicine which brings such relief to any person who has suffered like themselves.

This remedy is manufactured by the Sanol Manufacturing Company, of Winnipeg.

Price $2.00 Per Bottle.

A Lesson In Picking Up Things in the Streets of Berlin.

Take care how you pick up a thing that is lost in Berlin. The other day one of our deputies going through the Prussian capital on his return from a convention at Frankfort noticed a key at the edge of the sidewalk. He picked it up to hand it to a police agent. The representative of the city police refused to take it, saying, "You should take this key to the special bureau of things that are lost."

"Very well. Where is it?"

The agent named the street.

"Is it far from here?"

The deputy replaced the key on the pavement. "Some one else will pick it up," he said.

"Not at all," said the agent in a commanding tone. "You should have left it where it was, but now you are obliged to go to the bureau. If you don't I'll make a complaint against you and you'll be fined, perhaps given a day in prison. That's the law."

The deputy was compelled to obey orders. Since that day he carries his hand in his pockets.—Cri de Paris.

A MERCENARY MARRIAGE.

One of the mercenary marriages which turned out happily was that of the second Duke of Richmond. He was married to Lady Sarah Cadogan as part of an agreement that her father's gambling debts should be canceled, Lord March (as he then was) being eighteen and the bride thirteen. Immediately after the wedding Lord March's tutor took him off to the continent for the grand tour, and Lady Sarah went back to her nursery. This is the sequel as told by Lady Russell in "The Rose Goddess:"

"Three years elapsed. Lord March returned from his travels, but, having such an uninteresting recollection of his bride, was in no hurry to claim her and went the first evening of his return to London to the opera. There he noticed that all eyes—and lorgnettes—were directed to one box, where, surrounded by several persons, sat a most beautiful young creature. Turning to a man beside him, he asked who she was. 'You must be a stranger in London,' was the answer, 'not to know the reigning toast of the town, the beautiful Lady March!' Lord March lost no time in going to the box and introducing himself to his bride, with whom he ever after lived so affectionately that their devotion to one another became proverbial."

Cruelty to Women.

We wonder what death the man will die or what tortured life he will be doomed to lead who discovered the little "trick" by which a woman's age can be ascertained beyond a doubt—that is to say, while her health is normal. The only instrument required is an ordinary watch. The wrist of the lady whose age is in question is the telltale, for when you count her pulse and it registers sixty-nine beats per minute you know that she is between twenty and twenty-five years old. During the next five years seventy-one beats go to the minute, and the "femme de trente ans" and over is entitled to seventy three. It is a pity the man of science who established these facts is not more exact when dealing with the women of riper age, for, according to rumor and tradition, it is only after she is thirty that a woman begins to leave off having birthdays.—Westminster Gazette.

Dropping Coaches on the Run.

The ingenious means by which one of the great railroad systems of England drops passenger coaches off at intermediate stations without stopping the locomotive, even for a fraction of a second, in its speed of sixty or more miles an hour is called the "slip coach" system and is described in Popular Mechanics. It is a system never tried in America and consists in dropping, or "slipping," one or more of the rear coaches just before the station is reached. Undoubtedly many American tourists in England after alighting at their destination have been amazed to discover that the coach which they occupied was still beside them, while the locomotive and the remainder of the train were nowhere to be seen.

Salmon Rounded Up by Seals.

While sitting on the shore of Inverness firth one day a correspondent observed about half a dozen seals, each a short distance from the other, moving in a kind of semicircle toward a small bay. Curiosity made him follow their movements to the beach slowly [illegible] for the [illegible]. Each kept his place well, though occasionally disappearing and reappearing. To his great surprise, he saw that a shoal of salmon were being herded toward the shore, where there was little chance of escape and where they ultimately fell victims to the seals. What struck the correspondent most was the intelligent way in which the salmon were chased into the bay, reminding him of the manner in which a collie dog brings sheep to a fold.—Scotsman.

New Metals.

Modern research has brought to our industries at a marvelous rate not only new compounds, but even new elements. Of the fifty metallic elements now known only seven were in use 1,000 years ago, and until 100 years ago, the rate of addition was less than one metal for each two centuries. Within the last twenty-five years about fourteen metals have been added to commercial use, an addition at more than one hundredfold the previous rate.

Underrating Him.

"My dear boy, I happen to know you mortgaged your house and lot in order to buy that motorcar. How are you managing to keep it in repair?"

"No trouble about that. I give an occasional mortgage on some bits of personal property. From the way you talk, Uncle Henry, one would think I hadn't any business capacity at all."

SETTLED OUT OF COURT.

In telling of his boyhood home in Denmark, "The Old Town," Jacob A. Riis says that he does not remember that there were at any time more than two lawyers in the place. One was good, the other bad—not a bad lawyer perhaps, but reputed to be tricky, whereas the other was known to be honest himself.

It is therefore perhaps the best character I can give my people when I record the fact, writes Mr. Riis, that when two farmers quarreled, each sure that he was right, they made haste to hitch up to get first to the honest lawyer, and usually that was the end of the quarrel, for the last in the race was willing to make peace.

They used to tell of two well to do neighbors who had fallen out over a line fence and started simultaneously for town. Both had good horses, and they were well matched in the race. For half an hour they drove silently alongside, each on his own side of the road, grimly urging on their horses, but neither gaining a [illegible]. At last as the lights of the town came into sight, for it was evening, a [illegible] broke on one of the wagons, and the [illegible] stopped. The other [illegible] away in a cloud of dust.

"Hans," the beaten one called after him, and he halted and looked back, "are you going after the lawyer [illegible]?"

"I am that," came back.

"Then let's go back. I'm beat." And back home they went and made it up.

Women's Ailments Caused by Neglect

Proper Treatment Will Quickly Bring Back Robust Health and Good Spirits.

Women are on the whole more sickly than men. One reason is that their system is more complicated; another and more important reason is they put off measures of relief too long. At the beginning, constipation is the cause of nine-tenths of woman's ailments. The blood becomes weakened and polluted — the nerves suffer and a run-down condition takes root.

Because of their remedies of action as a system regulator, no medicine for women can compare with Dr. Hamilton's Pills. The kidneys quickly respond to the remedial action of Dr. Hamilton's Pills and the result is as you would expect—pain in the back and side, shortness of breath and bad color disappear—the functions of the body then operate naturally, congestion and pain are prevented and perfect health returns.

Thousands of happy women say Dr. Hamilton's Pills are the greatest and best blood-purifier, the finest complexion renewer, the most certain regulating medicine known. Sold by all druggists and storekeepers, 25c. per box, five for $1.00, postpaid. The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

CITY AND DISTRICT

DASHES HERE AND THERE BY TIMES' REPORTERS

Lost the Hat.

Some time ago, Ald. Gordon bet the Mayor a new hat that Christmas would not see any street paving in Peterborough. Ald. Gordon has paid the bet.

Was No Earthquake.

Those who felt the earth tremble last night about 9.30 will be pleased to learn that it was not due to an earthquake. It was only Chief Thompson and Chief Howard stepping off the lancers at the big C.P.R. ball.

Social at St. George's Church.

A well attended and enjoyable social was held last night in the basement below St. George's church, in Braidwood avenue. A pleasant evening was spent. The efforts put forth in the late Bazaar have evidently not exhausted the enthusiasm either of Rev. Mr. Price or his flock.

Park St. Traffic Clear.

Yesterday at 10 o'clock a.m., through traffic was resumed on the Jackson Park car across the bridge recently reconstructed on Park street where Mr. Lytle the contractor has certainly made a good job. There will now be a great saving in a somewhat delayed car service.

Dairymen Meet.

The annual District Dairy meeting of the Eastern Ontario District Dairy Association for the County of Peterborough, was held on Tuesday afternoon in the Town Hall at Norwood. Mr. G. A. Gillespie, of this city, Director for the District, occupied the chair.

He Stayed From Home.

At yesterday's police court Thomas Hoyland was charged with having been drunk. He pleaded guilty. The chief remarked "I have been asked by [illegible] to put [illegible] who [illegible] on the blacklist." Hoyland was fined $2 and blacklisted.

Sues for Damages.

Lindsay Post: Action was entered yesterday by John Kelly of Norwood for $20,000 damages for the death of his wife, who was killed in the collapse of the Turnbull store at Peterborough on August 28. Negligence on the part of Frederick Hight, proprietor, W. J. Johnson, contractor, and John E. Belcher, the architect, is alleged.

Killenbeck at Kingston

Yesterday morning the young man Killenbeck, sentenced a few days ago by Magistrate Dumble to three years in Kingston penitentiary for robbing W. Ireland, a lumber cook of $14, was taken by Detective Newhall to the Limestone City. By good conduct he may be released in about thirty months.

Mr. Laplante's Appeal Dismissed.

His Honour Judge Huycke has dismissed the appeal of Mr. N. T. Laplante. The latter appealed against the decision of the Court of Revision, which confirmed the assessment on properties situated at the corner of George and Lock streets, and a small piece of land east of Lock St. A boathouse has been erected on the latter. This is the first year it has been assessed.

A Boy is Warned.

A young man, under 21 years of age, who had got drunk, was given some good advice by the magistrate. He said, in part, "You look intelligent and as though you had the markings of a good man in you. Do you want to wind up like Hoyland, (who was in the dock with him and a resident at the Home) and be a pauper? Stop the drink and become a decent citizen." The defendant was let go.

Dr. Young in the City.

Dr. Young, formerly of this city, but now practising at Saskatoon, Sask., returned home yesterday for a month's visit. In reply to a question put by The Times as to financial conditions in the far West, the genial doctor said "Things are very quiet. The real estate boom has been over done. However, things will soon adjust themselves. The West has a wonderful future."

Farmers' Banquet.

Word has been received in Peterborough to the effect that the speakers representing the farmers' organizations of the West who will address the farmers' banquet to be held in the Oriental Hotel, Peterborough, next Saturday afternoon at 1 o'clock will be T. A. Crerar, president of the Grain Growers' Grain Co., Winnipeg, Thos. Henders, president of the Manitoba Grain Growers' Association, and G. F. Chipman, editor of the Grain Growers' Guide, Winnipeg.

North Monaghan Council.

At the last meeting of North Monaghan Council, a very largely signed petition was received from Mr. L. Mannicole, as follows: We, the petitioners and ratepayers of this township ask your honourable body to notify the Radial Railway Company to extend their line from the present terminal at Romaine street and the C.P.R. crossing along Monaghan road to the Otonabee River in accordance with the franchise granted to the company in Nov. 1911. Moved by Mr. Forster, seconded by Mr. Dobbin that the clerk be authorized to notify the company to extend their lines on Monaghan road south, in accordance with the franchise given to the company.

Beavers at Bobcaygeon.

Mr. Spence, one of the Trent Canal engineers has returned from a business trip to Bobcaygeon. In conversation with The Times yesterday, Mr. Spence remarked that beavers are trying to build a dam at the mouth of the Bobcaygeon river where it enters Pigeon Lake. Early last November he noticed that a big tree standing by the river edge was cut at the base partly through. He thought some child with a blunt axe or hatchet had hacked the trunk. A few days ago a friend of his in that village asked, "Spence, have you seen any traces of beavers in the river?" Mr. Spence quietly slipped down to the scene where he had witnessed the aforementioned attack on the tree. The tree had been completely felled. Others in the same spot also lay in the river. Their limbs were as neatly cut off as though a man armed with an axe had been busy.

WEDDING BELLS.

Johnson—Stewart.

A pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Ramsay, 183 Rubidge street on Tuesday afternoon, when Herbert Charles Johnson, of this city, was united in marriage to Miss Lillie Stewart, late of Glasgow.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. H. J. Keith, of Knox Presbyterian church, in the presence of a number of guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnson left on the 4.33 train for Toronto and on their return will reside with the groom's mother on Elm street.

Mr. Johnson is a member of the Peterborough Fire Brigade.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Andrews, of Havelock, were in the city yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Conroy have arrived here from the West.

Lindsay has decided to maintain public toboggan slides. A good move.

Mrs. R. E. Shera, George street, will not receive again until the 3rd Thursday of the New Year.

The new magnetite lamps were given a "work out" yesterday morning.

The Oriental Hotel is to have a new hardwood floor placed in the dining room.

Mrs. H. R. Pearce, Margaret Pearce and Mrs. Mullay, of Marmora, were guests at the Oriental Hotel yesterday.

Mr. Wm. Buller and J. H. Burnham, M.P., were at the great ball at the freight sheds last night.

The architect who will be in charge of the extensive alterations to be made in the National Hotel, will arrive here in a day or two and will spend a month here.

Yesterday afternoon and evening the fine new C.P.R. freight shed was crowded with our citizens who enjoyed the reception and subsequent ball.

Lindsay is putting more magnetite lamps on Kent street. The city fathers have determined that any stranger who may be lost whilst crossing that thoroughfare will be unable to claim damages for insufficient lighting.

DADDY HAS A SWEETHEART

AND MOTHER IS HER NAME.

A new song, different from the breezy, [illegible] that unfortunately floods this country, was recently issued by Jos. W. Stern & Co., New York, bearing the dainty title "Daddy Has A Sweetheart and Mother Is Her Name."

Although a popular song it differs from the present day acceptance of that term, inasmuch as its success does not depend upon vulgar suggestiveness, but simply upon clean wholesome sentiment. One lady, who heard [illegible] Lillian Lorraine [illegible] sing it at one of New York's [illegible] vaudeville theatres remarked, "It [illegible] song one need be [illegible] of which one need not be ashamed to take a copy home."

The lyric does not consist of mere words, but is a song possessing real charm and poetic [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the tender chords of man's heart [illegible] [illegible] [illegible].

The music, which suits well with the lyric, is one which once heard is not easily forgotten. [illegible] [illegible] "It is not a 'love' song [illegible] [illegible] song written in a [illegible] way, that will be sung today, tomorrow and forever."

SASKATCHEWAN HAS TROUBLE IN FIXING TEMPERANCE VOTE

Liquor Men Ask Sixty Thousand Say "Abolish the Bar"—Antis Say Thirty; Government Fifty

Regina, Dec. 18.—Terms of the Saskatchewan prohibition plebiscite are not yet in a form which the Government considers good policy to announce.

Licensed victuallers demand that the minimum affirmative vote necessary for the passage of the bill to provide for the abolition of the bar should be not less than 60,000; and that compensation for license-holders be made in the event of the bill passing or that a period of several years be allowed to elapse before bringing the bill into effect.

Anti-liquor men say that if the minimum affirmative vote is placed at 30,000 they would agree to poll a ten per cent. larger vote than the supporters of the liquor interests.

Government Suggests 50,000.

Their alternative proposition at first was to secure a bare majority on a minimum affirmative vote of forty thousand.

The Government has suggested 50,000 as the minimum vote necessary to carry the bill.

Power of proclamation to prohibit importation of liquor into the outlying parts of the northern hinterland will be vested in the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council under the terms of an amendment to the Liquor License Act carried in Committee.

Officials Must Decide.

Restriction will not apply to the north country as a whole, but it will be left to the discretion of the Government, whenever prohibition is considered necessary in the interests of the community, to issue proclamation defining the exact limits within which the new clause shall be operative.

CROSS PETITION IN SOUTH BRUCE

To Be Filed for Mr. Truax at Osgoode Hall To-morrow.

Toronto, Dec. 18.—The South Bruce bye-election cross petition will be filed at Osgoode Hall to-morrow, by Mr. A. H. Beaton on behalf of Mr. R. L. Truax, the member-elect, who signed it last night. It consists mainly of personal charges against Mr. n. D. Cargill, the defeated candidate, and alleges all of the 57 violations of corrupt election practices. As Mr. Cargill's petition to unseat Mr. Truax was only served on the 9th inst., it is not necessary to file the cross petition until 24th inst. to be within the time limit, but Mr. Beaton stated to-day that it was quite ready to go in to-morrow.

Ottawa, Dec. 18.—There is talk of a saw off of the protests in South Bruce and Chateauguay. The Liberals, it is said are particularly anxious, but it is a question whether the Conservatives will agree. The Conservatives claim that they have heaps of evidence in South Bruce to unseat R. E. Truax, while their counter protest in Chateauguay they say will involve some Liberals "higher up."

The presence of several Western Ontario politicians including Senator Donnelly of South Bruce, George Clare, M.P., and W. W. Reichel, M. P., is probably responsible for the story to-day.

NEW AND VIRGIN FISHING AREA HAS NOW BEEN DISCOVERED

Salmon Catch of Hudson Strait May Rival That of British Columbia

Ottawa, Dec. 18.—A new and virgin fishing area, rich in the possibilities not only of the millions it may represent, but also of the employment it will afford the native population of the surrounding country, has been found in the waters of the Hudson Straits, according to a report which has been made to the Marine and Fisheries Department by Dominion Fishery Officer Thomas Turner. Its salmon catch particularly may yet rival that of British Columbia.

[illegible] the waters of Hudson Strait, so far as fisheries are concerned, may be regarded as virgin [illegible] and though no thorough investigation of these resources has yet been made, the result of my [illegible] show that there are [illegible] of valuable fish which [illegible] great market value [illegible] development. The two [illegible] are the sparse population and [illegible] of fishermen, [illegible] the short season, which [illegible] all of the work being [illegible] a short time. These [illegible] can easily be overcome," said Mr. Turner, and he [illegible] by citing the case of British Columbia, which in spite of a former limited population and short season, could now boast of a total catch of salmon of over $10,000,000.

Plenty of Codfish.

"From a commercial standpoint," he observes, "the cod is the most important fish, and there is no regular cod fishing being carried on. There is no limit to the quantity of codfish, a few loads of which are procured by Newfoundland vessels which come up every year. The weather is perfect for fishing, but not so favorable for drying them on the spot. The catches, however, can be salted and taken home to the curing places, just as is the practice of the Labrador fleet. As this is deep sea fishing, no doubt a bounty could be authorized during the first few years when the industry is in the first stages of its development. The sum of $150,000 per annum is available."

A VERY PLEASANT EVENING WAS SPENT

A meeting of the workers and officers at the Bazaar, was held at St. George's church in the school room. Nearly all the booth holders and friends who assisted at the Bazaar were present, and the evening was spent in a jolly manner, with songs, recitations and addresses.

As usual on these occasions, Miss Quartermaine, Mr. Ward, and Mr. O'Flynn and others assisted in the programme, and Mr. Dickenson acted as accompanist.

To the great delight of the hard-working members of St. George's church and their friends, who were present, Ald. Gordon, Ald. [illegible] one of the candidates for Mayor, Ald. Robert Hicks, one of the candidates for Water Commissioner, and J. C. Turner, Jr., one of the members of the Board of Education, were present and gave addresses, which appeared to be [illegible] and [illegible].

Mr. Price and his committee deserve great credit for the [illegible] they had at the Bazaar, and [illegible] stated last session that the debt of the church had been wiped out, and all other liabilities of the organization had been satisfied.

It might be mentioned [illegible] of the building of the church of the South End, that when ex-Ald. J. T. Turner mentioned that the day might not be far off when the South End and the city would join hands, there was loud applause.

NATIONS CANNOT AID JEWS IN ROUMANIA

Vienna, Dec. 18.—Count Von Berchtold, Austro-Hungarian Minister of Foreign Affairs, replying to-day in the Hungarian Reichsrath to the suggestion that the powers who were parties to the Berlin Treaty take joint action to secure equality of treatment for the Jews in Roumania, said he did not believe the powers could be induced to take such action. Austria-Hungary's interest in the matter, he added, would not justify her in taking the initiative, and he doubted whether raising the question internationally would benefit the Jews in Roumania, the Government of which held that the question was a strictly domestic affair.

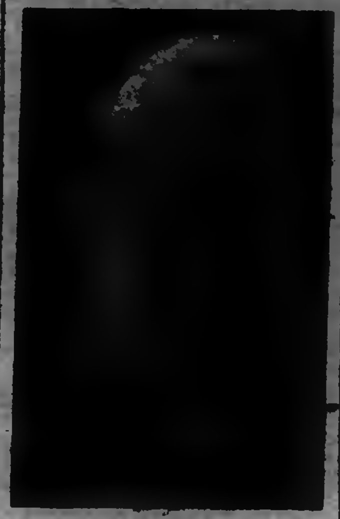
It is understood the association would do everything it could to encourage such a visit if the Canadian amateur club would give complete assurances that the members of its team were all affiliated with the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada.

HEADACHES TOO MUCH SO DIES

Aurora, Ill., Dec. 18.—Joseph Nolan, editor and owner of the Shabbona Chieftain, of Shabbona, Ill., was found hanging in a rear room of his printing plant to-day by his 16-year-old daughter, Blanche. Nolan was accidentally shot in the head by his son Harold, 10 years old, early in the summer of 1910 and hovered between life and death for months. Since leaving the hospital he has suffered terrible headaches. He was 45 years old.



TO THE ELECTORS OF PETERBOROUGH:

Ladies and Gentlemen:—

Last year a large number of ratepayers requested me to be a candidate for Water Commissioner in opposition to Mr. Moore. I not only declined to be a candidate but did what I could to prevent opposition. The Commissioners at that time had law suits on with the contractors where about thirty thousand dollars of the people's money was at stake. Mr. Moore being a lawyer I considered he should be the best posted man on the Commission to fight the contractors and in the interest of the City it would be a mistake to remove him.

This year I have again been waited upon by a large representation of the ratepayers who believe that with my thorough knowledge of all the waters in this district and my many years experience as alderman I should be a capable man for the position. I have consented to be a candidate and my past record in the Council I think is proof that if elected will give you faithful and honest service.

The taking over of the Hydro-Electric system will require great deal of time—more than any man who has a large business to attend to can spare. Not being in business I can give all the time required, and if necessary will make a personal inspection of every house in the city and see that rich and poor are treated alike.

I can see no reason, with the large body of ready pure water of the Otonabee River there should be any shortage of water for either household or lawn service, or why there should not be a reduction in the water rates. A good supply of good water is a necessity in every house and should be available for the people at a low rate.

To the ratepayers who are now residents of the City and not personally acquainted with me, would say that for a number of years I occupied the position of alderman, and always stood at the head of the poll both as a representative of No. 3 Ward and also after the Ward system was abolished.

General street railway extension and cheap transportation like cheap light and water, should be the goal of our municipal government. When a worker can have his home and garden anywhere, and is not tied to a locality his prospects are greatly improved.

Trusting that the ratepayers who want good service in the future as I have given the past will give me their hearty support.

I am, yours very truly,
J. B. McWILLIAMS

NEW RULE OF CATHOLIC CHURCH TO RESTRICT MIXED MARRIAGES

Protestants Who Believe in Divorce Under Any Circumstances Cannot Wed Roman Catholics

New York, Dec. 18.—A strong intimation that the Roman Catholic Church is soon to lay down a new rule which will greatly restrict the number of marriages of its members and Protestants came to-day from the Rev. Jos. McMahon, pastor of the Church of Our Lady of Lourdes. Dr. McMahon's public utterances are usually authorized by Cardinal Farley. He was reviewing the Gould-Castellane marriage annulment case this afternoon in the Catholic Library Association lecture course at Delmonico's. He defended the authorities at Rome against criticism of their handling of the case and then said:

"Rome already has sent to all bishops a questionnaire as to mixed marriages. I have no doubt that before long such marriages will be made difficult, for the parties to the proposed contract will have to say whether or not they believe in the dissolubility of marriage."

In other words according to the inference drawn from Father McMahon's words by his audience, Protestants are to be asked whether or not they believe in divorce under any circumstances, and if they do there can be no union with Catholics.

GIRL GIVES HER FIANCE HER CASH HE DISAPPEARS

Paterson, Dec. 17.—Believing the man was about to marry her, Annie Trosso, a Polish girl, of Garfield, gave John Gopopetsie her savings a day or two ago, she says, and has been left destitute in this city.

The girl was picked up by the police yesterday afternoon, and, after hearing her story, Detective Costello gave her carfare to Garfield.

Miss Trosso said Gopopo had proposed marriage to her and brought her to this city. The prospective husband went into a saloon, she said, while she waited on a corner. That was the last she saw of him and her savings.

TANGO CRAZE HAS ALL LONDON IN ITS TOILS

London, Dec. 18.—Society is in the toils of the tango. Tango teas, tango suppers, tango "at homes"—they are everywhere. Tango to right of us; tango to left of us; tango in front of us. And now the dancing of the tango is to be taught as a polite accomplishment. Mr. F. H. Payne has opened his London Salon for Argentine and Brazilian dancing.

The tango was danced by Maurice and Miss Clarton, who have already established a reputation in this country, Miss Jean Guilford and Miss Poppy d'Amerli also gave an interesting demonstration in this complicated but fascinating movement. The decorations of the new salon merit a word of comment. They have been carried out by a young Russian artist, and the general effect is startlingly novel, without being bizarre. [illegible] are the floors, tangerine—or should one say "tangerine"?—the walls [illegible] and the furniture [illegible].

Amid such luxurious surroundings will the tango be taught to those who have not yet attained a mastery of it. Needless to say, there will be tango teas. These always are. The tango craze has also invaded the [illegible]. [illegible] tango, [illegible], and the [illegible] walk being danced by America's foremost tango teachers.

OTONABEE POWER COMPANY'S CUSTOMERS WILL BE PROTECTED

"Last Word" From the Company to the City Council on The Light Situation

The following letter was sent to the Council, which met in private session on Wednesday night to consider it. What the outcome was no one knows, except the members of the Council who were present, and they won't tell.

The Municipal Corporation of the City of Peterborough, Peterborough, Ontario.

Gentlemen:—

Owing to the fact that the Otonabee Company's franchise expires on the 1st of January, 1914, and that your Council have seen fit, not only to refuse to submit to the people a By-law for its renewal, but have also ordered that Company to remove its poles and wires from the streets of your city, which will leave over 600 of your ratepayers without light and power, we the Otonabee Power Company, Limited, and The Peterborough Light and Power Company, Limited, beg to make the following application to your Council:

Under By-law 1111, it is provided that no Company having poles or wires on the streets of the City of Peterborough shall sell or lease to any other Company having similar rights, its poles or wires without the consent of the City Council. We do not admit that this By-law applies to the Peterborough Light and Power Company, Limited, but, without prejudice, we beg to propose the following temporary solution of the difficulty:

You claim the right to expropriate all the property of the Peterborough Light and Power Company, Limited, in the City of Peterborough, and are proceeding with that end in view. If you should purchase this property there is not the slightest doubt that you will need a great deal, if not all, of the Otonabee Power Company's system, which, if torn down by us, will simply have to be rebuilt by you.

We, therefore, ask you to consent to a sale, by the Otonabee Power Company, Limited, of its Distribution System and Substation, and all its property within the limits of the City of Peterborough, to the Peterborough Light and Power Company, Limited, at the price of $45,000.00, which, we understand, is a reasonable value for the same, and we, The Peterborough Light and Power Company, Limited, undertake that, in the event of your expropriating and paying for the whole of our system, to sell you such part of that System that has been acquired, under this sale, from the Otonabee system, at the same price we paid for the same.

The Peterborough Light and Power Company, Limited, will also undertake to supply all the customers of the Otonabee system, from the 1st of January, 1914, until such time as the City takes over each of its plant, at the same rates and on the same terms as the said customers are now being supplied by the Otonabee Company.

We beg to point out to you that this seems to be the fairest solution of the difficulty in which your City and ourselves are placed. If you proceed to order the Otonabee Company's poles off the streets, we will take them off, and as we have before pointed out, will leave several hundreds of your citizens without light or power.

We also beg to inform you that if the Otonabee's system is removed off the streets that the Peterborough Company will immediately proceed, under its franchise which is still intact, to erect poles and wires, to serve these people and you will have to take over the new poles and wires, which will certainly cost more than the purchasing of the Otonabee system.

If you contemplate delay or refusal to allow us to erect these poles, you will simply leave a large body of your citizens without light or power and they will be the people who will suffer most.

This proposition is made to you, without prejudice to any rights that the Peterborough Power Company may have, to purchase the Otonabee system without the consent of your Council.

We would be obliged if you would immediately call a special meeting of your Council, to consider this matter, when we would be glad to wait before you and discuss the means of carrying it out. We will also be willing to supply you with an inventory of the plant of the Otonabee Power Company, that is to be purchased by the Peterborough Company with our values on the same, so that you may have it checked up with your own engineers, in order to satisfy you that the price Peterborough is offering for the same, is a fair, reasonable and just one, not only to ourselves and the Otonabee shareholders, but also the City, if it eventually takes it over.

Yours truly,
THE OTONABEE POWER COMPANY, LIMITED,
W. J. Ferguson, President.
THE PETERBOROUGH LIGHT & POWER CO., Limited,
A. B. Colville, Vice-President.

FEDERAL FRUIT COMMISSIONER TO BE APPOINTED AT EARLY DATE

Names of Several Experts Are Mentioned in Connection With the New Departmental Branch

Ottawa, Dec. 18.—The reorganization of the fruit division of the Department of Agriculture is likely to take place in the very near future, the probability being that much more importance will be attached to the development of fruit-growing than has been the case with respect to this branch of agriculture in the past. Fruit growers have found for some time that their industry is given recognition commensurate with its present and increasing importance and there is every likelihood that these representations will be favorably considered and acted upon by the present Minister of Agriculture. The proposal is to raise the fruit division to the standard of a separate branch, under a qualified branch expert as fruit commissioner. This has already been done with regard to dairying, live stock, etc. The Minister of Agriculture is personally familiar with the fruit growing industry, and will select a commissioner from [illegible]. The [illegible] of those who have made a success of fruit growing.

Among fruit men the names most mentioned are those of H. C. [illegible], of Burlington; Daniel Johnson, of Forest, and R. L. Palmer, of British Columbia, all well known and successful fruit growers. The fruit division is at present without a head owing to the death recently of Alexander McNeil.

Self Condemned

By MARGARET C. DEVEAUX

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

M. le Judge Carier was dispensing justice on the bench during the French revolution. The justice he was dispensing was between classes, not individuals. The nobles had tyrannized over the common people for centuries. Now the common people were endeavoring to extirpate the nobles from the face of the earth. Judge Carier was sending a batch of them to the guillotine.

"Who is this?" he asked, seeing a girl, a mere child, brought before him.

"Citizeness Elise Bellair," replied the officer of the guard.

"Who ordered her brought here? She is not old enough to—to understand the difference between patriotism and tyranny."

"She was included in a list furnished by M. Marat."

"Indeed," said the judge, frowning.

"M. Marat is accustomed to make inquiries if all those on his lists have been—taken care of."

"But this one—did he know that she is a child?"

The officer shook his head. M. Marat's brain was not open to him to look into.

The judge pondered a few moments. There was something wrong in this case. Possibly a list had been made out and presented to some one in authority who had signed the warrants accompanying it while thinking of something else. Nevertheless the judge did not dare disobey the order he had received to condemn every one sent before him.

"Take her away with the others," he said reluctantly.

He was looking down into the child's face pityingly. She saw the expression on the judge's face. Children are quick to recognize their friends, and the marquise, not understanding that the judge had sent her to the guillotine, smiled at him. Then a soldier took her little hand in his and led her away with the others.

The judge asked one standing by something about her and was told that she was the Marquise de Bellair, and since she alone represented the Bellairs and since the revolutionary committee was anxious that no member of the family should be left alive the child had been marked for execution. When the deed had been done it would be put down to an error.

The judge went home that evening, and his own little daughter, about the age of the child he had condemned, sat upon his lap, put her arms about his neck and kissed him.

"How hot your face is, papa!" she said.

He unwound her arms, gently put her away, and called for a glass of wine. He had stood up under the grim duties required of him till the matter of the little marquise had required his attention. He did not eat his dinner and went to bed feverish. The smile he had received from the little marquise had unnerved him. All night he lay in bed, two sights coming up alternately before his mental vision—the one the marquise's smile, the other her little figure lying on the guillotine, the drop of the knife and her little curly head dropping into the basket.

In the morning Judge Carier looked as if he had passed through a fit of sickness. He ate nothing, spoke not a word. When he went out after breakfast his little daughter put up her arms, as was her custom, for her morning hug and kiss. Her father put her away and left her standing with tears in her eyes in the hallway.

The judge turned into a boulevard and after following it for awhile entered a street that led him to the Place de la Revolution, now the Place de la Concorde. It is one of the most spacious plazas in the world, lying as it does between the Champs d'Elysees and the gardens of the Tuileries. Carriages drive through it, but few who ride or walk past its fountains and its obelisk think of the work that was going on there more than a hundred years ago.

A crowd was collecting about the guillotine, and a tumbrel was driven up loaded with condemned persons. As it passed the judge he caught sight of a little figure about half the height of the others and saw a little hand waving to him. He walked on and joined the party at the guillotine. At the moment an officer began to call names from a list he had in his hand.

"Citizeness Elise Bellair!"

The judge approaching, took the child by the hand and said:

"I condemned this child by mistake."

He was recognized by the officials and permitted to lead the little marquise away.

She was never seen again in Paris till long after the revolution. She returned a middle aged woman.

When the judge went home that evening he seemed to have the seal of death upon his brow. He took his little daughter in his arms, while tears rolled down his cheeks.

In the middle of the night there was a knock at his door. The judge went downstairs and met an officer, who told him he was under arrest for being in conspiracy with the [illegible]. The visit was not unexpected, and the prisoner went with the officers without a word of protest.

DUST KILLS ONE IN SEVEN.

Most Tuberculosis Comes From Breathing Impure Air.

The woman who keeps her house scrupulously free of dust and has her sidewalk washed once a day aids very materially in the campaign against the great white plague, tuberculosis. According to Dr. F. [illegible], dust is one of the greatest foes of mankind. Over one-seventh of civilized humanity dies of tuberculosis in one form or another, and most of these victims could have been saved, would, indeed, never have taken the infection, if they had breathed absolutely pure air.

The lining of the mucous membrane of throat and nose is intensely tender. It is in a state of [illegible] movement all the time. [illegible] The healthy nose and throat secrete just enough of this mucus to keep the lining well moistened and covered, for the object of the mucus is to act as a sentinel or outpost for any foreign substance that may be carried into the nostrils or mouth in the intake of air.

Ordinary dust is [illegible] definition of dust is—whether it is organic or inorganic. The property that makes a particle of dust formidable or comparatively innocuous is its shape and its degree of hardness. Particles of marble, metal, wood, or stone dust from a quarry, are particularly dangerous, because these tiny particles are full of sharp corners, and on entering the mucus which protects the membraneous lining they penetrate.

They Live To Eat.

According to Herr Friedmann, a German traveler, who recently returned from the Congo, there is a tribe of natives down in one of the interior parts of that region actually so stuffed all of the time with food, three or four times as much as they need, that they are continually in a dull and almost unintelligent stupor.

They do little beside sleep and eat. They are too lazy to do any individual hunting, and it is the disliked and unpopular member of the family that is forced to do the food-providing for the relatives. The women are quite as lazy as the men and work only when it is absolutely necessary to eat.

The only times when the natives rouse themselves is at marriage or at death. Both of these occasions are celebrated by eating more than ordinarily, and the after-effects of both occasions are often disastrous, as one or two of the party are sure to eat so much as to be seriously and often fatally sick.

The few missionaries who have penetrated the interior sufficiently far to meet with these tribes own to their being practically hopeless as far as any regenerating is concerned. They seem to have been stupefied through the centuries and to have become utterly degenerate and useless members of society.

He Wouldn't See Them.

In a sketch of Admiral Seaton Schroeder the New York Globe says: "The following story rests on no more substantial foundation than fleet gossip. But just before the fleet left for that trip around the world there was some newspaper talk of a possible clash with Japan. The yarn goes that a highly placed person asked Schroeder in the course of a chat what he would do if the Japs fired on his ship. Schroeder smiled. 'They won't fire on my ship,' said he positively. 'But if they did?' 'Now,' said Schroeder angrily, 'if they did, hey? What the dickens do you think I'd do—see 'em?'"

CHRISTMAS APPEAL
FOR
The Hospital for Sick Children
COLLEGE ST., TORONTO

Dear Mr. Editor:—

Thanks for your kindness in allowing me the privilege of appealing at this Christmas time on behalf of the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto.

It would take more space than you can spare to tell of the good work done for the sick and deformed children of this Province. Let me, however, in a few words, tell you of the progress of the work of the Hospital.

One nurse, six little white beds, a few dollars, a few friends—this was the beginning. The beds have grown to 250, the dollars to thousands, the friends to hundreds. 1875, the first year, 44 in-patients, 67 out-patients; 1913, last year, 1,646 in-patients, [illegible] out-patients; 1875, 1 nurse; 1913, [illegible] nurses.

Since 1875, thirty-eight years ago, the Hospital has admitted within its walls 21,018 children as in-patients, and 159,231 as out-patients, a total of 180,249, or an average of 4,743 per year. Of the 21,018 in-patients, [illegible] were from Toronto, and [illegible] from other parts of the Province; 10,150 of the total in-patients were cured, and 6,367 were improved.

In the Orthopedic Department last year, of the 1,646 in-patients, 378 were treated for deformities, 35 hip disease, 37 Pott's disease, 3 knock-knees, [illegible] bow-legs, 62 club feet, 3 lateral curvature of the spine, 44 infantile paralysis, 6 wry neck, and 75 tubercular disease of knee, hip and ankle. In 1913, the Surgical Apparatus Shop manufactured 437 appliances for in-patients and out-patients, including ankle braces, spinal braces, hip splints, bow-leg splints, club-feet splints, plaster jackets, etc.

In this Department in 25 years nearly 800 boys and girls have been treated for Club Feet and 656 corrected. Half of these came from places outside of Toronto. Surely we have a fair claim for help from the people of this Province.

Will you, the reader of this letter, help to give crippled children a fair start in life?

Busy dollars are better than idle tears. The sympathy that helps is good, but the Hospital has to have the sympathy that works.

While Christmas Bells are ringing to the glory of Him "Who made the lame to walk and the blind to see," give, give, give, and help the Hospital to help God's little ones, upon whom the heavy hand of affliction has been laid.

Will you please send a dollar, or more, if you can spare it, to Douglas Davidson, the Secretary-Treasurer of the Hospital, or

J. ROSS ROBERTSON,
Chairman of the Trustees, Toronto.

Prof. Mulveney Known All Over the World

Proprietor of World's Famous Tape Worm Exterminator

Tape worm is bred from a parasite. It is of pear shape, having two, four and six suckers. It lays the eggs, which are connected together. They develop and form a body, which is the worm. Each section is an individual, having a number of mouths. The worm grows much longer than the bowels where it is located, and sometimes a whole colony of them are found, enough to fill a quart of solid worm, and when put in a basin of water would apparently fill it. It is the hardest task in the world to destroy this parasite, without doing injury to the individual who may be so unfortunate as to have it, as the [illegible] clings to the bowels, feeding itself from the body of the victim, and remains there to breed another. It is an internal demon, and causes its victim to suffer all the symptoms of disease imaginable. [illegible] physicians are led to believe the patient is suffering from some other disease, as nearly every person has different symptoms. Some have been treated for cancer of the bowels, consumption of the bowels, consumption of the lungs, chronic dyspepsia, nervous prostration, melancholia, hysteria, inflammation of the bowels, appendicitis, and other complaints, when one or more of these worms were eating their lives away.

Prof. Mulveney has made the discovery to free the victim without injury to the system, destroying the parasite as well as expelling the worm with one dose of medicine without any previous starvation. Visit his office, where he has in his possession the most wonderful collection of these parasites which have been expelled from hundreds of people by his famous remedy, some bottles containing colonies of worms, and anyone seeing them cannot imagine how a person could possibly live with them in his bowels. It is surprising the number of people that have them. Thousands have them and are not aware of the fact. The letters and testimonials the professor has in his possession are enough to convince you of this alarming fact. Some of the most prominent symptoms are ravenous appetite, dizzy spells, headaches, cramps in the bowels, a feeling of something moving in the bowels. Segments may be in evidence at any time, and this is complete proof of the presence of tape worm. There are many other indications of disease which take too long to enumerate. Strange to say some people of strong constitutions have very little distress.

Prof. Mulveney's world famous Tape Worm Exterminator is [illegible] and harmless. No starvation, no danger, is not disagreeable to take. One dose nearly always gives a cure. Information free. [illegible]

Our Point of View

Canada's minister of finance is making the most of his present opportunity to interest New York capitalists in Canadian development.

Our compositor, in referring to the great work being done for the empire by Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, put in O in front of his name. This great family journal prefers that Sir Thomas should O us than for The Times to O him.

Says the Chicago News: "Apropos of the egg boycott, even though it wins, who is to eat the boycotted egg after the victory?" Well, it wouldn't be a bad idea to feed it to the Cold Storage Trust.

President Anna Howard Shaw of the U.S. National American Woman Suffrage Association declares that the time is past when women say, "Please let us vote," but on the contrary they will demand it. This wretched strategy, Anna. Men cannot be driven, but you can get anything you want by smiling sweetly and tickling them under the chin.

Nothing probably has done Canada more good in the money markets of the world than the tight money market. It is impossible to judge the seaworthiness of a ship when all is plain sailing. Mariners want to know how she will weather a blow. It is blowing and has been blowing for some time and Canada shows no unfit strain.

THE CAUSE OF BAD ROADS

A road is no better than its worst mile. There is a sentence in an expression of a truth too little recognized. It is of little value to a farmer to have a road over which he can haul a heavy load for five miles if, at the sixth, he is to be mired. The test of a road is the test of its passability from one end to the other. A railway does not base its cost of haulage on the expense of moving freight over its level stretches. It has to reackon with the grades.

The weakness with road making in this country has been a lack of unified system. Not every section or township, or county has felt itself financially able to assume the cost of building really good roads. In many instances they have not been in a position to borrow on their credit enough to carry on such improvements. Even if they have the work they have been able to do has extended only to the limits of their jurisdiction. Beyond the length of their good roads the next mile too often has been impassable to heavy loads.

It has come to be recognized that if real good is to be accomplished in the making of roads, there must be some central authority to direct and supervise the work, to give character of uniformity, to render the strength of its financial backing. In the United States many of the individual states have borrowed on their credit to build good roads throughout the state. Now there is a national good roads movement on hand. The federal government is being urged to assist in the unification of these state roads. In our own country we see that our own province of Ontario, as well as Quebec, and British Columbia in the west have faced the good roads issue squarely. British Columbia is spending $5,000,000 on a good roads system. In Ontario, under the Highways Acts, the government assists in good road making to the extent of one-third of the cost. They have paid out already under this act nearly a million and a half dollars. The province of Quebec is spending $10,000,000 on a road system.

The action of these provinces is but a recognition of a well known principle. It has come to be recognized that road making is a matter of more than a local concern. Country roads are the farmer's freight arteries. As they are good or bad, so is the value of his produce enhanced or reduced. Why should a province pledge its credit to help railway promoters, while the farmer is left to provide for himself? There is no good reason why it should be so. That is why the provinces of Quebec, of Ontario, and British Columbia have undertaken to assist the farmer. That is the reason why the Roblin government has decided to expend the sum of $2,860,000 on good roads in that province. A wise expenditure of money has provided a complete system of railways throughout the province. Now it is proposed to help the farmers in the same way to build roads, that they can convey the railways economically the produce of their farms.

MANUFACTURED MILK WINS OFFICIAL "PASS" AT INDIANAPOLIS

Powder and Water With Enough Butter Fat to Give the Taste—Fraud Discovered Just by Accident

Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 18.—When Board here found a large number of bottles of milk yesterday in which the cream settled upon the bottom of the bottle, instead of on the top it uncovered the fact that for a month or longer, many Indianapolis people have been using manufactured milk which was being sold for the real product. The manufactured milk is made by mixing powder with water and adding enough cream to give the mixture the proper amount of butter fat. This fluid stands all the tests required of real milk.

Milk For the Babies.

During the street car and teamsters strike here, the City Health Board made arrangements to have milk delivered and also to secure milk for babies and invalids. The plans were unnecessary because the milk supply in Indianapolis apparently did not diminish. At that time though the usual shipments of milk into the city from the country on the interurban lines were practically stopped.

With no milk being shipped into the City and the supply apparently normal the Health Board sent out inspectors and great numbers of samples of milk were analyzed. The samples were up to the required standards, but the search for the source of the milk supply was continued.

How Fraud Was Discovered.

The discovery of the manufactured milk was brought about when one company put too much butter fat in its newly made supply. This caused the cream to settle to the bottom of the bottles. The company is one of the largest in the city and admitted to city officials that it had been selling the manufactured milk for some time.

When it was found that manufactured milk fulfilled all requirements as to the various standards the Board ordered that commencing on Friday all manufactured milk must be so labelled.

WOMEN'S COUNCIL

Edited by the Ladies of Peterborough

The women of Peterborough, through their representative body, The Women's Council, stand for morality and health and maintain that the safe-guarding of the moral life of our boys and girls has first claim upon Public Funds. They maintain that since about one-half of our population consists of women and girls, many of whom are now a part of the working world, and new and permanent social conditions are hereby created, they are legitimately entitled to the kind of police protection which women believe will be most effective. Having at hand convincing proof of the success of this method of procedure in other cities, they are therefore agitating for the appointment of a policewoman, and are circulating the following petition for signatures.

To the Police Commissioners of the City of Peterborough.

Gentlemen:—

WHEREAS in the judgment of many, the time has come when a considerable addition should be made to the Police Force of the City.

WHEREAS since about one-half of the population consists of women and girls, many of whom are now a part of the working world and new and permanent social conditions are thereby created, they are legitimately entitled to the kind of police protection which women feel will be most effective.

WHEREAS the very presence of a Police-woman would protect women and children leaving factories, stores, theatres, and picture-shows, from being accosted, and also prove a safeguard in parks, stations and the local courts, where loafers congregate.

WHEREAS except in hardened cases, women and girls who are involved in questionable and guilty conduct, will naturally tell their story much more readily to a police-woman than to a police-man.

WHEREAS mothers who are anxious about wayward daughters, would more readily call in a police-woman, than a police-man, for consultation and advice, and a woman in authority could more easily bring pressure to bear to secure proper conduct.

WHEREAS it is the testimony of Police Inspectors who have had the services of a police-woman that:—

"Since one find [illegible] with women [illegible] they can always get the desired information from women [illegible] and cannot be [illegible]."

"Our opinion is that they will be of very great service in detecting and preventing breaches of the law that would otherwise escape the notice of the men on the force AND IN SAVING YOUNG PEOPLE FROM ENTERING UPON A CAREER OF CRIME."

Chairman Police Commissioners, Ottawa.

THEREFORE, we, the undersigned women of the City of Peterborough, would [illegible] to have a woman [illegible] Police Force [illegible] to the Police Force of Peterborough.

SYNOPSIS OF PROPOSED BY-LAW

ENTITLED

"A By-Law to authorize borrowing $8,000, by the issue of debentures, to purchase a Motor-Driven Combination Chemical Engine and Hose Waggon."

The purpose of the proposed By-law is to enable the Council to purchase a motor Driven Combination Chemical Engine and Hose Waggon for the Fire Department. The amount required and authorized to be raised by the By-Law is the sum of $8000. The Debentures to be issued to raise this sum are to be payable within 20 years from the date of their issue.

The amount to be raised annually for the payment of the debt is the sum of $[illegible] of which $[illegible] is for the interest and $[illegible] is to form a sinking fund for payment of the debentures at their maturity.

NOTICE

TAKE NOTICE that the foregoing is a synopsis of a proposed By-Law of the Corporation of the City of Peterborough to be submitted to the votes of the electors at the same time and at the same places as the annual election for the Municipal Council and the Deputy Returning Officers appointed to hold the said election shall take the vote and that the third day of January, 1914, at ten o'clock in the forenoon at the City Clerk's Office in the said municipality has been fixed for the appointment of persons to attend at the polling places and at the final summing up of the votes by the Clerk and that if the assent of the electors is obtained to said proposed By-Law, it will be taken into consideration by the Municipal Council of the said Corporation at a meeting thereof to be held after the expiration of one month from the date of the first publication of this notice and that such publication was made on the [illegible] day of December, 1913.

TAKE NOTICE FURTHER that a tenant who desires to vote upon said proposed By-law must deliver to the Clerk not later than the tenth day before the day appointed for taking the vote, a declaration under the Canada Evidence Act, that he is a tenant whose lease extends for the time for which the debt or liability is to be created, or in which the money to be raised by the proposed By-law is payable, or for at least twenty-one years, and that he has by the lease covenanted to pay all municipal taxes in respect of the property of which he is tenant other than local improvement rates.

HUNT MISS M'CANN IN GOOD GROUND, L. I.

New York, Dec. 17.—Hoping that Miss Jessie B. McCann, the missing Flatbush girl, is in Good Ground, Long Island, or the vicinity, the search in and around Good Island concentrated there.

Three persons living in Good Island say they saw Miss McCann a week ago Saturday, two days after she disappeared from her home.

Following this information, Detective Byerton planned to renew his vicinity, the search for her now is He will pay particular attention to the closed houses of summer residents.

Miss McCann became familiar with many of these houses when she visited Good Ground last summer, at the time that she met Wendel Squires, her fiance, and it is believed she may be hiding in one of these houses.

There was another development today, when a post card signed "Jessie" was received at the McCann home.

"Dear Mother: I will be home Thursday afternoon. Don't worry." was written on the post card. Members of the family said the writing was not that of the missing girl, but the police believe it may have been written by some one else at her direction.

The three persons who reported seeing the missing girl say the incident occurred at the Good Ground railroad station. Accompanied by an elderly nurse or companion she boarded a westbound train at 2.37 P.M., the Saturday after her disappearance.

Miss McCann did not show any signs of depression and made some light remarks as she bought tickets for herself and companion. The station agent, Jared Carmichael, could not recall today whether the place of destination was Babylon or Amityville.

Mrs. Frank Goodale, who has a store on the main street in Good Ground, gave this account of her seeing the missing young church worker.

"I was at the station seeing a friend off on the train and was standing on the platform when Miss McCann came from the waiting room, followed by a woman of perhaps twice her age, who looked as if she might be a trained nurse or some kind of servant or companion.

"I stepped forward to speak to her when she turned her back to me and hurried toward the train, which had just come in."

Meantime the trail of the missing girl also has shifted to Amityville, L.I. A physician of that town is sure that Miss McCann came to his office recently.

To The Ratepayers of CENTRE WARD

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

May I put before you the fact of my candidature for election as Alderman for Centre Ward. In so doing I venture to hope that I may receive your support.

I make this request proffering to you a thorough acquaintance with the needs of the City in the immediate future and such as are likely to come before your Council for consideration and action.

I believe I can be thoroughly useful to you, as a ratepayer and to the City at large, and should be very glad indeed to have your support in my behalf.

Yours very respectfully,

FRANK H. DOBBIN.

GILLESPIE FOR MAYOR

To the Electors of the City of Peterboro

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—

At the urgent solicitation of many of my business and personal friends, I have consented to become a candidate for the position of Mayor of your City, and respectfully solicit your votes and influence.

As in the past, I shall not make any rash promises, to gain the vote of any elector, but, if elected, my attitude on every question will be to stand firm for the best interests of our Progressive City.

Having been interested in Peterborough all my life, and one of your Aldermen for five years, I may fairly claim to be in close touch with every section and every interest of the municipality, and familiar with its needs and ambitions.

I believe that in all respects the will of the people should prevail; that a vigorous but economical administration is the best administration, and that if your Chief Magistrate is able to devote a fair proportion of his time to his civic duties, it will not be to your disadvantage if he brings with him the experience and energy he displays in the conduct of a large and successful business of his own.

If my course in the Council during the past five years has in the main met with your approval I shall esteem it an honour to have your further approval and support in the coming contest.

Yours respectfully,

G. A. GILLESPIE

To the Electors of the West Ward

Ladies and Gentlemen,

At the request of a number of the ratepayers of the above Ward, I have consented to offer myself as a candidate for the Council at the approaching Municipal Elections.

If elected I will do everything in my power to promote the best interests of the city.

Yours very truly,

TO THE ELECTORS OF WEST WARD

Gentlemen:

I respectfully solicit your vote and influence to return me as Alderman for your Ward for 1914. As a business man with a successful business experience, I feel that our motto should be "Business methods in all departments of the Council." Efficiency linked with economy should be our guiding principle.

I trust you will favor me with your support and I promise should I be returned that I will do my best to merit your approval.

Jos. Wm. WORTH

J. J. HARTLEY for MAYOR

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY OF PETERBOROUGH:

Ladies and Gentlemen:—At the earnest request of a large number of the ratepayers I have consented to be a candidate for the position of Mayor for the year 1914.

Being born and having lived all my life in Peterborough, and my whole life's savings being invested in Peterborough, I naturally have a deep interest in the welfare and prosperity of the City.

Should I be elected I promise you that I will guard to the very best of my ability, the interests of the ratepayers and will oppose all unnecessary expenditure. I will do my utmost to keep down the ever increasing rate of taxation consistent with needs of a growing City.

I may say that I am in favor of Municipal Ownership, and am in favor of having all city work done by our own people instead of bringing in outsiders to do it.

I will endeavour to see that the ratepayers get value for every dollar that is expended.

I have had considerable experience in municipal matters, having served ten years in the Council and fourteen years on the Board of Education, being Chairman of that Board for two years, I was also Chairman of the Board of Health for several years, so that you will see that I am not without a fair share of experience.

Should you do me the honor to elect me as Mayor of our City I will do my best to serve you to the extent of my ability.

Yours respectfully,

J. J. HARTLEY

IN THE RAJAH'S SERVICE

By EDWIN D. TROUSDALE

Copyright by American Press Association, 1913.

This story was told me by an Englishman who had grown old in the civil service in India. We were sitting in the smoking room of a liner between Southampton and New York:

The people of India are the most sensitive as well as the most merciless people of the world. An Indian will treat one he wishes to destroy with the most flattering attention while he is planning to kill him. He always strikes in the dark—that is, when he kills with steel. But it is with poison that Indians do their most artistic murderous work. They have studied the science of poison for ages. They have poison rings, poison perfumes, poison flowers. But the strangest of all is a poison human being. They will feed a person on a certain poison till he has absorbed so much of it that his very breath is noxious to one unused to what the poison person is saturated with.

I had a narrow escape from death when I was in India. It was when I first went out there as a youngster and had no idea of the secret dangers to be incurred. That which an Indian is most jealous of is a woman. Any European who attempts the slightest familiarity with one of them is in imminent danger of his life. If they would give a fellow a chance it wouldn't be quite so terrible, but they won't. He is either murdered in the dark or poisoned.

I was just twenty years old when I landed in Calcutta to take position in a British house dealing in opium and the goods of the country. Later I was sent into the interior to buy cotton, five of us being sent together for greater safety. [illegible], not much older than myself, was my companion.

In one of the towns we heard of a rajah whose brother or some other relative had died childless, and the rajah had inherited his effects. Not caring to keep [illegible], he had offered to sell many articles. Bob and I called on him, and he exhibited his wares, treating us at the same time royally. [illegible] expensive delighted he said that we had not seen the most beautiful. He clapped his hands, a servant appeared, he gave an order in a tongue we did not understand, the servant withdrew, and in a few minutes our host led us into another room where were assembled several of the handsomest Indian women I have ever seen. The rajah [illegible] of them left us, saying that he would take a nap.

One of the women, apparently with the consent of the others, took Bob under her especial charge, another took me, and it wasn't long before, under pretense of showing us some of the rajah's most valuable curios, they led us into a suite of rooms [illegible]. My companion and I seated ourselves on a divan and were chatting [illegible] when I noticed that she had been using some strange perfume. She gradually drew nearer to me, and I noticed a deathly sickness coming over me. An instinct of self preservation, I suppose, led me to get up from the divan. My next [illegible] was to find Bob. I staggered into another room. There was Bob with his lips glued to those of the girl he was with. Seeing me, she [illegible] about him, and he fell to the floor. I went to him, [illegible] and found that he was dead.

matter; it is not the policy of the British government to punish Indians who take revenge on Europeans for such offenses. Bob's sudden death received no official notice whatever. I was considered to have made a lucky escape.

There has never been any doubt in my mind that the five girls who affected Bob and me had been fed on a poison and were in the rajah's service as secret executioners.

Christmas Announcement

WE take pleasure in once more presenting to your our Annual Announcement in connection with the Holiday Trade, and would respectfully call your attention to the fact that we have secured from the leading markets of the world an up-to-date stock of holiday goods, suitable for Christmas and New Year presents, which we are selling at a bargain. This year we are better prepared than ever to cater to the wants of the public.

In both quality and prices, we defy competition. Our expenses are comparatively insignificant as compared with the other larger stores in the city, and the fact that we have not got to look to the profits from our bookstore trade to carry us through, but have a large printing and book manufacturing business as well, in addition to our rapidly expanding newspaper business.

We have made expensive preparations for the Holiday Trade, and invite the public to call and inspect our stock and get our prices before purchasing elsewhere.

Calendars, Handy Booklets, Christmas and Text Cards

We have in Calendars, Booklets, Christmas and Text Cards a stock of the latest designs, and a very large assortment to choose from. Special discounts to parties taking a number.

Fancy Goods

In Fancy Goods, as in every other line, our stock is up-to-date. We can supply you with presents for young and old, rich and poor, wives, husbands and sweethearts. We only give a mere hint here of the articles with which our shelves are ladened:—Brush and Comb Setts, Manicure Setts, Writing Desks, Collar and Cuff Boxes, Glove and Handkerchief Boxes, Ladies' and Gentlemen's Travelling Companions, Jewel Cases, Photo Boxes, Albums, etc., etc. These goods are all new, and made in designs and of material not shown before.

Books for All

We ask an inspection of our stock and prices. We aim to give our customers the best possible value for the money. Dainty Gift Books, Padded Poems, and an endless variety of Cloth and Leather Bound Works. Also Bibles, Hymnals, Children's Illustrated Books, etc.

Games for Young and Old

Our stock in Games is very complete, including Fishpond, Flips, Game of India, Halma, The Century Ride, Lost Heir, Authors, Checkers, Dominoes, Nations, Lotto and all the popular 10 cent games.

New Souvenir Novelties and Small Wares

The following are but a few of the many very desirable articles suitable for Yuletide remembrances: Purses, Card Cases, Burnt Leather Blotters, Pen Wipers and Book Markers: Tea, Crumb, Pin and Ash Trays, Ink Wells, Bon-bon Dishes, Japanese Cups and Saucers, Bread and Butter Plates, Rose Bowls, Vases, Biscuit Jars, all kinds of bric-a-brac, etc.

For Dolls We Lead—Others Follow

We propose to lead this season in the Doll Trade, and are showing Dolls at prices that defy competition. Handsome Kid Dolls, Dressed Dolls in all sizes, Bisque and Composition Dolls, Wax and China Dolls, Rubber Dolls and Dolls that may be used for Fancy Pin Holders. Dolls from 15c up.

Please Remember

1.—That The Times Bookstore has everything marked close to cost.

2.—We can sell cheaper than any other house. The reason we can afford to do so is, because our expenses are practically all compared with other concerns.

3.—We are large manufacturers of stationery supplies and books, employing above 40 persons, so that in these lines we have goods at first cost.

4.—We sell to the wholesale trade, who again sell to the bookstores and stationers throughout the country, so that by purchasing direct from us you save, in many cases, the profits of two "middle men."

TENDERS FOR PULPWOOD LIMIT.

TENDERS will be received by the undersigned up to and including Wednesday, the 31st of December next for the right to cut pulpwood on a certain area situated on the [illegible] River in the District of Temiskaming.

Tenderers shall state the amount they are prepared to pay as bonus in addition to the Crown dues of 40c. per cord for Spruce, and 20c. per cord for other pulpwoods, or such other rates as may from time to time be fixed by the Lieutenant-Governor in Council, for the right to operate a pulp mill and a paper mill on or near the area referred to.

Such tenderers shall be required to erect a mill or mills on or near the territory and to manufacture the wood into pulp and paper in the Province of Ontario—the paper mill to be erected when directed by the Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines.

Parties making tender will be required to deposit with their tender a marked cheque payable to the Treasurer of the Province of Ontario, for ten per cent. of the amount of their tender, to be forfeited in the event of their not entering into an agreement to carry out the conditions, etc.

The highest or any tender not necessarily accepted.

For particulars as to description of territory, capital to be invested, etc., apply to the undersigned.

W. H. HEARST,
Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines.
Toronto, Ontario, September 17th, [illegible]

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for Dam on French River, [illegible] Channel, Ont." will be received at this office until 4.00 P.M., on [illegible]day, December 30, 1913, for the construction of a Dam across the South Channel of the French River, at head of Big Chaudiere Falls.

Plans, specification and form of contract can be seen and forms of tender obtained at this Department and at the offices of the District Engineers, Confederation Life Building, Toronto, Ont.; Post Office Building, Montreal, and on application to the Postmaster at North Bay, Ont.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made on the printed forms supplied, and signed with their actual signatures, stating their occupations and places of residence. In the case of firms, the actual signature, the nature of the occupation, and place of residence of each member of the firm must be given.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank, payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of Public Works, equal to ten per cent (10 p.c.) of the amount of the tender, which will be forfeited if the person tendering decline to enter into a contract when called upon to do so, or fail to complete the work contracted for. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By order,
R. C. DESROCHERS,
Secretary.
Department of Public Works,
Ottawa, December 5, 1913.

RAPID STORY WRITING.

A Boast That Dumas Made, a Wager and the Result.

For rapidity of composition the palm among novelists must be awarded to Alexandre Dumas, who died with over 1,200 books to his credit, in all of which he had some share. According to Mr. Arthur F. Davidson, one of his biographers, he often declared that when once he had mapped out in his mind the scheme of a novel or a play the work was practically accomplished, since the mere writing of it presented no difficulty and could be performed as fast as the pen could travel. Some one disputed this; the result was a wager.

Dumas had in his head the plan of the "Chevalier de la Maison Rouge," of which he had not yet written a word, and he made a bet of 100 louis that he would write the first volume of the novel in seventy-two hours. The volume was to be formed by seventy-five large foolscap pages, each page containing forty-five lines and each line fifty letters. In sixty-six hours Dumas had done the work in his fair flowing hand, disfigured by no erasure—and the bet was won with six hours to spare.—London Chronicle.

JOHN ANDREWS THE COWARD.

The Way He Acted When the Fearful Cyclone Came.

By MARVIN DANA.

Roundabout him in a straggling parallelogram stood the ungainly wooden houses of a cyclone district county seat. Beyond lay the level brown of prairies, [illegible] with the ochre of ripening grain, gray blue where it merged into a horizon's sky of appalling bronze. His sight was blurred by dancing currents of hot air. In the shade of the hotel porch the thermometer registered 110 degrees, and there yet remained two sweltering hours before sunset.

"Thank heaven, I've inspected the last case and can start for New York in the morning," was his thought. Instinctively his hand touched his pocket and her letter. He smiled, then frowned.

"Am I a coward?"

A paragraph in her letter had started the self inquisition.

"I shall be so glad when you are safe home again," it ran, "even though I have no real cause for alarm. You are so big and strong and brave, and I love you for it. I could never love a coward."

Was he one? Yes—no! A flush not born of the sun flooded his face. His mind traveled back twenty-four hours, and he cursed his weakness, his timidity, which he had never realized until that awful storm had broken. It was when the terrific lightning peculiar to this region had played about him that he had suddenly found himself trembling, gasping with horror. The memory of those moments still sickened him and filled him with contemptuous self hate.

The proprietor of the hotel came out and balanced on two legs of a chair beside his guest.

"Reckon we'll have another bit of a shower tonight," he drawled amiably.

The careless words filled his listener with dumb anguish, half fear, half [illegible]. Must he again endure that racking torment—the blue glare of electricity, the deadly crackling of the bolts, the horrible realization that multiple death menaced him from every side?

"I don't see any clouds," he ventured.

"You can tell weather same as you can cloth, more by feelin' than by looks. I've been forty years in these parts, an' I calk'late we'll have it hotter an' tougher before midnight. Lucky if a regular cyclone don't blow along with it."

"Does lightning do much damage around here?"

"Burns a lot of barns mostly; but, takin' it one time an' another, we've had quite a few folks killed, 'bout twenty in my time. It's a nice, easy death, but I don't like cyclones. One hit me, an' that was enough. The durned thing killed off half the town, includin' all my best friends an' four mules, which was all I was worth. Cyclones, blast 'em, always come in the night, when you can't see 'em."

The listener drew his breath sharply.

"But how do you tell a cyclone, even in daytime?"

"Well, Mr. Andrews, you can always tell it because the sky looks like nothin' you've ever seen before—yellow, green an' coppery. An' if it's comin' your way you'll see what the papers call a funnel shaped cloud, but what looks more like a big balloon, dancin' along. When the gale raises an' that balloon seems to stop bouncin', but stands still, gettin' bigger an' bigger, you dust for a cellar. It's there."

"Do all the places here have cyclone caves?"

"Everybody in town ain't got one, but there's enough to go round. Want to see mine?"

Any diversion from his mental anguish and self pity was welcome to Andrews, and he followed his host to the middle of the back yard, where he saw a mound of earth. In the end [illegible] there was a swinging shutter, [illegible]. Within was space for perhaps six persons [illegible]. The [illegible] of [illegible] could [illegible] and again Andrews [illegible].

[illegible] that night Andrews [illegible] himself into believing that this apprehension of storm and wind was a [illegible] for which he was not morally culpable, and, exhausted by heat and mental strain, he quickly dropped asleep.

He awoke with the [illegible] of [illegible] the crash of a falling thunderbolt [illegible] his feet, and he stood [illegible] the [illegible] of the lightning. [illegible] of fear he sprang to the window and closed it. Then he threw the [illegible] and struck a match. Two times [illegible] in his trembling hand [illegible] light the lamp. [illegible] [illegible].

one might burst upon him, [illegible], overwhelming. With [illegible] him [illegible] the instinct of flight. To the cave, to safety!

Mechanically, in the midst of his alarm he dressed [illegible], and as he [illegible] into the dark hall he [illegible] before a [illegible] glare of lightning. But he was [illegible] in the [illegible] to be [illegible]. He [illegible] outside, and he [illegible] a [illegible] to the [illegible] of the cave, crept through the narrow opening and sank down, his face buried in his folded arms.

He was safe at last, and a great joy of salvation welled in his heart. For a time he slept, waking with mind cleared and body refreshed. He [illegible], but no sound reached him. [illegible] the thought of returning to the hotel [illegible] suffered [illegible] was hateful to him. He crept [illegible] the yard, climbed the fence and [illegible] toward the outskirts of the town. The air was of a hue strange to him, sullenly luminous, and he had gone not more than a quarter of a mile when he saw to the south, directly opposite from where the [illegible], [illegible]. They were shapes with ragged life. The boom of thunder was afresh. Yes; there could be no further question—a second tempest was approaching. Already the sickness of terror was upon him, the nausea of cowardice, and he again faced toward his refuge, the cave. But something in the sky held him fascinated, something shaped like a top, hung from the heavens and spun by demon hands. Then it stopped moving, growing larger and larger.

What had the landlord said that afternoon? When it stops "bouncin'" it's there!

He turned and fled for his life, but even as he ran a new thought came to him. It was not yet morning. None in the sleeping town knew of the doom rushing toward their homes. He had a pitiful vision of shattered houses, littered with mutilated bodies, women and children caught from their [illegible] in the crunching maw of the cyclone.

He forgot himself and—fear. He had reached the cyclone cellar and was rushing through the hall of the hotel.

"Cyclone! Cyclone! To the cave for your lives!"

The house sprang into instant life, but before the last startled guest reached the main door Andrews was again in the street. He [illegible] the dinner gong, which he had seized in an inspiration born of courage. Between each shout of warning he [illegible] and [illegible], [illegible] clangor on the [illegible].

He made the round of three sides of the square [illegible] of a sudden a rushing [illegible] all about him. He [illegible] and a [illegible] seemed to strike his temples a burning splendor blinded his eyes. Then an invisible power struck full against him, seized him and wrapped him in its crushing embrace, bore him aloft, tossed him here and there and finally into a blackness that swallowed him completely.

Three days later he woke to see an angel bending over him. No; it was flesh and blood, after all. It was she. He blinked at her uncertainly.

"You are a hero!" She spoke softly, with shining eyes.

Then he remembered.

"Were many saved?"

"All," she answered proudly. "Those you saved roused the others, and only a few, who sought refuge in cellars instead of caves, were hurt by falling timbers. But you suffered most. Oh, it was noble!"

Andrews spoke with sudden vigor.

"No, I am a coward. The storms frightened me shamefully. You cannot understand how I quivered and trembled like a child. I am not worthy of you. I had already hidden in the cave that night. I came out only when I thought all danger was over. The rest was—an accident."

He stopped, exhausted, and she bent close to him.

"Don't talk that way, dearest. You are not a coward, but a conqueror of fear, and you will be my hero always."

A BLOOD TAX.

Payment by a French Town to Spain For an Ancient Crime.

Seven hundred years ago some shepherds of the valley of Roncal, in Navarre, were murdered by shepherds of the valley of Baretous, in Bearn, the crime taking place on the high pasture lands of Arlas, in the Pyrenees. It would have been difficult to bring the murderers individually to justice, and the Spaniards were preparing to make war upon the valley from which the French murderers had come when the French villagers proposed that peace be maintained at the price of a yearly tax of tribute, to endure for all time, and this proposition was accepted.

The payment of this blood tax—originally three white mares, but later three cows of a particular breed and color—has been made ever since, the custom (it is nothing more) having survived even the great wars in which both France and Spain have engaged and the storm of the French revolution.

Yearly the representative men of the two valleys meet on the frontier at a certain stone remote from any town and go through the ceremony of presenting and receiving the cattle. The order of procedure, which is elaborate and impressive, is fixed by a document bearing the date 1375, though the tax was paid a hundred years prior to that time. The records of each yearly meeting and payment are duly signed and deposited in the archives of the Roncalais.—New York Tribune.

The Sanity of Paris.

The French live within their means and by a sense of economy wholly unknown to us manage to save and retire to enjoy whatever fortune has stored up for them, says F. Berkeley Smith in Success Magazine. To them France is sufficient. They voyage rarely and gamble less. The spendthrift or the man who plunges on the bourse, the races and the gaming table is regarded by the masses in the light of a rogue and a fool. The Parisians work hard enough for their leisure, but they never allow their work to encroach upon their traditional daily vacation, at luncheon, the apéritif hour, dinner and fete days. They work, not to amass millions and die in harness, but to save enough to give their daughter her dot, without which she may never marry; start their son in his chosen trade and have enough income left to retire before they are too old to enjoy their freedom.

FAMOUS NOVELISTS.

What Some of Them Did Before They Took to Writing.

Among those novelists who studied law we have Fielding, Scott, Charles Reade, Wilkie Collins, Blackmore, Washington Irving, George Meredith, Robert Grant, Henry James, Anthony Hope, Elder Haggard and Owen Wister. Journalism, which Mr. Kipling once defined as the one legitimate branch of the profession, is represented by Dickens, David Christie Murray, William Black, J. M. Barrie, Marion Crawford, George W. Cable, Stephen Crane, George Barr McCutcheon, Frank Norris, Richard Harding Davis and David Graham Phillips. The navy and merchant marine have given us Smollett, Captain Marryat, Fenimore Cooper, Clark Russell, Joseph Conrad and Morgan Robertson. Artists and architects include Thackeray, Du Maurier, Hopkinson Smith, Robert Chambers, Thomas Hardy and William J. Locke. Medicine and theology are not so well represented. Under the former head we recall for the moment only Smollett (naval surgeon), Holmes, S. Weir Mitchell and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle; under the latter, Sterne, Charles Kingsley, Henry van Dyke, Edward Everett Hale, Ian Maclaren, Ralph Connor and Thomas Dixon. College professors who have either given up their chairs to become novelists or have found time for occasional novels in the midst of their other duties are Sir Walter Besant, Robert Herrick and Brander Matthews.—Bookman.

Out of Her Line.

"Mamma," said the young wife, "George is so irritable. He scolds nearly all the time."

"You must learn to humor him, Janet," counseled her mother. "Rub him the right way. It's easy enough to take his claws if you"—

She Knew.

One day when Molly was about four years old she was sent to find the [illegible]. While she was gone back she said: "That [illegible] isn't [illegible] to play."

"How do you know?" asked her mother.

"'Cause I asked it."—[illegible]

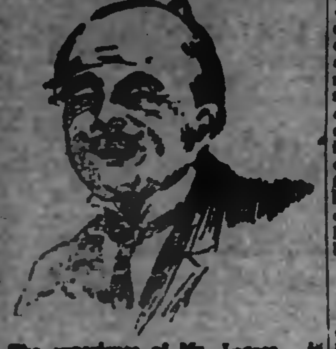
Montreal Man so Ill, Thought He Would Die of Stomach Trouble

Found a Simple Remedy That Has Kept Him Well Ever Since



The experience of Mr. Larose is one very common to-day:

"I suffered from dyspepsia and indigestion for five years. I suffered so much that I could hardly attend to my work. I was weak and lost all courage. I enjoyed no rest until I decided to follow your treatment. To my great surprise I immediately began to feel better. I am now using the second box of Dr. Hamilton's Pills and I feel so well that I want to tell you that I owe this good fortune to your famous pills. I recommend Dr. Hamilton's Pills to every person who is suffering from dyspepsia. Your grateful servant, D. M. Larose, 318 Joliette street, Montreal, P.Q."

All who have weak stomachs, and those who suffer with indigestion, headaches, biliousness, can be perfectly cured by Dr. Hamilton's Pills. 25c. per box, at druggists and storekeepers, or the Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont., and Buffalo, N.Y.

Child's Terrible Death.

Firemen's Xmas Tree

Last night the local firemen held their annual Christmas tree. The boys in blue who protect our homes from fire, had made a big effort for a big time and their efforts were crowned by a signal success. Some seventy people, old, young and younger sat down to a sumptuous repast provided by the fire laddies. Turkeys, pies, puddings, ices and coffee were quickly relegated to a pleasant memory of by-gone enjoyment. Chief Howard occupied the chair in his usual happy way. After the viands had been enjoyed the big Christmas tree was in evidence. On this hung presents for all. The firemen had brought presents for their little ones who heartily proclaimed their enjoyment. The meeting broke up before 10 p. .

An Honest Man

A few evenings ago Mr. "Dinny" Daly, who is well known among a part of the local community, displayed the fact that he is an honest man. It seems that on the evening in question "Dinny" was in a local bar. A Peterborough mechanic who was considerably, what a cowboy would call "lit up," said to Daly, "Dinny," here's a dollar. Go and get me some fried oysters from a restaurant and keep the change." Dinny got the goods but the mechanic had left before his return. Next morning Daly met his patron again. The following conversation ensued: Daly began—"Mr. ——, did you see me last night?" "No, I can't remember seeing you." "Did you give me any money to buy you a lunch?" "No." "Well, your mistaken. You handed me this," producing $2.75, "in mistake for a $1 bill. I got your oysters but you had gone before I returned." The truth of this little story has been corroborated by the Times.

Cured My Cough In One Night

Relieved Me of a Throat Weakness That Resisted Every Treatment

"SUFFERERS FOLLOW MY PLAN"

"After being loaded down with a chronic hacking cough for months, you can imagine my joy at finding even a relief from it," writes Mrs. O. A. Tucker, of Monson, Mass., U.S.A. "I was troubled with an irritable throat weakness and aching that simply defied every medicine I ever used. I was discouraged until a friend recommended Catarrhozone so strongly that I bought a dollar outfit from my druggist. I breathed in the healing fumes of Catarrhozone very deeply—used the inhaler five minutes every hour. After the first day I was better, and next morning my cough was gone. My asthma is cured, my throat weakness is gone, and I am well. For two years [illegible], with the aid of Catarrhozone, I have kept perfectly well. I have also used Dr. Hamilton's Pills for constipation with grand results, and consider your remedies have done wonders for me."

Thousands of wonderful cures are reported every year. Catarrhozone does all that is claimed for it, and is certainly most efficient for colds, bronchitis, throat trouble, asthma and catarrh. The two months' treatment (large size), price $1.00, is guaranteed; smaller size 50c., at all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y. and Kingston, Canada.

Member in Quebec House for Ottawa County Sticks to His Guns

Quebec, Que., Dec. 19.—Mr. Gendron, member for Ottawa County in the Quebec Lebislature, has not given up the idea of having Ottawa pay something to the municipalities where she will have to lay pipes for her waterworks. He has given a notice of motion that he will replace clause nine by another one which will empower all these municipalities to tax the lands possessed by Ottawa. As clause nine now stands, Ottawa is exempted from all municipal or other taxes on all her properties for the purpose of her waterworks. This was accepted after the committee on the strong recommendation of Hon. Mr. Taschereau had defeated Mr. Gendron's proposal to force Ottawa to give $200 a year for school purposes to each municipality trespassed by her waterworks.

To Ottawa as Courtesy.

Hon. Dr. Taschereau would not let Ottawa people say that they had bought the right to come and take Quebec water for such a small amount. He wanted the right of way be given Ottawa as a courtesy.

When the bill comes before the house, probably to-day, Mr. Gendron will move that clause nine be replaced by the following:

"The land acquired or possessed after the coming in force of this Act shall be subject to municipal taxes only in the proportion to those imposed on the other lands of the same municipality.

"Nevertheless, the buildings and pipes laid for the purposes of this act shall be perpetually exempted from all municipal and other taxes."

Insists on French Titles.

Mr. Armand Lavergne will bring again before the House the question of the translation of the title of the Act into French. Mr. Lavergne made a motion to that effect last week before the committee of private bills, who rejected it almost unanimously. The young Nationalist member now comes again with the same proposition.

Clause one of the bill says that this Act may be called "The City of Ottawa Water Act."

Wants English Struck Out.

Mr. Lavergne will move an amendment to replace these words by the following:

"La loi concernant l'Aqueduc d'Ottawa." He wants the English bill to be struck out altogether.

HENRI SCHMIDT INSANE SAID PRISONER'S FATHER

New York, Dec. 19.—When the Schmidt trial resumed this afternoon, the father of the defendant, Heinrich Schmidt, was called by the defence, to go into details of family history.

He told of a nephew of his and of a cousin of the defendant, whom he described as still alive and totally insane.

The Rev. Father John S. Braun, pastor of St. Boniface's Church of this city testified as to marked peculiarities of the prisoner while attending there. Insanity is being used as the main plea of the defence.

ALBERTA JOINS TEMPERANCE FIGHT

Attack Not Directed at Manufacture But at Hotel Bar Trade

Edmonton, Dec. 19.—"Abolish the bar," plans in Alberta are taking definite shape according to information to-day from the Alberta Moral Reform League. A monster convention will be held in Calgary on February 18 next to discuss the entire matter.

The campaign as planned is not to abolish the manufacture or sale of liquor, but simply to aim at the abolition of the bar, and restrict the sale to wholesalers, clubs and possibly with meals at hotels.

Temperance leaders are already in communication with Alberta government leaders on the matter.

JUDGMENT RENDERED IN THE CAVAN ACTION

Mr. Justice Middleton has given the following judgment at Toronto, in the McBain vs. Township of Cavan action, heard before him at the fall assizes:

I. F. Hellmuth, K.C., and J. E. L. Goodwill, Peterborough, for the plaintiff; R. Ruddy, K.C., for defendant. Action for damages for breach of agreement between the parties that Council would open channel and protect it by gates on outlet, plaintiff to close said gates in proper time to protect channel from filling up by spring freshets, council to keep channel open. Judgment—Plaintiff could have cleaned out the ditch himself in 1912 for $50, and in 1913, if it had again filled up, for a like sum. This, I think, fixes his damages at $50. The defence as to validity of contract has no more foundation in law than in morals. Plaintiff seeks a mandatory order directing the municipality to comply with its contract and keep the water courses clear in future. I do not think he is entitled to this. I think his remedy is to himself perform the work contracted for, and to sue for its cost as damages sustained upon each recurring breach. Judgment for $50, with costs fixed at $100, as this litigation has in effect determined the wider question raised by the defendants, the validity of the contract.

In the above action the plaintiff claimed $200.00 damages and also for a mandatory order against the Township directing repair to the watercourse on the plaintiff's property for all time and full costs of the action.

THE CATHOLIC PRESS FULL OF THREATS

The Pope issued a decree a few years ago in which he directed his clergy and people to take an active part of the religious, political social and moral regulation of the world. All things must be restored to the Catholic Church at once, was his order. By way of showing what we may expect, The Times quotes the following from The Catholic Record, London, of August 23rd:

The fires of Smithfield seem farther removed from us than even the lapse of years would indicate BUT IS IT BECAUSE WE HAVE GROWN MORE TOLERANT THAT WE NO LONGER SEND PEOPLE TO THE STAKE? OR IS IS IT NOT RATHER THE RESULT OF OUR INDIFFERENCE TO REVEALED RELIGION? Since we do not claim to know anything definite ourselves, we realize how illogical it would be to try and make others believe as we believe, seeing that theirs and ours may be equally true or equally false. IT WAS DIFFERENT IN THE AGES WE ARE ACCUSTOMED TO CALL INTOLERANT. MEN DID HAVE CERTAIN DEFINITE BELIEFS FOR WHICH THEY WERE PREPARED TO DIE THEMSELVES—OR SEE OTHERS DIE.

NORTH COUNTRY STIRRED

A letter received last night from Apsley, contains the following: 'Very quiet here as regards business—only a little stirred up over Dr. Fernow's remarks which appeared in The Times, taken from The Globe. As everybody almost in the north reads your valuable paper, the indignation is general. I don't know where or how Dr. Fernow saw the degenerates to whom he refers, as he travelled through this section in an auto and made no extended visits through the country. There are more degenerates and criminals to the square acre in his own city (Toronto) than there are to the square mile in this portion of Ontario.'

MAY CLOSE BARS EARLY SATURDAY

Another Check on the Liquor Traffic Expected

Toronto, Dec. 19.—To have the bars close at 1 o'clock on Saturday afternoon is the latest move in the campaign against the liquor traffic, if rumor around the Parliament Buildings, in Queen's Park is to be believed. No official information is available on the subject, but it is understood that legislation for this purpose will be introduced at the next session, and an effort will be made also to stop delivery of liquor from retail stores after 7 o'clock on Saturday evenings, and to close the bars on all legal holidays.

Plunged Down C. N. R. Embankment—Halts Traffic

Kingston, Ont. Dec. 19.—An engine attached to a work train on the C. N. R. jumped the track bout two and a half miles north of Yarker about nine o'clock this morning carrying with it Engineer H. B. Burden Guyon, Que., Hobley Major, 84 Cambridge avenue, Toronto, the fireman and brakeman E. J. Till, Alberta street Toronto.

Doctors Galbraith and Oldham were summoned from Yarker and attended the injured men, who were removed to this city on the regular train. They were removed to the General Hospital. Nine cars followed the engine into the ditch, and were badly smashed. Traffic will be held up till late to-night, though a wrecking crew are at work clearing up the wreckage.

PROTESTANT FEDERATION PASS STRONG RESOLUTION REGARDING HOME RULE

At a meeting of the Protestant Federation, held last night in the Sons of England Hall, the following resolution was carried unanimously, the secretary being instructed to forward a copy to Sir Edward Carson, Belfast:

Resolved, first—That The Protestant Benevolent Federation of Peterborough, Ontario, Canada, one thousand strong, do hereby place on record its entire sympathy with the men of Ulster in their fight against the proposal to place Ireland under the dominion of the hierarchy.

Second,—That this Federation views with alarm the proposition to place in authority over Protestants those who must henceforth yield in all matters of legislation implicit obedience to the Romish priesthood.

Third,—That since the papal decree of 1907 condemning popular freedom and freedom of thought, there can be no compromise on the part of Protestants in their active hostility to the renewed papal claim of absolute and universal authority, and,

Fourth,—That a copy of this Resolution signed and sealed by the President and Secretary, be forwarded to Sir Edward Carson.

DOMINION POLICE WIN IN LONG CHASE FOR COUNTERFEITERS

Biggest Round-up for Years Effected Near Montreal To-day—Flooding Canada With U.S. Ten Spots

LECTURE BY MR CORKERY ON THE THIRTEENTH CENTURY

An interesting and able lecture was delivered last evening by Mr. Corkery in the St. Alphonsus Lyceum, on Simcoe street, in connection with the St. Peter's Ladies' Literary Association. The subject was "The Thirteenth, the Greatest of the Centuries." The lecturer admitted that what he said was mainly derived from one book by Dr. Walsh, and contrived to tell the story of the Thirteenth Century without mentioning Roger Bacon, Simon de Montfort, Robert Grosseteste or Lewis, the ninth of France. Although Dante was mentioned, the supreme social misery which produced his great works was so far ignored that he told his hearers to think of the people of the thirteenth century as supremely happy!

The Catholic view of the century was well stated, but any careful student of the lives of the four great men above mentioned will take with a pinch of salt the lecturer's teaching about the educational and democratic triumph of the thirteenth century being due to the efforts of the Roman Catholic Church.

Montreal, Dec. 19.—The biggest round-up of suspected counterfeiters in the Dominion of Canada was effected to-day, when the Dominion and Provincial officers laid hands on four men whom they suspect of being the prime movers in a counterfeiting game, which has resulted in widespread distribution throughout the Dominion of bogus $10 United States bills.

As the quartette were arrested in Montreal this morning, one man was gathered in by the Joliette, P.Q., police; two more men were under suspicion and will probably be arrested before night.

Traffic Going on Months.

For months Dominion authorities have been much concerned by the appearance of bogus bills of $10 and $100 denomination, copies of United States money.

These bills have been widely distributed, being passed on unsuspecting workers and business men from coast to coast, some of them having been uttered in Vancouver.

Inspector Parkinson, of the Dominion Secret Service, was assigned to discover the forgers, and after a search lasting for months, and which took him all over the Dominion his suspicions directed him to this city.

Found Where They Were Made.

This week, after his supposition that Montreal was the distributing city for the counterfeit bills had been confirmed, Inspector Parkinson called in the assistance of Chief McCaskill, of the Provincial Detective Service, and a still hunt ensued, which ended Thursday with the discovery in the woods north of Joliette of the place where the bills were being made.

The plant located by the two detectives was one of the most complete that the police have ever discovered in Canada. The counterfeiters had chosen the most lonely and out of the way spot that could be discovered in the Dominion, while at the same time they were not far enough removed from the railway to hinder their work of taking in supplies to their camp and bringing out the queer money.

Hidden in Old Shanty.

The place they had chosen to establish their plant was an old ramshackle and deserted shanty, evidently, at one time, used by lumbermen. They had spent considerable money, however, in making themselves comfortable.

Claim Arises Over Dispute Regarding Entrance to Winnipeg Yards

Ottawa, Dec. 19.—A case involving no less than five million dollars, and one of the largest ever tried before the Exchequer Court is being heard by Justice Cassels. The C. N. R. and the Government are the parties involved; the dispute is over the entrance of the National Transcontinental Railway into Winnipeg.

Hon. Arthur Meighen, solicitor-general is handling the case for the Government, carrying out the policy adopted when he was appointed to make the solicitor-generalship a position of usefulness and something more than the sinecure it was under the Liberal regime.

The history of the case is interesting. In 1909-10 the Transcontinental Commissioners built their line of railway from the east into St. Boniface town, along what was known as the Mission street route, and then across the Red River into Winnipeg, turning southerly into the terminal and station and building grounds in Winnipeg.

This line was built at a height of 22ft. in order first to cross the C. P. R. Emerson line, above track level and in order also to get to the proper height at which to enter the station in Winnipeg.

In taking this route properties belonging to the Mackenzie and Mann interests were traversed on both sides of the Red River.

HENRY THE THIEF.

The Black Heart of the Greely Arctic Expedition.

STORY OF HIS EXECUTION.

The Order Issued by the Emaciated Commander and the Way It Was Carried Out—The Rifle Shot That Put an End to the Traitor.

One of the many tragedies of the Greely arctic expedition was the execution of Private Henry, who had been caught time after time stealing food from the scant store of the starving party. Henry alone was strong and active, thanks to the stolen food and to the fact that he did no labor he could possibly shirk.

Lieutenant Greely had warned and warned Henry and had punished him, but to no avail, and finally, after a particularly despicable act of theft, the commander, in fear that Henry's course would cause a general raid on the store of food and thus bring about the destruction of the whole party, condemned Henry to death.

The story of the execution, which makes a new page in history, is told in the American Magazine by Frank B. Copley, who got his data direct from the survivors of the expedition. He writes:

"All his lethargy gone, Greely dismissed the man, asked pencil and paper and, with trembling, emaciated fingers, wrote:

"'Near Cape Sabine, June 6, 1884.

"'Sergeants Brainard, Long and Frederick:

"'Notwithstanding promises given by Private C. B. Henry yesterday, he has since, as acknowledged to me, tampered with seal thongs if not other food at the old camp. This pertinacity and audacity is the destruction of the party if not at once ended. Private Henry will be shot today, all care being taken to prevent his injuring any one, as his physical strength is greater than that of any two men. Decide the manner of his death by two ball and one blank cartridge. This order is imperative and absolutely necessary for any chance of life. A. W. GREELY.'

"In the official report of the Lady Franklin bay expedition it is simply mentioned that 'shots were heard about 2 o'clock, and later the order was read to the general party.' The manner in which the order was executed here appears for the first time.

"Sergeants Brainard, Long and Frederick could not, as ordered, 'decide the manner of death by two ball and one blank cartridge.' Greely had failed to take into consideration that at this time the party had left only one serviceable rifle.

"The three sergeants drew lots to see who would do the shooting. When they had done so they bound themselves with an oath that the identity of the man thus chosen never should be revealed.

"Henry was at the tent on Cemetery ridge with all the other men when the time for putting him to death came. What was to take place, of course, was known only to the three sergeants and the commander. Two of the sergeants remained in the vicinity of the old hut, while the third went to the tent to bring Henry down.

"The man who went for Henry told him that he was wanted at the old camp to help carry up some more of the supplies that had been left there. Suspecting nothing, Henry readily accompanied the sergeant to the place chosen for putting him to death.

"Now, Greely had repeatedly cautioned the three sergeants to take no chances on Henry's getting away, for, although none at Cape Sabine knew the man's past history, enough of the man's black soul had been revealed to make his comrades feel that no crime could be put past him.

"So Brainard, Long and Frederick, cautioned by their commander and warned by their own knowledge of the man with whom they had to deal, had decided that Henry should be made to stoop to pick up something and that then he should be shot from behind. At least one of the sergeants had no more compunction about killing him than he would have had about killing a mad dog.

"But one of the other two men weakened at the last moment. To shoot a man in cold blood from behind, to send him into eternity with no opportunity to compose his soul, was too terrible a thing for him to stand. It was a mistake that nearly proved disastrous.

"Henry was told face to face that he was to be put to death in accordance with the order of the commander, and he was advised to kneel and make his peace with his God. At the same time the executioner appeared with his rifle at a convenient distance before the doomed man's eyes.

"Henry stood agape. He muttered something about something not being right. Near where the third sergeant stood an ax lay on the ground. Henry's gaze, searching the ground, encountered the ax. He sprang for it. A warning cry was raised. The sergeant who stood near the ax jumped and got his foot on it almost as Henry was upon him. There was a cry of 'Quick!' Even then [illegible] of the [illegible] shooting his fellow sergeant if his aim was the least bit unsteady.

"But despite all he had been through the aim of the executioner was true. The rifle cracked, and the bullet sped, penetrating the breast of the [illegible] for whom it was intended. [illegible] Henry [illegible], crying: 'You have tricked me! You have tricked me!' Again the rifle cracked. The second bullet went through Henry's head, and he fell dead."

CHRISTMAS APPEAL

FOR

The Hospital for Sick Children

COLLEGE ST., TORONTO

Dear Mr. Editor:—

Thanks for your kindness in allowing me the privilege of appealing at this Christmas time on behalf of the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto.

It would take more space than you can spare to tell of the good work done for the sick and deformed children of this Province. Let me, however, in a few words, tell you of the progress of the work of the Hospital.

One nurse, six little white beds, a few dollars, a few friends—this was the beginning. The beds have grown to 250, the dollars to thousands, the friends to hundreds. 1875, the first year, 44 in-patients, 67 out-patients; 1912, last year, 1,646 in-patients, 25,007 out-patients; 1875, 1 nurse; 1912, 70 nurses.

Since 1875, thirty-eight years ago, the Hospital has admitted within its walls 21,018 children as in-patients, and 159,231 as out-patients, a total of 180,249, or an average of 4,743 per year. Of the 21,018 in-patients, 15,[illegible] were from Toronto, and 5,[illegible] from other parts of the Province; 10,180 of the total in-patients were cured, and 6,367 were improved.

In the Orthopedic Department last year, of the 1,646 in-patients, 378 were treated for deformities, 35 hip disease, 37 Pott's disease, 2 knock-knees, 10 bow-legs, 62 club feet, 8 lateral curvature of the spine, 44 infantile paralysis, 8 wry neck, and 75 tubercular disease of knee, hip and ankle. In 1912, the Surgical Apparatus Shop manufactured 427 appliances for in-patients and out-patients, including ankle braces, spinal braces, hip splints, bow-leg splints, club-foot splints, plaster jackets, etc.

In this Department in 25 years nearly 800 boys and girls have been treated for Club Feet and 650 corrected. Half of these came from places outside of Toronto. Surely we have a fair claim for help from the people of this Province.

Will you, the reader of this letter, help to give crippled children a fair start in life?

Busy dollars are better than idle tears. The sympathy that helps is good, but the Hospital has to have the sympathy that works.

While Christmas Bells are ringing to the glory of Him "Who made the lame to walk and the blind to see," give, give, give, and help the Hospital to help God's little ones, upon whom the heavy hand of affliction has been laid.

Will you please send a dollar, or more, if you can spare it, to Douglas Davidson, the Secretary-Treasurer of the Hospital, or

J. ROSS ROBERTSON,
Chairman of the Trustees, Toronto.

Prof. Mulveney Known All Over the World

Proprietor of World's Famous Tape Worm Exterminator

Tape worm is bred from a parasite. It is of pear shape, having two, four and six suckers. It lays the eggs which are connected together. They develop and form a body, which is the worm. Each section is an individual, having a sucker or mouth. The worm grows much longer than the bowels where it is located, and sometimes a whole colony of them are found, enough to fill a quart of solid worms, and when put in a bucket of water would apparently fill it. It is the hardest task in the world to destroy this parasite, without doing injury to the individual who may be so unfortunate as to have it, as the parasite clings to the bowels, feeding itself from the body of the victim, and causes them to breed another. It is an internal disease, and causes the victim to suffer all the symptoms of [illegible]. The doctors and physicians are led to believe the patient is suffering from some other disease, as nearly every person has different symptoms. Some have been treated for cancer of the bowels, consumption of the lungs, chronic dyspepsia, nervous prostration, melancholia, hypochondria, hysteria, inflammation of the bowels, appendicitis, and other complaints, when one or more of these worms were eating their lives away.

Prof. Mulveney has made the discovery to free the victim without injury to the system, destroying the parasite as well as expelling the worm with one dose of medicine without any previous starvation. Visit his office, where he has in his possession the most wonderful collection of these parasites which have been expelled from hundreds of people by his famous remedy, some bottles containing colonies of worms, and anyone seeing them cannot imagine how a person could possibly live with them in his bowels. It is surprising the number of people that have them, and [illegible] have them and are not aware of the fact. The letters and testimonials the professor has in his possession are enough to convince you of this alarming fact. Some of the most prominent symptoms are ravenous appetite, dizzy spells, [illegible] in the bowels, a feeling of something moving in the bowels. [illegible] may be in evidence at any time, and this is considered proof of the presence of tape worm. There are many other features of distress which take too long to enumerate. [illegible] have very little distress.

Prof. Mulveney's world famous Tape Worm Exterminator is safe, sure and harmless. No starvation, no danger, is not disagreeable to take. One dose nearly always effective. Information free. [illegible] 167 Dundas street, Toronto.

Our Point of View

These are the melancholy days—the saddest of the year—when father nerves himself for the Christmas touch.

Huerta of Mexico has such an abundant supply of generals that he is not worrying over the eight who deserted him. But if eight privates were to leave his army the loss would be serious enough to drive him to another bottle of champagne.

A citizen informed The Times yesterday that profanity is disappearing from among the candidates for aldermen. Perhaps it is the ratepayers who do the swearing after the election.

A Social service congress is to be held in Ottawa the first week in March, 1914. It is expected that the congress will be a representative one, and that there will be some four hundred delegates in attendance from all over Canada. The addresses at the congress will cover the whole field of social service, and some of the most distinguished speakers in the United States are expected to take part.

+ + +

People in the neighborhood of Paducah, Ky., will not want for roast goose on Christmas. The wild geese are so numerous that farmers are furnishing guns and ammunition and paying hunters a dollar a day to kill the birds in order to prevent them from destroying the corn crops still standing in the fields. There is one spot, at least, which will not feel the high cost of living during the yuletide.

THE TRENT VALLEY AND ITS PEOPLE.

The Christian Guardian says that not many days ago there appeared in one of the Toronto dailies a write-up of the Trent valley and the general impression made by the write-up was that there was a considerable section of the country which was absolutely unfit for farming and should never have been colonized, and the assertion was made that amongst the farmers who still remained upon their farms in this section there was a large percentage "defectives" and "sub-normals." Very naturally the article caused some little stir in the section affected, and the County Council of Hastings immediately challenged the statements attributed to Dr. Fernow. In regard to the number of "abandoned" farms, it is now pointed out that these are not necessarily unworked, and the report simply meant that the original owner had abandoned them, but usually they are being worked by a neighbor. In this sense it is evident that there are not a few abandoned farms in the country. Implication that the people the implication that the people of this region were "degenerate" is declared to be wholly without foundation, and Mr. C. D. Howe, who was the one responsible for the interview upon which the obnoxious article was based, says that he did not use the term at all. And yet when every explanation has been made, the basal fact remains that not in Hastings alone, but in a few other countries, there are tracts which should never have been denuded of their forests. They are not, and never can be made, good arable land, and it is folly for men to try to wrest a living from them in the ordinary way. Without doubt many of them should be reforested as speedily as possible. And as Dr. Fernow has pointed out, there should be proper care taken that this mistake is not repeated in New Ontario. Dr. Fernow declares that there are large tracts of land in this section also which are not suitable for farming, and he urges that we do not make the mistake of advising settlers to settle upon this land. The Government asserts that it is using all possible precautions to avoid the danger suggested, and if it is there can be no objection taken to Dr. Fernow's suggestion. But there is a feeling that a second mistake is such a matter, years of labor and $24,500,000 to complete the gigantic task. The aqueduct is tunnelled through mountains of solid rock, swung across mighty canons, and carried over a wide desert, and it carries a veritable river of water. The height of the source is such that in the descent of the water it is possible to generate 120,000 horse-power of electrical energy, and the sale of this and of water for irrigation will make the aqueduct a most profitable undertaking. The enterprise is purely a municipal one, and it is claimed that it has so far been untainted by graft. In its construction the competitive and bonus system was employed. Each member of a crew which accomplished its task in [illegible] less than the stipulated time received a bonus, and there was also a system of rewards for "records."

Stuffy Feeling About the Nose Relieved at Once

Tells How to Cure Hawking and Spitting, and Drive Out Catarrhal Colds.

Isn't it miserable to have a stuffed up feeling in the nostrils — to be scarcely able to draw a full breath. When Catarrh gets into the nose you're bound to know something is radically wrong.

A dead sure cure, and a simple one to use, is Catarrhozone; you just breathe it—that's all. You see Catarrhozone Inhaler sends healing piney vapors through the nose, throat and lungs, and these antiseptic soothing vapors are death to colds or Catarrh.

Thousands testify every year that nothing ever discovered will cure a cold, or help the throat like Catarrhozone. Mr. Everett L. Wasson, of Blair, N.B., writes—"About five years ago I took a cold in the head, and Catarrhozone got in. It kept increasing by leaps and bounds. I kept putting off getting anything until at last I found I would have to. After trying several things I heard of your remedy, "Catarrhozone," and procured a bottle and began using it. I was not long in finding out I had struck the right thing. I am recommending Catarrhozone to all who have Catarrh, etc."

Catarrhozone is the greatest remedy for colds, etc., since people began to have colds. Get the dollar package and let the whole family use it. Medium size 50c; sample size, 25c. All storekeepers and druggists or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

CHEAPER BUTTER

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—With the present high cost of living in mind, and in view of the fact that this county, an agricultural district, is steadily reducing its output of cheese and butter with a continued soaring of prices for these commodities I would recommend that the government take off their embargo on the sale of oleomargarine. It is alright to protect the Canadian farmer. However, the Canadian farmer seems very well able to protect himself. If you don't believe this, go to our local market and purchase a few dozen cold storage eggs that a farmer sells at 45 cents a dozen and which cost him about 28 cents a dozen. Oleomargarine is palatable, healthy and would, if allowed to be sold, bring some of our too rapidly growing rich farmers to their senses by its competition.

Poverty.

NOT A CANDIDATE FOR MAYOR.

Editor Morning Times.

Dear Sir,—A report has been spread broadcast through the city during the last few days that, on nomination day, I will be a candidate for Mayor. I admit it is an enviable position for any man to have the honour of being mayor of the City of Peterborough, of which we are all so proud, yet I beg to state that this report is absolutely untrue, and at no time did I have any intention of aspiring for such a high position. It is my sincere desire that this office be left in the hands of more capable and experienced men.

I beg to state, however, that if it is the expressed wish of the ratepayers of the West Ward, and the citizens of Peterborough generally, I will again be a candidate as Alderman in the City Council of 1914.

Very Sincerely yours,
Joseph J. Dullea.

WOMEN'S COUNCIL

Edited by the Ladies of Peterborough

On what grounds will the police commissioners be asked to appoint a police woman on the local force?

The official population of Peterborough is 20150, over 11,000 of whom are women and girls and 3,628 are young people between 5 and 16 years of age. About one fifth of the voters are women. The proportion of women wage-earners in Peterborough is more than usually large, as will be evident when the character of our industries is considered.

Modern economic conditions have forced women into the industrial world and the female parasite, the female suffragist, the domestic science and art enthusiast and the economic-independence enthusiast are one and all the product of this great industrial unfoldment of the Twentieth Century, and this industrial unfoldment is exposing all women, willing or unwilling, to the social process, which is changing the old home world into the new world-home.

Under these modern conditions and after a thoughtful consideration of the population statistics, if a large body of representative women consider it in their best interests to have a woman on our police force, have they not a right to it?

There are ninety reasons for feeling the appointment of a police woman to be in the best interests of the community. We will consider a few of them:

"An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure"—and surely this is the most important factor in police work—the prevention of crime—to prevent the [illegible] downfall of young girls,—which problem can surely [illegible] be better solved by a woman than a man.

A police woman should always be present at court where the interests of women and children are at stake. They should be there as a protection to them from the court-loafer who is on the lookout for the unfortunate.

Our public amusements would have better supervision under a woman than a man—this fact is acknowledged by the police in places where women are employed on the force.

There is much personal work to be done by a police woman—[illegible] the personal element in the police work. Many young girls come here to work in our factories, [illegible]

LIKE PRISON LIFE

A Class of Persons in Japan Who Try to Break Into the Jail

THEY MAKE SHAM CONFESSIONS

In Japan there are people who make sham confessions in order to obtain a period of the comparative warmth and comfort of a Japanese prison. The Japan Mail says: "The police slang of the capital has words to describe and distinguish these persons. 'Meshikui,' or the rice criminal, will steal some small article from a shop front in such a way as to be seen doing it. He then makes a bolt of it, pursued by the master of the shop, or some faithful hand, but promptly allows himself to be caught and handed to the police. He has to 'do time' for his pretended theft, but his rice is secured for a period, and when that period has elapsed he will allow himself to be caught again.

"The 'nanshoo,' or 'eel bowl' criminal, is wilier than the one just mentioned. He does not actually commit a crime such as will put him into the convict side of the prison, but allows himself to be found looking in suspicious places, underneath the broad verandas of a temple, or in the garden of a private house. He goes into prison all right, but he secures the more generous treatment of the house of detention, which is to the fare of the convict jail what a dish of eels is to a bowl of plain rice.

"The 'turume' is a criminal who makes a sham confession in order to sneak a free railway ride. The Asahi tells of a case connected with a murder, known as the 'decapitated corpse case,' which took place last year. A man gave himself up to the police in Sendai as the perpetrator of the crime. He was brought to Tokyo and his story investigated. It was found to be a pure fabrication."

AFTER THE TEMPEST

The Genial Calm That Settled Over the Pretty Schoolma'am

A pretty schoolma'am once taught school in a Long Island village. All the young fellows for miles around were mad about her, but the schoolma'am was proud, and none of the boys seemed to stand the ghost of a chance.

Young Jim Brown, the judge's son, was the best looking chap in the town, and Jim probably loved the schoolma'am more than any of her other swains, but he never had the pluck to declare himself. He felt too small and mean before the beauty and learning of the schoolma'am. But one day, the schoolma'am being away on a visit in New York state, Jim asked advice of the editor. The editor said:

"Take the bull by the horns and insert an announcement of your forthcoming marriage in my society column. It will cost you only 50 cents."

So Jim inserted an announcement to the effect that the schoolma'am and he would be married the next month and would spend their honeymoon at Atlantic City.

Well, a short time after this announcement appeared the schoolma'am came back home. Jim heard on all sides how furious she was. For several days he kept away from her. Then one afternoon as she was coming home from school he ran plump into her in the lane.

She let him know at once what she thought of him and his outrageous conduct. She stormed and raved, and her pretty eyes flashed fire. Jim stood first on one foot and then on the other, and finally he blurted out:

"Well, if you don't like it I can have the announcement contradicted."

"Oh, bother it!" said the schoolma'am. "It's too late now."—Washington Star.

SPENDTHRIFT ISABELLA

A Sight That Checked Her Royal Extravagance For Awhile.

We are accustomed to think that the day is long past when a sovereign could oppress and offend a whole kingdom by personal extravagance. But the late Isabella of Spain belonged in spirit to the sixteenth century. An incident of her reckless career—which ended in the loss of the throne—is noted in Munsey's Magazine.

She spent money, pouring it out like water, at a time when the treasury was nearly bankrupt and when the proverb "Poor as a Spaniard" was far too true. All her best advisers urged her to practice economy. Very few of them succeeded, and these only for a short time.

A certain chamberlain of long ago hit upon a plan to make her realize how enormous were the sums that she was spending. Passing through the hall of the palace, she was surprised to see a vast heap of silver pieces, resembling the contents of a great bin of wheat, but piled up to the middle of the floor. The queen summoned her chamberlain.

"What is the meaning of all this money?" she demanded of him.

[illegible] he replied, with a low bow, "this is merely the amount which I have brought out to pay the bill of your majesty's dressmaker."

The queen [illegible] and then laughed, and for several months she was less extravagant in her expenditures for [illegible].

TO THE ELECTORS OF PETERBOROUGH:

Ladies and Gentlemen:—

Last year a large number of ratepayers requested me to be a candidate for Water Commissioner in opposition to Mr. Moore. I not only declined to be a candidate but did what I could to prevent opposition. The Commissioners at that time had law suits on with the contractors where about thirty thousand dollars of the people's money was at stake. Mr. Moore being a lawyer I considered he should be the best posted man on the Commission to fight the contractors and in the interest of the City it would be a mistake to remove him.

This year I have again been waited upon by a large representation of the ratepayers who believe that with my thorough knowledge of all the waters in this district and my many years experience as alderman I should be a capable man for the position. I have consented to be a candidate and my past record in the Council I think is proof that if elected will give you faithful and honest service.

The taking over of the Hydro-Electric system will require a great deal of time, more than any man who has a large business to attend to can spare. Not being in business I can give all the time required, and if necessary will make a personal inspection of every house in the city and see that rich and poor are treated alike.

I can see no reason, with the large body of ready made reservoirs of the Otonabee River there should be any shortage of water for either household or lawn service, or why there should not be a reduction in the water rates. A good supply of good water is a necessity in every house and should be available for the people at a low rate.

To the ratepayers who are now residents of the City and not personally acquainted with me, would say that for a number of years I occupied the position of alderman, and always stood at the head of the poll both as a representative of No. 3 Ward and also after the Ward system was abolished.

General street railway extension and cheap transportation, also cheap light and water, should be the goal of our municipal government. When a worker can have his house and garden anywhere, and is not tied to a locality his prospects are greatly improved.

Trusting that the ratepayers who want good service in the future as I have given the past will give me their hearty support.

I am, yours very truly,

MAIMED CERVANTES

An incident of the battle of Lepanto, which broke the power of the Turks in Europe, has an interest for students of literature. "In the Marquesa galley"—we quote from Commander Currey's "Sea Wolves in the Mediterranean"—"was lying in his bed, sick of a fever, a young man twenty-four years of age, a Spaniard of Alcala de Henares, the son of honorable parents, we are told, although these parents were poor. When this young man heard that a battle was imminent he rose from his bed and demanded of his captain, Francisco San Pedro, that he should be placed in the post of greatest danger. The captain and others, his friends, counseled him to remain in his bed. 'Senores,' replied the young man, 'what would be said of Miguel de Cervantes should he take this advice? On every occasion up to this day on which his enemies have offered battle to his majesty I have served like a good soldier, and today I intend to do so in spite of this sickness and fever.' He was given command of twelve soldiers in a shallop and all day was to be seen where the combat raged most fiercely. He received two wounds in the chest and another which cost him the loss of his left hand. To those to whom he proudly displayed them in after years he was accustomed to say, 'Wounds in the face or the chest are like stars which guide one through honor to the skies.' Of him the chronicler says, 'He continued the rest of his life with honorable memory of this wonderful occurrence, and, although he lost the use of his left hand, it added to the glory of his right.' How glorious was that right hand is known to all readers of 'El Ingenioso Hidalgo Don Quijote de la Mancha.'"

RELIC OF ANTIQUITY

The Seal That Is So Often Used on Legal Documents.

A most absurd thing connected with legal business is the little piece of red, green or blue paper or daub of sealing wax which we often place at the end of a signature to a deed, will or other important document.

It is a very small thing in size, but one to which a great deal of importance is frequently given. It is a relic of antiquity, and no plausible excuse can be invented for continuing its use.

Some of the more progressive states have practically abolished its use by legislation, which deprives it of any technical legal significance. In others, however, it is still used with all seriousness and solemnity, and an almost magical value is given to it by dignified judges that is little less than ridiculous.

A man died years ago leaving part of his estate to another to enjoy while he lived, with the privilege of devising it at his death to others whom he might select by a writing under his "hand and seal." A writing was executed so devising the property, but it was contested by others claiming the property upon the technical ground that the paper contained no seal after the signature and the devise was therefore void.

A wise Philadelphia judge closely scrutinized the signature and after carefully listening to the arguments of lawyers decided that at the end of the signature there was an extra scroll or flourish made with the pen with which the signature was made and that this was sufficient in law to constitute a seal.—Case and Comment.

Be Yourself.

Insist on yourself; never imitate. Your own gift you can present every moment with the cumulative force of a whole life's cultivation, but of the adopted talent of another you have only an extemporaneous, half possession. That which each can do best none but his Maker can teach him. Where is the master who could have taught Shakespeare? Where is the master who could have instructed Franklin or Washington or Bacon or Newton? Every great man is unique. Do that which is assigned to you and you cannot hope too much or dare too much.—Emerson.

Help For the Electrician.

If you are ever puzzled in working with electric wires as to which is positive and which is negative or whether the current is alternating there is no simpler method than the use of a potato. Cut the vegetable in half and insert the ends of the wire into the fresh body. About the positive wire a green stain will at once appear, due to dissolved copper. If the current is alternating the ends of both wires will be surrounded by dark colored stains. —Chicago Tribune.

THEY HONORED THE MONKEY

Most of the wild animals have a place in heraldry, and many strange and impossible creatures, such as griffins, dragons and unicorns, have been invented as emblems of daring and valor. But the donkey and the monkey have not been so used, except in one instance, where the monkey has been adopted to the ranks of titled nobility. The story of this adoption is told by Mr. Curtis in his book, "One Irish Summer."

On the Leinster coat of arms are three monkeys standing with plain collar and chained; motto, "Crom-a-boo," "To Victory." This is the only coat of arms, I am told, that has ever borne a monkey in the design. It was adopted by John Fitzthomas Fitzgerald in 1316 for romantic reasons.

While this Earl of Leinster was an infant he was in the castle of Woodstock, which is now owned by the Duke of Marlborough. The castle caught fire. In the confusion the child was forgotten, and when the family and servants remembered him and started a search they found the nursery in ruins. But on one of the towers was a gigantic ape, a pet of the family, carefully holding the young earl in his arms. The animal, with extraordinary intelligence, had crawled through the smoke, rescued the baby and carried it to the top of the tower.

When the earl had grown to manhood he discarded the family coat of arms and adopted the monkeys for his crest, and they have been retained to this day. Wherever you find the tomb of a Fitzgerald you will see the monkeys at the foot of the effigy or under the inscription.

ORIGIN OF LLOYD'S.

Humble Beginning of Europe's Great Maritime Agency.

Two centuries ago a man who had a cargo to send to the Mediterranean contrived to get rid of some of the risk by inducing a friend to take an interest with him. It was necessary to write out a statement of contract to which the guarantors subscribed. This was the first underwriting. These two men happened to be frequenters of Lloyd's coffee house in London, which was a favorite place for the merchants of the town to gather to discuss business or to gossip.

Others immediately saw the advantage of the scheme which their colleagues had devised, and on the next voyage the risk was parceled out among a larger number of the patrons of the coffee house.

Out of this small beginning has grown the great European maritime agency, still bearing the name of the humble coffee house proprietor, and which not only writes risks on vessels, but rates them and publishes their arrivals at every port the world over, no matter how small or how remotely situated.—"Annals of the American Academy."

E Pluribus Unum.

The country is indebted to John Adams for its national motto, with an Englishman of note sharing in the honor. It seems that while Adams was minister to England Sir John Prestwick, an eminent English antiquary, suggested to him a good motto to represent the union of the American colonies. Adams at once was taken with the idea, which he transmitted to Charles Thompson, the secretary of congress, who on June 20, 1782, reported to that body his design for a government seal. In this the Latin legend "E Pluribus Unum" was to be borne on a ribbon held in the beak of an eagle.

Just where Sir John got the idea is not certain, but it is a fact that the motto was in use on the cover of the Gentleman's Magazine, first published in 1730, and it may have struck his fancy by its applicability to the situation then obtaining in America.

ENGLISH HOUSES

In the Days of Wooden Huts, Thatched Roofs and Clay Floors.

The habitations of English common people for centuries consisted of a wooden hut of one room, with the fire built in the center. To this hut, if a man increased in family and wealth, a lean-to was added and later another and another. The roofs were of thatch, the beds of loose straw or straw beds with bolsters of the same laid on the floor or perhaps eventually shut in by a shelf and ledge like the berths of a ship or by a small closet.

The Saxon thane or knight built a more pretentious "hall," a large open room like the Roman atrium with a lofty roof, thatched or covered with slates or wooden shingles. In the center of the hard clay floor burned great fires of dry wood whose thin acrid smoke escaped from openings in the roof, above the hearth or by the doors, windows and openings under the eaves of the thatch.

By day the "hearthmen" and visitors when not working or fighting sat on long benches on either side of the fire and, as John Hay puts it, "calmly drinked and jawed" or, gathering at long boards placed on trestles, regaled themselves on some sort of porridge with fish and milk or meat and ale.

At night straw or rushes spread on the floor formed beds for the entire company in the earlier and ruder days, when the "lower sort" were glad to share their straw with the cows.—Charles Winslow Hall in National Magazine.

CONQUERING THE AIR.

The Chemist Is in the Battle as Well as the Aviator.

The conquest of the air is being made by the chemist as well as by the aeronaut. The advantage is with the chemist, who not only supplies the aeronaut with needful things, such as the bag and the gas, the frame of the heavier than air machine, the motor and the gasoline, but with remarkable results has also made an independent study of the air.

It is pleasant to have our theories verified. When air was liquefied and solidified, as the theory of heat predicted it would be, there was intense satisfaction in scientific circles. The first great expectations of what liquid air might do were not realized, but important uses for it are being found.

Since its constituents have different boiling points they can be separated from one another by the same methods of distillation that are employed to separate alcohol from water. Thus is obtained nitrogen, from which is manufactured a fertilizer essential to the growth of wheat, known as nitrolime or calcium cyanamide. This is prepared by passing nitrogen over redhot calcium carbide.

The oxygen separated in the distillation process is not wasted, but is used, for instance, in the oxyacetylene blowpipe, the flame temperature of which is nearly equal to that of the electric arc.

The blowpipe is employed to make large rubies by melting small ones together, to weld iron and steel, to cut steel beams any desired length and to cut portholes in the sides of battleships and to do this latter so rapidly as to displace the older mechanical methods.

"I was just telling our friend here, Molly, that it was storming on the day of our marriage."

"Surely not, Hiram! The weather was perfectly lovely!"

"Well, well! I don't know how I got so mixed up about it; probably because it's been storming ever since!" —Atlanta Constitution.

A Fish Story.

"There are as good fish in the sea as were ever taken out of it," remarked Small to Young, who had been refused by Moneybag's daughter.

"Yes, I know. But they are not goldfish."

Circumstances are the rulers of the weak. They are but the instruments of the wise.—Samuel Lover.

GILLESPIE FOR MAYOR

To the Electors of the City of Peterboro

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN :—

At the urgent solicitation of many of my business and personal friends, I have consented to become a candidate for the position of Mayor of your City, and respectfully solicit your votes and influence.

As in the past, I shall not make any rash promises, to gain the vote of any elector, but, if elected, my attitude on every question will be to stand firm for the best interests of our Progressive City.

Having been interested in Peterborough all my life, and one of your Aldermen for five years, I may fairly claim to be in close touch with every section and every interest of the municipality, and familiar with its needs and ambitions.

I believe that in all respects the will of the people should prevail; that a vigorous but economical administration is the best administration, and that if your Chief Magistrate is able to devote a fair proportion of his time to his civic duties, it will not be to your disadvantage if he brings with him the experience and energy he displays in the conduct of a large and successful business of his own.

If my course in the Council during the past five years has in the main met with your approval I shall esteem it an honour to have your further approval and support in the coming contest.

Yours respectfully,

G. A. GILLESPIE

Gentlemen :

I respectfully solicit your vote and influence to return me as Alderman for your Ward for 1914. As a business man with a successful business experience, I feel that our motto should be "Business methods in all departments of the Council." Efficiency linked with economy should be our guiding principle.

I trust you will favor me with your support and I promise should I be returned that I will do my best to merit your approval.

J. J. HARTLEY for MAYOR

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY OF PETERBOROUGH :

Ladies and Gentlemen :—At the earnest request of a large number of the ratepayers I have consented to be a candidate for the position of Mayor for the year 1914.

Being born and having lived all my life in Peterborough, and my whole life's savings being invested in Peterborough, I naturally have a deep interest in the welfare and prosperity of the City.

Should I be elected I promise you that I will guard to the very best of my ability, the interests of the ratepayers and will oppose all unnecessary expenditure. I will do my utmost to keep down the ever increasing rate of taxation consistent with needs of a growing City.

I may say that I am in favor of Municipal Ownership, and am in favor of having all city work done by our own people instead of bringing in outsiders to do it.

I will endeavour to see that the ratepayers get value for every dollar that is expended.

I have had considerable experience in municipal matters, having served [illegible] in the Council and fourteen years on the [illegible] Chairman of that Board [illegible] I was also Chairman of the Board of [illegible] years, so that you will see [illegible] a fair share of experience.

Should you do me the honor to elect me as Mayor of our City I will do my best to serve you to the extent of my ability.

Yours respectfully,

Your Temple of Music

The unmatched beauty of the Greeks' early temples has been the inspiration of architects for 2000 years. But their music is gone—forgotten. No genius can "restore" it as we do the crumbling columns of her Acropolis.

We have caught the spirit of their art, however, in the design of the modern temple of music—the Grafonola.

The Favorite, for instance, embodies the same principles of proportion and contour, and as an example of cabinet-making pays the same tribute to modern music as the architecture of the Greek temples did to ancient music. Grafonola music is worthy of this tribute.

You can put this modern Temple of Music with its inexhaustible repertoire in your own home for as little as $20.00.

You pay for it in convenient monthly amounts, whether you purchase the Grand at $650 or a lower priced instrument.

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN :

May I put before you the fact of my candidature for election as Alderman for Centre Ward. In so doing I venture to hope that I may receive your support.

I make this request proffering to you a thorough acquaintance with the needs of the City in the immediate future and such as are likely to come before your Council for consideration and action.

I believe I can be thoroughly useful to you, as a ratepayer and to the City at large, and should be very glad indeed to have your support [illegible].

SHAVING IN ITALY.

The Barber Must Have Used a Crescent Saw on This Victim.

Italy may be the land of the flea, but it is not the home of the shave.

The barbers there are generally recruited from the ranks of the butchers or the medical students. They must be able to stand the sight of blood. In the early days of medicine physicians called in barbers to do their bleeding for them.

In Italy a physician now does his own bleeding—if he visits a barber shop first.

Everything is done in an orderly manner in the Latin kingdom. The man who yearns to open a tonsorial parlor appears before the municipality to request his license. No influence is required. He does not have to have a pull. No, he cultivates that later.

"Are you qualified?" demand the city fathers.

"Signori," responds the applicant [illegible]. "Does not my father own a horse, and have I not curried it every Sunday? Besides, I have worked in the stockyards."

"Bene," reply the license givers. "You are indeed suited in every way. Here are your shaving papers. Go forth and scrape acquaintance with the strangers within our gates, but cut only distant acquaintances. To cut your friends is bad form and bad for trade."

Then, if the happy neophyte has the tin, he opens up a dissecting parlor. The tin is necessary for razor blades.

One Italian traveler was heard to remark: "I now believe that the martyr St. Loup was skinned alive. I know the man who skinned him. He shaved me this morning." Twelve good men and true looked at his face and then gave their verdict. He was a truthful man.

When a customer enters an Italian barber shop he is [illegible] politely to the operating chair. The back of the chair is stationary, but the headrest lets down to a remarkable degree.

The result is that while the applicant's hips and knees are bent to an angle of ninety degrees his back reclines so that his head moves at a right angle with his back, his chin pointing directly at the ceiling. It requires long practice for [illegible] gentlemen to become comfortable in this position.

Then the operator dips his brush in [illegible] water and brushes it briskly across the soap. He then, with a playful air, dampens his customer's beard, as if to say, "This is really unnecessary, but I yield to the prejudices of a stranger." [illegible]

Christmas Announcement

WE take pleasure in once more presenting to you our Annual Announcement in connection with the Holiday Trade, and would specifically call your attention to the fact that we have secured from the leading markets of the world an up-to-date stock of holiday goods, suitable for Christmas and New Year presents, which we are selling at a bargain. This year we are better prepared than ever to cater to the wants of the public.

In both quality and prices, we defy competition. Our expenses are comparatively insignificant as compared with the other larger stores in the city, and the fact that we have not got to look to the profits from our bookstore trade to carry us through, but have a large printing and book manufacturing business as well, in addition to our rapidly expanding newspaper business.

We have made expensive preparations for the Holiday Trade, and invite the public to call and inspect our stock and get our prices before purchasing elsewhere.

Calendars, Handy Booklets, Christmas and Text Cards

We have in Calendars, Booklets, Christmas and Text Cards a stock of the latest designs, and a very large assortment to choose from. Special discounts to parties taking a number.

Fancy Goods

In Fancy Goods, as in every other line, our stock is up-to-date. We can supply you with presents for young and old, rich and poor, wives, husbands and sweethearts. We only give a mere hint here of the articles with which our shelves are laden:—Brush and Comb Setts, Manicure Setts, Writing Desks, Collar and Cuff Boxes, Glove and Handkerchief Boxes, Ladies' and Gentlemen's Travelling Companions, Jewel Cases, Photo Boxes, Albums, etc., etc. These goods are all new, and made in designs and of material not shown before.

Books for All

We ask an inspection of our stock and prices. We aim to give our customers the best possible value for the money. Dainty Gift Books, Padded Poems, and an endless variety of Cloth and Leather Bound Works. Also Bibles, Hymnals, Children's Illustrated Books, etc.

Games for Young and Old

Our stock in Games is very complete, including Fishpond, Flips, Game of India, Halma, The Century Ride, Lost Heir, Authors, Checkers, Dominoes, Nations, Lotto and all the popular 10 cent games.

New Souvenir Novelties and Small Wares

The following are but a few of the many very desirable articles suitable for Yuletide remembrances: Purses, Card Cases, Burnt Leather Blotters, Pen Wipers and Book Markers; Tea, Crumb, Pin and Ash Trays, Ink Wells, Bon-bon Dishes, Japanese Cups and Saucers, Bread and Butter Plates, Rose Bowls, Vases, Biscuit Jars, all kinds of bric-a-brac, etc.

For Dolls We Lead—Others Follow

We propose to lead this season in the Doll Trade, and are showing Dolls at prices that defy competition. Handsome Kid Dolls, Dressed Dolls in all sizes, Bisque and Composition Dolls, Wax and China Dolls, Rubber Dolls and Dolls that may be used for Fancy Pin Holders. Dolls from 10c up.

Please Remember

1.—That The Times Bookstore has everything marked close to cost.

2.—We can sell cheaper than any other house. The reason we can afford to do so is, because our expenses are practically nil compared with other concerns.

3.—We are large manufacturers of stationery supplies and books, employing about 60 persons, so that in these lines we have goods at first cost.

4.—We sell to the wholesale trade, who again sell to the bookstores and stationers throughout the country, so that by purchasing direct from us you save, in many cases, the profits of two "middle men."

5.—The Times Bookstore is confident that it can give you satisfaction, and would urge an early inspection of our stock before the rush begins. You only have to select what you want and have the goods put aside for delivery when required.

Soliciting the favor of your esteemed patronage, and wishing you the compliments of the season, we remain,

Very respectfully yours,

Times Bookstore

THE TIMES BUILDING, 141 HUNTER ST.

P. S.—If you have any books to bind at any time, kindly let us hear from you, and we will quote prices and show samples of our work. We make a specialty of printing Wedding, At Home and Calling Cards. A trial order is all we ask. We leave the rest to you.

TENDERS FOR PULPWOOD LIMIT.

TENDERS will be received by the undersigned up to and including Wednesday, the 31st of December next for the right to cut pulpwood on a certain area situated on the [illegible] River in the District of Timiskaming.

Tenderers shall state the amount they are prepared to pay as bonus in addition to the Crown dues of [illegible] per cord for Spruce, and [illegible] per cord for other pulpwoods, or such other rates as may from time to time be fixed by the Lieutenant-Governor in Council, for the right to operate a pulp mill and a paper mill on or near the area referred to.

Such tenderers shall be required to erect a mill or mills on or near the territory and to manufacture the wood into pulp and paper in the Province of Ontario,—the paper mill to be erected when directed by the Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines.

Parties making tender will be required to deposit with their tender a marked cheque payable to the Honourable the Treasurer of the Province of Ontario, for ten per cent. of the amount of their tender, to be forfeited in the event of their not entering into an agreement to carry out the conditions, etc.

The highest or any tender not necessarily accepted.

For particulars as to description of territory, capital to be invested, etc., apply to the undersigned.

W. H. HEARST,
Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines
Toronto, Ontario, September 17th,

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for Dam on French River, South Channel, Ont.," will be received at this office until 4.00 P.M., on Monday, December 29, 1913, for the construction of a Dam across the South Channel of the French River, at head of Big Chaudiere Falls.

Plans, specification and form of contract can be seen and forms of tender obtained at this Department and at the offices of the District Engineers, Confederation Life Building, Toronto, Ont.; Post Office Building, Montreal, and on application to the Postmaster at North Bay, Ont.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made on the printed forms supplied, and signed with their actual signatures, stating their occupations and places of residence. In the case of firms, the actual signature, the nature of the occupation, and place of residence of each member of the firm must be given.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank, payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of Public Works, equal to ten per cent (10 p.c.) of the amount of the tender, which will be forfeited if the person tendering decline to enter into a contract when called upon to do so, or fail to complete the work contracted for. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By order,
R. C. DESROCHERS,
Secretary.
Department of Public Works,
Ottawa, December 5, 1913.

Newspapers will not be paid for this advertisement if they insert it without authority from the Department.—[illegible]

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS.

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at the office of any Local Agent of Dominion Lands (not Sub-agency), on certain conditions.

Duties.—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required in every case, except when residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3 per acre. Duties—Six months residence in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and 50 acres extra cultivation. The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land after report by Homestead Inspector on application for patent.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price, $3 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy of the Minister of the Interior.

N.B.—Unauthorized publication of this advertisement will not be paid for.—[illegible]

Berlioz Got His Reward.

Mme. Adelina Patti at the height of her celebrity kept an album in which all the notable people of her acquaintance were expected to write or paint or sketch or compose some little telling fragment. Berlioz had already refused a dozen times to have anything to do with the volume. One evening, however, seeing that he was in an unusually genial frame of mind, she went up to him, book in hand, and repeated her request with a bribe.

"Master, if you will write one little thing in my album—a line even—I will give you your choice of two rewards. You shall either have a kiss or you shall have a wonderful pate de foie gras which has just been sent to me from Toulouse."

Berlioz smiled and was silent for a moment. Presently he said, "Give me your album." Instantly he was provided with writing necessities. Then he wrote, "Opertet pate."

"What does it mean?" asked Mme. Patti, puzzled.

"It means, my child, 'Bring the pate,'" answered Berlioz sweetly.

Mme. Patti pouted and then fetched the promised pate.—Argonaut.

CAPTURED ELECTRICALLY.

A Strange Duel in Which the Lineman Was Victor.

By ALVAH MILTON KERR.

Prindle, our line repairer, was rather slender, but with highly developed muscles in fingers, arms and shoulders and with nerve to face anything. Several years of labor with the pliers had given him a finger grip which caused his chums to avoid shaking hands with him. He could make an insulator tie with a No. 6 iron wire with apparent ease. This remarkable power of contraction in the finger muscles once saved him from probable death.

At the time of which I write a local company in Layton had installed a telephone exchange. Several of their wires paralleled the telegraph wires along the tracks and also those of the lighting and power company in the streets. The result was a bad case of induction, that mysterious transference of electrical impulse between wires where there is no direct connection.

So great was the influence of the telegraph and power wires on the wires of the telephone company that the tickle and clicking of the instruments could be distinctly heard in the telephone receivers, and the singing sound of the dynamos at the power house annoyed every one trying to use the phone.

The manager angrily declared that some enemy of his company had thrown threadlike copper wires across from wire to wire, thus bridging up the currents.

Prindle "went over" the wires carefully twice and reported that he could find no "cross" of that sort. Still he kept studying and inspecting the matter, because the telephone manager's daughter was a very good friend of his.

Emerging from the manager's house one night near the hour of 12, he noticed a dark figure stealing down a side street. Touched with suspicion, Prindle followed after the skulking figure, the "induction mystery" [illegible] in his mind.

Presently the figure crossed a moonlit street and entered an alley leading between two business blocks. Through the alley ran the wires of both the telephone and power companies, and Prindle crept carefully forward through the shadows at the base of the buildings, keeping his eye on the man ahead of him. Suddenly and to the lineman's astonishment the man began walking up one of the telephone poles.

"'Pon my soul," gasped Prindle, "if he hasn't got spurs strapped on his shoes! I guess Manager Towne must be right; some one's tampering with the wires. I'll nail his scalp when he comes down."

With tingling nerves he crept nearer, but to his amazement the climber stopped before reaching the cross arm and skillfully threw the iron hooked end of a rope ladder over the sill of an open window in the side of the building some six feet away. The other end of the ladder he strapped to the pole, then carefully crept across the bridge thus formed and disappeared through the window.

Prindle fetched a low whistle and looked all around. "Whew!" he half whispered. "This is interesting, but [illegible]! That chap has gone into a room above the bank! Must be he's figuring on getting down into the vault [illegible]."

He stood in silence looking up at the window and listening. The slow, soft scraping of some sort of instrument came to his ears. Placing his hand on his hip pocket to see if the little pistol he carried when out late at night was there, he slipped off his shoes and began climbing the pole. Slowly and steadily he drew himself up until his hand was on the strap of the ladder; then he paused. The scraping noise had ceased.

"If that fellow hears me he will likely come to the window and shoot me in the face," was Prindle's thought. [illegible] touch the robber's flesh with the bare ends of the wires he would win; if not he would probably die by the other's hands.

It was a strange duel. They feinted several times, then struck together. The clothing was charred away from Prindle's arm, but the burglar fell in a knotted, quivering heap. The point of one of the live wires had gone up his sleeve, the other had punctured his neck.

When the burglar recovered his senses Prindle had him securely tied with detached pieces of the wire and was at the front parapet of the roof, looking up and down the street for an officer.

The bank people gave Prindle a handsome reward. When metallic circuits had been run by the telephone company on his suggestion and they found the troublesome induction gone, Manager Towne declared the plucky lineman worthy to be any man's son-in-law, and he was.

THE SARGASSO SEA.

If You See It Lying Around Loose Notify the Geographers.

If any one has seen anything of the Sargasso sea he will confer a great favor upon the geographers by reporting his discovery, says a writer in Success Magazine. For some time there has been a suspicion that this prominent feature of the Atlantic ocean maps and of the stories of old sailors is largely mythical.

A recent Norwegian expedition sent out to search for the Sargasso sea reports a great deal of sea, but very little sargasso. It is true that they discovered a place in the north Atlantic where seaweed is rather common, but as for a mass of marine plants so dense that sailing vessels are held fast in it while the mariners die a lingering death of starvation, there is nothing in it. In fact, these [illegible] never been any such place.

If any one will kindly return the Sargasso sea to its proper place in the Atlantic ocean all will be forgiven and no questions asked; otherwise nothing can save this well known phenomenon from going the way of the sea serpent, the mermaid and Dr. Cook's great discovery.

Johannesburg's Rise and Progress.

If any one gifted with prescience a generation ago had written out the story of Johannesburg's rise and progress he would have been regarded as a burlesque Jules Verne. For a city to spring up in the center of South Africa in twenty years, to attract a quarter of a million settled population and crowd an enormous municipal development within a single decade sounds certainly more like imagination than fact. So does the arrangement by which she farms her black domestics out in a suburb ten miles away and runs special trains for them morning and night. But one secret of the town's success rests on her natural throne of forty mile ridge 6,000 feet above the sea and her nine hours of sunshine a day in perhaps the mildest and most equable climate in the world.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Dickens' Desk.

This is the desk whose careless treatment by American railway porters he bitterly laments in a letter addressed to John Forster, dated Dec. 22, 1867. "Nearly every case I have," he writes, "is already broken. When we started from Boston yesterday I beheld, to my unspeakable amazement, Scott, my dresser, leaning a [illegible] countenance against the wall of the car and weeping bitterly. It was over my smashed writing desk."

Among other relics of the novelist which will come under the hammer is the cane chair used by him in his private office when he edited All the Year Round.—Westminster Gazette.

Observatory Without Telescopes.

The Carnegie observatory on Mount Wilson, in California, is of white canvas, like some huge ark. You look for telescopes inside, but in vain; a number of mirrors appear instead, and it is the third of these that does the magnifying instead of the usual telescope tube. Visitors are accommodated in chalets, a little house being apportioned to each guest. Observations have been carried on since April, 1904, and every day a photoheliograph is taken and [illegible] pictures by means of the spectroheliograph.—London Globe.

United States Vessels Not in the Navy.

Considerably less than half the boats belonging to the United States government are a part of the navy. The war department controls a greater number of craft of all kinds than is found on the navy list, while the departments of the treasury, commerce and labor and agriculture all have fleets under their jurisdiction. According to the latest government figures there are but 348 vessels flying the naval pennant.—Popular Mechanics.

Vigorous Health Restored To Run-Down Women

SEEMED TO HAVE LOST ALL AMBITION, WAS PALE AND ANAEMIC.

Made Wonderful Recovery When Dr. Hamilton's Pills Were Used.

"I was never actually sick," writes Mrs. Norman La Pierre, wife of a well known resident of Lebanique, "yet I never could get strong like other women. I ate well enough, but somehow rich and red blood I could never make. When I married I took a great pride in my housekeeping, but it kept me tired all the time. Mrs. Lathance, my neighbor, looked well—she told me her health had been made up by Dr. Hamilton's Pills. I only thought of pills as a physic, but now I know that Dr. Hamilton's Pills are more, for they quickened my stomach, liver and bowels—made me stouter and stronger, gave me such color in my cheeks as I never had before. I sincerely believe Dr. Hamilton's Pills should be used by every woman—that's why I write this letter."

No medicine invigorates and renews health and spirits like Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c per box, five for $1.00, at all druggists and storekeepers, or postpaid from the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y. and Kingston, Ont.

A Belleville Tea Party

On Thursday a number of Austro-Hungarians living on Emily street, Belleville, held a stag party. Whisky flowed freely at the beginning of the party and blood flowed freely at its close. Stove lids sailed through the air. One man opened a vein by putting his thumb through a window whilst the proprietor was thrown bodily down stairs from the second story. Fines from $10 to $25 were levied.

To Stop Motor Boat Trolling.

Bobcaygeon Independent: A meeting of the Fish and Game Association was held on Monday afternoon at the office of M. Boyd Co., the president, A. E. Bottum, Esq. in the chair. A discussion was held on the practice of trolling with motor boats, and after it had been taken from several points of view it was resolved that where as the practice of trolling for maskinonge from motor boats on the Kawartha lakes has become a common way of securing the full limit for a day's fishing, by having as many as six lines from one motor boat and where as the practice is depleting the lakes and is unfair to the man who trolls in his row boat, therefore this Association wishes the Ontario Government to prohibit trolling from motor boats on the Kawartha Lakes.

Local Students Who Won Out.

In the results announced for the Peterborough Model School, the following students have secured limited third-class certificates: Mary A. Ansley, St. Catharines; Martin A. Bates, Minden; Laura M. CITY IN PARAGRAPH

The Public schools of the city and Collegiate Institute closed for the Christmas holidays yesterday.

Mr. T. Cavanagh yesterday shipped a car of horses to Mr. Jacobs, the Montreal horse buyer.

At a meeting of Port Hope Board of Health held on Wednesday the subject of flies, mosquitoes and cess pools were discussed.

Port Hope is going to ask the Government to stock her stagnant streams with minnows to kill the mosquitoes larvae.

The third monthly concert and social of St. George's Society held last night in the W. O. W. Hall was well attended. Refreshments were served.

All the cattlemen charged at Lindsay with creating a disturbance in a G.T.R. car at Fenelon Falls were found guilty. Sentence reserved until next Monday.

A drunk in Belleville's police court yesterday said that someone "hit him one the nose from behind." That's some slugging stunt!

Mr. Daniel Dougherty and family 374 Aylmer street, wish to thank their friends who befriended them in their recent sad bereavement.

The new C.P.R. freight shed was in working order yesterday for the first time. Local manufacturers will now have their freight admirably handled.

Mr. Jos. J. Duffus is out with a denial that he is a candidate in the mayoralty race. A good candidate here withdraws.

Next year more stringent legislation will probably be introduced in the Council to make citizens keep their back yards in sanitary condition.

Bobcaygeon Independent: Jack Jacobs who is camped on the lake opposite Thos. Keith caught a silver grey muskrat. He has been trapping for a long time and says it is the first he ever saw.

Some Letters.

An ingenious person has discovered that the three most forcible letters in our alphabet are N R G (energy), that the two which contain nothing are M T (empty), that four express great corpulence, O B C T (obesity); that two are in a decline, D K (decay); that four indicate exalted station, X L N C (excellency), and three excite our tears, yet when pronounced together are necessary to a good understanding —L E G (elegy) and age.

Willing to Compromise.

"Didn't you promise never to do that again?"

"Yes, father."

"And didn't I promise to whale you good if you did?"

"Yes, but I broke me promise and won't hold you to yours." —Toronto Blade.

TOURISTS IN JAPAN.

Troubles of Those Ignorant of the Language and Native Ways.

All Japanese inns, of course, charge a great deal more to the globe trotting European tourist who does not speak the language, since he or she is not content to travel strictly a la Japanaise and worries the entire household with a variety of strange demands—extra quilts to sleep on because they find the floor hard, an improvised pillow, special food (the ordinary guest takes what is given him and at the hour that his host pleases and is thankful), knives, forks and spoons because he has neglected to practice eating his food with chopsticks, a bath with fresh water in it because he will not follow the custom of entering the bath as soon as he arrives, thus getting the opportunity of first bath and the water while it is fresh, and half a dozen other requirements. He reserves his chadai also until he leaves, and often the host misunderstands this action and, fearing he will get no recompense for his extra trouble, augments the bill accordingly.

These visitors not unnaturally treat the waitresses like so many novel playthings, especially travelers of the sterner sex, who sometimes fail hopelessly to distinguish between professional geishas and ordinary maidservants.—Vera Collum in Wide World Magazine.

The Paris Apaches.

Police of Courbevoie, a suburb of Paris, noticed two burglars climbing into the garden of an uninhabited house one night. They called up their dogs and made for the burglars, but the burglars had brought trained dogs with them, too, and their dogs raised the alarm. A pitched battle between the police and the Apaches and the police dogs and the Apache dogs took place. The two burglars were arrested, but their dogs left one of the police dogs dead on the field and escaped. The police have information that a large number of dogs have recently been trained by malefactors to fight the trained dogs of the police and to help their masters, the Apaches, to break the laws.

MANYUEMA CANNIBALS.

African Savages That Grind Their Teeth to Sharp Points.

The most terrible species of cannibals living are the cruel, bloodthirsty Manyuema of Tanganyika, in central Africa. Living to the west of Tanganyika, these cannibals, clothed in primitive fashion with a piece of bark cloth rudely hammered out from a neighboring tree, have an appetite for human flesh which is well nigh insatiable.

They exercise the most fiendish cunning in tracking down their quarry, choosing fat, well covered people in preference to those who are lean and bony. Their favorite practice is to waylay their victims at eventide so that they may have before them a long night in which to effectually dispose of their prey by cutting it up into strips and drying it over a low fire in the woods. These dried strips of human flesh are carefully preserved for future use, and on two occasions these gruesome forest food depots were discovered and their owners killed by the Wafipa people, who inhabit east Tanganyika.

Most of these cannibals file their teeth to sharp points so as to enable them more easily to tear the flesh from the bone when they have to eat their abominable meal in a hurry.—Wide World Magazine.

New Zealand's Glaciers.

The great size of the glaciers around Mount Cook, in New Zealand, has been often remarked. The Tasman is eighteen miles long, the Murchison ten miles, the Godley eight miles, the Mueller eight miles and the Hooker seven miles. Most of these glaciers have moraines of exceeding roughness, but the approaches to them are not steep, as is usually the case with European glaciers. The southern Alpine snow line is only a little over 7,000 feet. Glacially polished rocks are seen, and in many ways the mountains are singularly different from those of [illegible] Europe.

TAMPICO HOURLY EXPECTS ANOTHER ATTACK BY REBELS

Mexico City, Dec. 20.—Another determined attack on Tampico by the rebels, heavily reinforced in numbers, arms and ammunition, was to-day considered inevitable here. Renewed fighting at the seaport was expected any hour.

Latest reports in the capital were that the rebels, carrying eight big guns, were advancing on Tampico. The besiegers, it was semi-officially stated, have obtained an additional carload of powder, together with two carloads of dynamite and eight locomotives. Their plan is to blow up all means of retreat open to Federals, which would at the same time cut off the approach of reinforcements and then make a concerted attack on the town proper. The oil companies here, through orders to their representatives at Tampico, have emptied all of the big oil tanks there, in anticipation of the renewed attack.

Not to Interfere.

The Mexican Government said that Rear-Admiral Fletcher, commanding the American squadron off Tampico and tacitly directing the international fleet has orders not to interfere in the next assault on Tampico and a fight to the finish is expected. The rebel advance on Tampico is regarded as the explanation of yesterday's despatches from Vera Cruz that Rear-Admiral Fletcher and Rear-Admiral Sir Christopher Cradock has ordered the Chester and the British cruiser [illegible], then off Vera Cruz, to proceed at once to Tampico.

SIR JAMES' RETURN NOW INDEFINITE

Prolonging Holiday Beyond Expectation of Some of His Friends

Toronto, Dec. 20.—Sir James Whitney has prolonged his holiday beyond the expectation of some of his friends. It was confidently expected by members of the provincial cabinet that he would have been in the city last Wednesday, but the premier is carrying out the spirit of his announcement on leaving, to the effect that his absence would be indefinite.

It is recognized, however, that Sir James is regaining his customary vigor with rapidity and will return in splendid health. This was the message received by prominent members of the administration.

Dr. Preston, of Lanark, the Conservative whip, who was in the parliament buildings during the week surveying the ground before the legislature opens, stated that the premier was in good health and merely enjoying a vacation, which faithful services in his office had necessitated.

Opening Feb. 1, Maybe.

As to the opening of the house, Dr. Preston was not prepared to speak with finality. It was likely to take place about Feb. 1, but nothing definite had been settled upon.

BRITAIN, IF AT WAR, TO BE ASSURED OF CANADIAN OIL

All New Leases Given by Ottawa Government Came Under New Regulations

Ottawa, Dec. 20.—In the new regulations governing oil leases and prospecting leases for oil there is inserted a provision whereby, in event of war, the British admiralty will have control of the wells and the product. Since oil fuel has been adopted in the British navy the admiralty has made a survey of the oil producing areas within the empire to ascertain the certainty of sources of supply in sufficient quantities. While the new regulations were being drafted experts from Great Britain visited the recently discovered oil bearing areas in Alberta and assisted the department in this work. The discoveries in Alberta are of sufficient importance to attract the attention of the admiralty and this provision in the regulations indicates the policy of the government on this question.

Another important change is the regulation governing the expenditure of money by prospectors in drilling for oil. Formerly certain sums had to be expended on each section under the lease, but the new regulations permit the total expenditure on one section, and at the same time protecting the rights of the prospectors on their remaining lease. Such a change has long been desired by prospectors and others engaged in development of oil bearing areas, and this change will do much to encourage legitimate expenditure on such work.

The new regulations are now before Council, but will not go into effect until the beginning of the year. Hon. Dr. Roche, minister of interior, has gone west and on his return confirmation will be given to the new regulations.

THE CITY STREET LIGHTING ASSURED

Peterborough Light and Power Company Make Generous Offer to City.

The following is a copy of a letter sent by the Peterborough Light and Power Company to the City Council. It certainly does credit to the former, and no doubt will be taken advantage of by the Council. The letter speaks for itself:

December 20th, 1913.

R. R. Armstrong, Esq., City Clerk,
Peterborough.

Dear Sir,—I beg to confirm my statement made yesterday, before his honor Judge Huycke, to the effect that in the event of the City of Peterborough not having obtained possession of the plant of the Peterborough Light and Power Company, Limited, by the 1st January, 1914, that that Company will be pleased to continue lighting the streets of the City of Peterborough, on such terms as is required for the now lighting the streets, under their contract, which expires on the 31st day of December, 1913.

We will be willing to continue this, until such time as the City does obtain the possession of our plant.

Yours truly,
THE PETERBOROUGH LIGHT & POWER COMPANY, LIMITED
[illegible] Colville,
Vice-President.

What's A Man?

"Men are what women marry. They drink and smoke and swear, but don't go to church. Perhaps if they wore bonnets they would. They are more logical than women, and also more zoological. Both men and women sprung from monkeys, but the women sprung further than the men."

MAYOR BRADBURN NOT A CANDIDATE

The Times is requested by His Worship Mayor Bradburn to state that he will not be a candidate for Water Commissioner. He has been called out of the city to-day on business, but on his return will explain the causes which led him to withdraw from the contest.

FORTY INJURED IN TRAIN WRECK

THE BANK OF OTTAWA HAS RECORD YEAR

The Bank of Ottawa, which is the only financial institution with head office in the Capital, closed on November 29th the most successful year in its history. Every department of the Bank's activities showed progress, the net profits, amounting to $706,000, were the largest in its history, while deposits, reserve, current loans and total assets all made substantial gains. The latter now stands at $54,674,000. The rest account was increased during the year to $4,750,000 and is now $750,000 greater than the paid up capital. A feature of the report is the amount of cash, Dominion notes and other quickly available assets, these bearing an unusually high ratio to the total liabilities to the public. Altogether, the showing made by the Bank was a most satisfactory one, and reflects favorably upon the management of the Bank.

The Peterborough Branch, whilst a comparatively recent addition to the local banks, has already, under the capable management of Mr. G. C. Wainwright, taken a leading place amongst our financial institutions. The Bank here has developed a widespread clientele that is daily increasing.

TO COMPEL REMOVAL OF GREAT N. Y. FACTORY

New York, Dec. 20.—Suit was filed to-day by the State of New York to compel the American Sugar Refining Company to remove its immense plant from the Brooklyn water front. The plant occupies four city blocks, was erected at a cost of millions, and more than 1000 workmen are employed therein.

BANK THIEVES TURN PHILANAHROPIST

Hold-Ups Enter Bank of Ottawa and Leave Minus a Ten Dollar Bill

Vancouver, Dec. 20.—A gang of robbers this morning entered the Robson street branch of the Bank of Ottawa of this city, but failed to get away with any money; in fact they left a small souvenir in the shape of a $10 bill.

It was just after the bank opened at 10 o'clock, that two young men approached the teller's desk, and pushing through a $10 note asked for change. The teller reached for his cash and at the same moment each of the two men produced a revolver and commenced shooting. The teller ducked under the counter. The robbers fired five shots and tried to reach the bills, but could not do so. People of the neighborhood began to rush towards the bank and the robbers, still firing, started away. They escaped in the fog, which was heavy at the time. The bank still has the $10 bill brought in by the robbers.

FAKE DETECTIVE GETS NINE MONTHS IN CENTRAL PRISON

St. Catharines, Dec. 20.—John H. McIntyre, who posed as a private detective, using a fake badge in an effort to get two Englishmen, Thomas and Fred Whitehead, into the United States after they had been turned back at the border, was sentenced to nine months in the Central Prison. McIntyre got ten dollars from the men to pay car fare with and forgot to give them the change.

AN OPEN LETTER TO MAYOR BRADBURN

The following letter dealing with the power and light situation, will be read with interest:

To His Worship Mayor Bradburn:

Dear Sir,—The ratepayers of Peterborough are completely "at sea" in respect to our Hydro Electric scheme. Even the aldermen, with whom I have talked have vastly different ideas as to what property the city is going to get or how much it will cost after taking expropriation proceedings against the Peterborough Light and Power Company, authorized by the by-law passed by themselves.

I am making this an open letter, Mr. Mayor, not in any spirit of criticism against you or any of the aldermen, I am seeking information on behalf of myself and many other ratepayers. I told you personally I would support you if you again ran for Mayor and I expected to support your candidature for Water Commissioner if you decided to run.

You have personally followed and have been instrumental in directing every step of the City's Hydro Electric proceedings from the beginning, so you are no doubt familiar with all the details and can explain the present situation.

To get at the explanation definitely I am going to state certain facts as many ratepayers understand them, and desire to ask you some pertinent questions.

The ratepayers have been led to believe that the city could obtain possession of the company's pole line and other distributing equipment in the City of Peterborough, for an approximate sum of $94,000.00 and upon payment thereof the company's franchise for 30 years to place poles and wires on the streets would thereupon cease and determine. Is this a fair and correct statement of the facts?

It is expressly provided by the Statutes of Ontario 1913, Chap. 114, Section 4, that "upon the acquisition of and payment for the lands, "property, erection machinery, works

NEVER WAS MERGER SAYS TELEGRAPH CO. PRESIDENT

Washington, Dec. 20.—Administration supporters after informal conference on the telephone dissolution and going over so much of the plan as has been published, were of the opinion that latest development would at least retard the movement ownership question to congress. Some though the company's voluntary readjustment to meet the view of the department of justice has created an entirely new situation which the Government ownership supporters would have to consider before going further.

Representative Lewis of Maryland author of the parcels post law, and active in the movement for government ownership of telegraph and telephone some time introduced a resolution however to direct the house postoffice committee to go ahead and report a bill for government ownership of telephone lines to be operated by the postoffice department. In a statement accompanying his resolution Mr. Lewis contended that the action of the Bell Telephone Company to prevent litigation under the anti-trust law did not affect the legislative situation at all.

"MONA LISA" TRAVELS IN STATE TRAIN CROWDED ALONG ROUTE

Rome, Dec. 20.—Da Vinci's "Mona Lisa" arrived here to-day from Florence escorted by Dr. Corrado Ricci, director-general of fine arts in Rome, Prof. Giovanni Poggi, director of museums in Florence and numerous officials. The train on which the picture was brought here was greeted along the entire route in the same manner as a royal personage.

The painting was taken from the station to the ministry of fine arts, where it was inspected by the King of Italy and then consigned to Camille Barrere, French Ambassador to Italy, who on Monday, will return it to the Italian Government which is to place it on exhibition for three days. Afterwards the picture is to be on exhibition in Milan before being handed over definitely to the French authorities for transport to Paris where it is to be placed in the Louvre museum from which it was stolen by Vincenzo Perugia on Aug. 22, 1911.

WEST CLEARED OF GRAIN WITH LITTLE BLOCKADE

Winnipeg, Dec. 20.—With the official closing of navigation on the Great Lakes for the season of 1913 there has been performed the greatest physical undertaking ever attempted by any railway in the world in an equal length of time. Whether due to good weather, an increase in railway terminal facilities, a good supply of engines and cars, proper organization, or a combination of all these, the fact remains that this fall has seen the greatest amount of grain moved from the time the crop was threshed until navigation closed, in the history of the west. Fall after fall, beginning as far back as 1887, grain blockade was the only question which farmers looked forward to, always hoping, but never really expecting, that conditions would so change that there would be an absence of grain blockade.

The railways said: "Surely the public does not expect us to invest capital account to the extent of purchasing cars, engines and other necessary equipment capable of moving the grain crop of the west in three months and let fifty per cent. of this equipment stand idle for the remaining nine moths, subject to elements and to damage that will naturally occur to cars standing idle." The only answer the public gave was that it wanted the crop moved, and it was up to the railways to move it. The question of capital investment and organization capable of moving that amount of traffic in a given time was something the public was not interested in. That was always a problem for the railways to solve.

Moved From Lakes Fast.

So the railways settled down to solve the problem. It is now up to the public to decide whether this fall they have solved it. Last year about the middle of November, the elevators started to fill up, and this automatically reduced the loading capacity, which in turn compelled the railways to slacken up on the grain movement.

COURTS HAVE BEEN CLEARED CELEBRATED MR. McNAMARA CASE

Darrow Charge Dismissed After Hanging Fire For the Past Two Years

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 20.—Court records of Los Angeles County were cleared to-day of the McNamara dynamiting case, when the indictments charging bribery against Clarence S. Darrow, who was counsel for the dynamiters, were dismissed. District Attorney Fredericks told Judge Jackson of the superior court that Darrow had been tried twice, once when the jury acquitted him, and again when the jury disagreed, and that evidence in the light of previous experience was not sufficient to convict.

The indictments against Darrow were the outcome of the sensational episode immediately preceding the sudden determination of the McNamaras to plead guilty when Bert Franklin, one of Darrow's agents, was arrested on the street in the alleged act of bribing George Lockwood, juror, summoned in the dynamiting case. Robert Bain, the first juror chosen to try the McNamaras, then confessed that he had accepted a bribe of $500 with the promise of $3000 more. Franklin became a state witness against Darrow. The attorney was acquitted when tried in the Lockwood case, the jury disagreeing in the Bain accusation.

Darrow has been under bonds aggregating $10,000 for two years. His bondsmen were dismissed to-day.

A POSSIBLE HINT FOR LOCAL FIREMEN

Good Work Done at Ottawa May Encourage Local Fire Laddies

Ottawa Free Press: That very few people are cognizant of the work that is being accomplished by the Ottawa fire department in regard to training and instruction was demonstrated Saturday at the drill school, No. 4, station, Cumberland street. From a spectator's point of view the exhibition given by the men in the various demonstrations were high class in every particular.

Instructor Dicks was the recipient of many encomiums at the conclusion of the drill while the men themselves were congratulated on all sides regarding their excellent showing.

NET AND THE TOWER.

Firemen Leslie, Mitchell, Paquette and Charbonneau started the first part of the programme with an exhibition of scaling ladder work. Receiving the ladders from the ground, one of the firemen rushed them to the first floor, where they were clamped to the window sill. This was repeated by the same man at each storey till the top was reached.

All showed marked ability and at the finish the four [illegible] aloft with outstretched hands, making an effective finale to a difficult feat.

JUMPED TO NET

Quite a bit of variety was introduced when the efficacy of the Browder net was tested. Firemen stationed in the second story jumped into the net which was waiting below, held by eight [illegible]. Sometimes the impact of the jumper caused those holding to relax their grip, and quite a few slipped, to the great delight of the crowd.

The men fell gracefully from the window sill, and when near the net assumed a sitting posture, which broke their fall.

Ned Page, who holds the long distance jumping record, introduced a diversion with his swan dive.

"Away back," yelled Page to the net men when he mounted the sill. Then, to the amazement of the crowd the intrepid Page dove head downward, and maintained that position till within a few feet of the net when he straightened out and landed on all fours.

This spectacular piece of work was warmly applauded.

An army of kids perched on roofs of adjoining houses were given an unexpected shower when the deluge stream which was being worked from the tower was deflected on them and a general scurry out of the danger zone resulted.

DELUGE STREAMS.

Following this a demonstration was given of the power of the Siamese or deluge stream under different pressures.

A miniature fire scene was staged as a finale, when a small wooden house, built for the occasion, was burnt in the middle of the yard.

As soon as it was blazing sufficiently a stream from the chemical was turned on. This immediately subdued the flames and showed the chemical to be a powerful operative when used on incipient fires.

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY

Ladies and Gentlemen:

The retirement of Mr. W. H. [illegible] has decided me to acquiesce with the desire of a number of ratepayers who wish me to be a candidate for a seat on the Utilities Commissioners' Board for 1914.

We all realize that the Board of Water Commissioners is, and needs to be, an efficient, business like organization. For the coming year, the management of the local Hydro-Electric will be an important addition to the duties of the Commissioners.

It will be my aim, if honored with a seat at the board, to co-operate with the present members of that commission, and to assist in maintaining the success achieved by the Waterworks department.

I shall also endeavor to help, as far as is in my power, with the [illegible]

AUNT SALLY'S CIRCUS

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1913, by Associated Literary Press.

Aunt Sally Davidson had reached the age of sixty-five and was living with a married daughter. She was a little, brisk old lady, and the care of two squalling young uns and all the housework fell on her shoulders. She could walk a mile with any one, and the Monday washing was always out before noon.

Aunt Sally was noted for her patience and good temper, but there came a day in this her old age to try her soul. A circus was coming to town, and to the utter amazement of her daughter, son-in-law and all others she expressed a determination to be a spectator.

"Why, ma, you are a member of the church!" exclaimed the daughter.

"So I am, but don't members of the church want to see a rhinoceros and giraffe?"

"And your minister will preach against the whole thing," added the son-in-law.

The circus was a week away yet, and during that time the matter was brought up again and again, but Aunt Sally stuck to her resolution.

The day of the circus came at last, and after a hasty dinner Aunt Sally donned her sunbonnet and freshly ironed calico dress and hied her way to the circus grounds. One last appeal was made to her as she was ready to go. The daughter had a red flannel petticoat that had been worn only three winters. This was offered up as a sacrifice, but was rejected. Son-in-law and daughter were so angry that they stayed at home. It was believed that Aunt Sally had borrowed the necessary half dollar somewhere, but in this they were mistaken. She was going without money and depending on Providence to see her through.

We who have depended on the same thing know in advance what answer Aunt Sally got when she walked softly up to the ticket taker and, putting on her most winning smile, said:

"Will you please let a poor old woman in to see the [illegible] forty feet long?"

She was, of course, laughed at and told to go home. "Home" wasn't very far with her. In walking around the big tent she saw a boy crawl under the canvas, and she lost no time in following suit. She rose up among the benches and took a seat, and if any one ever enjoyed a circus it surely was she. She didn't miss a handspring, and when the performance was over she lingered and inspected the animals until turned out. On her arrival home she was met by sulky looks, but nothing dampened her happiness. She came near going over to the minister's to repeat some of the clown's jokes and ask where the wickedness came in, but had to be satisfied with saying to the daughter:

"May, I want to go to heaven with the rest of you, but as sure as you live if another circus comes along I'll attend it and have just as good a time as I did today!"

Next morning the early risers of the village were treated to a rare spectacle. Aunt Sally was out on the grass in front of the house in scant attire turning handsprings or trying to. She made pretty fair work of it until her son-in-law came out and carried her into the house, where she was given an awful lecture on the enormity of her offense, but she failed to realize the enormity part.

"Look here, now," she said in reply. "I'm sixty-five years old, and I've got to keep limbered up to be worth anything around the house. We've got a lot of goose grease down cellar, and I'm going to rub myself all over and keep at this handspring business. I'll soon be able to do more work."

"I'll leave the house if you do!" threatened the son-in-law.

"I'll send for the minister to talk to you!" added the daughter.

"Children, I've got to limber up or my knees will soon be like sticks. I hain't doing nothing to disgrace nobody, and I shan't stop for the minister. I wish I could borrow a bareback horse of somebody. I think I'll go over and ask Deacon Peagram for his old gray mare."

After breakfast off she went, and as she couldn't get the horse she came back home to arm herself with a clothes pole and attempt to walk the top rail of a six rail fence. She couldn't be carried in this time, and the son-in-law ran for the parson. The good man left his sermon unwritten and came on the trot. Aunt Sally waved her hand to him and fell off the fence and turned cart wheels around a large circle. Not until she was out of breath and had kicked her heels high in the air was she got into the house. Then the parson began to tell her how awful it was, but he had gone the wrong way about it.

"If I can't go to heaven and the circus, too, then I'll keep up these tricks," said Aunt Sally as she set her jaw.

"But think of the wickedness!"

"Will I go to heaven or not?"

"You know what it says about the wicked."

"Yes, but will I get there or be kept out?"

"If you repent"—

"But I don't. I have done nothing to repent of. Parson, it's either heaven or more handsprings!"

"Well, being as you are—"

And although Aunt Sally [illegible] "backsliders" the [illegible] before she died, and her family [illegible] began the legend, "Gone to Her Reward."

Strange Savage Accomplishment.

In British Columbia dwell certain tribes of Indians who read and write shorthand with facility. The story of the manner in which they acquired the accomplishment is a truly remarkable one.

It is stated that a Briton who visited the country of the Indians as a missionary found himself so hampered by the ignorance of the tribes, who could not read the Bible he gave them, that he set to work to teach them shorthand as the quickest means of enabling them to read and write! It seemed a doubtful experiment at first, but being based on the sound of the words there was no need to learn spelling. The priest began by teaching the more intelligent men, and then sending them to teach the others.

So successful was the undertaking that there is now scarcely an Indian, old or young, in the district who cannot read and write shorthand.

CHRISTMAS APPEAL
FOR
The Hospital for Sick Children
COLLEGE ST., TORONTO

Dear Mr. Editor:—

Thanks for your kindness in allowing me the privilege of appealing at this Christmas time on behalf of the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto.

It would take more space than you can spare to tell of the good work done for the sick and deformed children of this Province. Let me, however, in a few words, tell you of the progress of the work of the Hospital.

One nurse, six little white beds, a few dollars, a few friends—this was the beginning. The beds have grown to 250, the dollars to thousands, the friends to hundreds. 1875, the first year, 44 in-patients, 67 out-patients; 1913, last year, 1,646 in-patients, 25,5[illegible] out-patients; 1875, 1 nurse; 1913, 70 nurses.

Since 1875, thirty-eight years ago, the Hospital has admitted within its walls 21,918 children as in-patients, and 159,331 as out-patients, a total of 180,249, or an average of 4,743 per year. Of the 21,918 in-patients, 15,[illegible] were from Toronto, and 6,[illegible] from other parts of the Province; 10,[illegible] of the total in-patients were cured, and 6,367 were improved.

In the Orthopedic Department last year, of the 1,646 in-patients, 378 were treated for deformities, 26 hip disease, 37 Pott's disease, [illegible] knock-knees, [illegible] bow-legs, 62 club feet, 6 lateral curvature of the spine, 44 infantile paralysis, 6 wry neck, and 75 tubercular disease of knee, hip and ankle. In 1912, the Surgical Apparatus Shop manufactured 427 appliances for in-patients and out-patients, including ankle braces, spinal braces, hip splints, bow-leg splints, club-feet splints, plaster jackets, etc.

In this Department in 38 years nearly 800 boys and girls have been treated for Club Feet and 650 corrected. Half of these came from places outside of Toronto. Surely we have a fair claim for help from the people of this Province.

Will you, the reader of this letter, help to give crippled children a fair start in life?

Busy dollars are better than idle tears. The sympathy that helps is good, but the Hospital has to have the sympathy that works.

While Christmas Bells are ringing to the glory of Him "Who made the lame to walk and the blind to see," give, give, give, and help the Hospital to help God's little ones, upon whom the heavy hand of affliction has been laid.

Will you please send a dollar, or more, if you can spare it, to Douglas Davidson, the Secretary-Treasurer of the Hospital, or

J. ROSS ROBERTSON,
Chairman of the Trustees, Toronto.

Prof. Mulveney Known All Over the World
Proprietor of World's Famous Tape Worm Exterminator

Tape worm is bred from a parasite. It is of [illegible] shape, having two, four and six suckers. It lays the eggs which are connected together. They develop and form a body, which is the worm. Each section is an individual, having a sucker or mouth. The worm grows much longer than the bowels where it is located, and sometimes a whole colony of them are found, enough to fill a quart of solid worm, and when put in a bucket of water would apparently fill it. It is the hardest task in the world to destroy this parasite, without doing injury to the individual who may be so unfortunate as to have it, as the parasite clings to the bowels, freeing itself from the body of the worm, and remains there to breed another. It is an internal demon and causes its victim to suffer all the symptoms of disease imaginable. The doctors and physicians are led to believe the patient is suffering from some other disease, as nearly every person has different symptoms. Some have been treated for cancer of the bowels, consumption of the bowels, [illegible] of the lungs, chronic dyspepsia, nervous prostration, melancholia, hypochondria, hysteria, inflammation of the bowels, appendicitis, and other complaints, when one or more of these worms were eating their lives away.

Prof. Mulveney has made the discovery to free the victim without injury to the system, destroying the parasite as well as expelling the worm with one dose of medicine without any previous starvation. [illegible] his office, where he has in his possession the most wonderful collection of these parasites which have been expelled from hundreds of people by his famous remedy, some bottles containing colonies of worms, and anyone seeing them cannot imagine how a person could possibly live with them in his bowels. It is surprising the number of people that have them. Thousands have them and are not aware of the fact. The letters and testimonials the professor has in his possession are enough to convince you of this alarming fact. Some of the most prominent symptoms are ravenous appetite, dizzy spells, headaches, cramps in the bowels, a feeling of something moving in the bowels. Segments may be in evidence at any time, and this is complete proof of the presence of tape worm. There are many other feelings of distress which take too long to enumerate. Strange to say some people of strong constitution have very little distress.

Our Point of View

This great family journal doesn't resist the temptation to say that every time a girl gets married she makes a name for herself.

A man who has some appreciation of the fitness of things is Mr. Jugowhiski, who runs a saloon in the Jewish quarter in Montreal.

The Examiner says that "what a man earns doesn't interest his wife so much as what he gets." Oh, no. What really interests her is the amount he coughs up.

All incomes of more than $800 a year are taxed in the United Kingdom to maintain imperial naval defence. Canada does not contribute a farthing toward this tremendous expenditure.

Lack of desire to eat after the death of a near relative led W. Bertleman, of Harrisburg, Pa., to abstain from all food for fifty days. Although he is ninety five years old, he apparently suffered no ill effects from the fast.

+ + +

Canada, according to Sir George Paish, editor of the London Statist, and one of the world's foremost financial authorities, gets its money on the London market cheaper than any other country. This is just one of the benefits of our British connection.

A WAR ON THE SLUMS

In outlining his great land reform scheme for England, Lloyd George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, said that one thing the government intended to do was to destroy the slums of all the English cities and substitute for them cleanly and sanitary dwellings out of the range of smoke and beyond the rattle of street traffic.

Probably for no other country would work of this sort be more difficult because the slums of some English cities cover immense areas and are repulsive to the last degree. But it seems probable that the English government can accomplish the task just because it must. For the slums are bad not alone for the weak and indolent and ill and vicious, but are bad for all the country, inasmuch as they are the chief breeding places of disease and crime. As a matter of fact, Lloyd-George realizes that the slums have grown until they have become a threat to the nation.

England, as other of the European countries, has just spent a great deal of money to protect herself against foreign enemies. She yields now that she must spend more millions still to protect herself against an enemy from her own loins.

Strengthens the Throat Assists Public Speakers

CATARRHOZONE IS THE GREATEST INVENTION OF THE AGE FOR WEAK THROAT, HOARSENESS, Etc

Strongly Endorsed by the Clergy

Because of its strengthening influence upon the vocal cords, Catarrhozone cannot be too highly recommended as a wonderful voice improver. It almost instantly removes huskiness or hoarseness, thus insuring clearness and brilliancy of tone. The most eminent speakers and prima donnas are seldom without Catarrhozone, and credit in no small degree their uniform strength and brilliancy of tone to its influence.

"For many years I have been a sufferer from that terrible disease known as CATARRH.

"Being a professional singer, you can readily understand that Catarrh would be a serious hindrance to my professional skill.

"One year ago I read in the "Progress" a convincing testimonial from one who had been cured of this disease through using your God-sent invention, Catarrhozone.

"Believing in the merit of Catarrhozone, I tried it.

"Catarrhozone cured me, and has been the means of my success.

"You are at liberty to use my name if it will help relieve some from suffering, and I will always remain,

"Bob Bixley, New Glasgow, N.S."

Mr. Bixley is one of the best known singers and entertainers in the Maritime Provinces. Everyone knows him, and his testimonial for Catarrhozone is the best sort of evidence of what great benefit Catarrhozone is to those suffering from throatweakness or catarrh.

PUPLIC OPINION

The Times does not hold itself responsible for the opinions of its correspondents.

TOO BOOM OUR CITY

Editor, Morning Times.

Sir,—I would like through the columns of your valuable paper to make a suggestion to our efficient Publicity Commissioner, Mr. S. R. Armstrong.

It is an acknowledged fact that moving pictures are fast becoming not only one of the world's greatest sources of amusement but one of the best known educational factors of modern days. I would respectfully suggest that Mr. Armstrong communicate with one of the leading film manufacturers, either Edison, Essanay, Vitagraph, Biograph or Pathe Freres, and intimate that next spring a splendid scenario might be built round and including the Lift Lock. Such a picture would display actual pictures of Peterborough in every city of the world.

MR. SHOOK DECLINES

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—Some of your correspondents have very kindly mentioned my name as a candidate for Public Utilities Commissioner and I have also been asked by a number of citizens to accept nomination for that office.

In thanking your correspondents and my friends for their expressions of confidence in me for that very responsible position I may say that in my opinion there is only one best citizen of Peterborough at this present time for that position and I was one of the many ratepayers who urged his candidature. I refer to our present mayor, Mr. W. H. Bradburn, and as he has consented finally to offer his services, if he is elected we will get the benefit of the knowledge he has acquired during past years in dealing with the power question as Mayor, which he certainly administered with care and ability and he is pre-eminently qualified now to render very valuable assistance to the commission which no other man in our city is in a position to do. I trust the ratepayers will express their appreciation of his past services as well as giving the city the benefit of his valuable counsel at the very critical time in the development of our [illegible] resources.

J. C. Shook.

THE SENATOR ROOTS ATTITUDE

Fully Explained in a Little Note to the Vice President

Senator Root, former secretary of state, is given to writing little personal notes to friends when he is weary of the tedium of any formal body of which he is a member. When he was at The Hague last summer as attorney in the fisheries arbitration he penned many of these missives to his associate, Samuel J. Elder of Boston, such as, "Sam, keep an eye on the clock."

There is a certain western senator who talks so much that he wears the senate to a frazzle. One day last session this senator was making his sixth or seventh speech of the afternoon. Senator Root became absorbed in conversation with the late Senator Clay of Georgia. It was such an audible conversation as to be strictly against the rules. Vice President Sherman rapped sternly for order and at last caught Senator Root's eye, whereupon the conversation ceased.

A few minutes later a page handed a note up to the vice president's desk. It was from Senator Root and read: "If the vice president wishes me simply to be in order I will obey, but if he wishes me to listen to that speech of Senator Blank he may go to—a better place than Washington."—Washington Letter to Boston Herald.

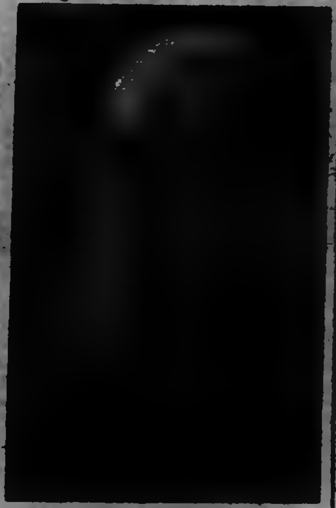
A Passenger That Paid.

The late L. Q. C. Lamar, former United States senator from Mississippi and at the time of his death an associate justice of the United States supreme court, was a very absent-minded and abstracted man.

One day he entered one of the old horse cars that ran in Washington years ago, walked up to the box at the end where passengers were supposed to deposit their fares, put his hand in his pocket, took out a coin and dropped it in.

"Why, senator," said a friend, "you put in a quarter instead of a nickel!"

"Did I?" said the senator. "How very stupid of me!" Then he put his hand in his pocket again, took out a nickel, dropped that in and sat down with a satisfied smile.—Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post.



TO THE ELECTORS OF PETERBOROUGH:

Ladies and Gentlemen:—

Last year a large number of ratepayers requested me to be a candidate for Water Commissioner in opposition to Mr. Moore. I not only declined to be a candidate but did what I could to prevent opposition. The Commissioners at that time had law suits on with the contractors where about thirty thousand dollars of the people's money was at stake. Mr. Moore being a lawyer I considered he should be the best posted man on the Commission to fight the contractors and in the interest of the City it would be a mistake to remove him.

This year I have again been waited upon by a large representation of the ratepayers who believe that with my thorough knowledge of all the waters in this district and my many years experience as alderman I should be a capable man for the position. I have consented to be a candidate and my past record in the Council I think is proof that if elected will give you faithful and honest service.

The taking over of the Hydro-Electric system will require a great deal of time—more than any man who has a large business to attend to can spare. Not being in business I can give all the time required, and if necessary will make a personal inspection of every house in the city and see that rich and poor are treated alike.

I can see no reason, with the large body of [illegible] of the Otonabee River there should be any shortage of water for either [illegible] or [illegible] why there should not be a reduction in the water rates. A good supply of good water is a necessity to every house and should be available for the people at low rates.

To the ratepayers who are now residents of the City and not personally acquainted with me, would say that for a number of years I occupied the position of alderman, and always stood at the head of the poll both as a representative of No. [illegible] Ward and also after the Ward system was abolished.

General street railway extension and cheap transportation like cheap light and water, should be the goal of our municipal government. [illegible]

Trusting that the ratepayers will [illegible] have given the past will give their hearty support.

I am, yours very truly,

PLATINIZED GLASS

Produces an Odd and a Tricky Kind of Mirror

Platinized glass consists of a piece of glass coated with an exceedingly thin layer of a liquid charged with platinum and then raised to a red heat. The platinum becomes united to the glass in such a way as to form an odd kind of mirror.

The glass has not really lost its transparency, and yet if one places it against a wall and looks at it he sees his image as in an ordinary looking glass. But when light is allowed to come through the glass from the other side, as when it is placed in a window, it appears perfectly transparent, like ordinary glass.

By constructing a window of platinized glass one could stand close behind its panes in an unilluminated room and behold clearly everything going on outside, while passersby looking at the window would behold only a fine mirror or set of mirrors in which their own figures would be reflected while the person inside remained invisible.

In France various tricks have been contrived with the aid of this glass. In one a person seeing what appears to be an ordinary mirror approaches it to gaze upon himself. A sudden change in the mechanism sends light through the glass from the back, whereupon it instantly becomes transparent, and the startled spectator finds himself confronted by some grotesque figure that had been hidden behind the glass.—Harper's Weekly.

A FINE DISTINCTION

CARBOLIC ACID

Peculiar Effect Pure Alcohol Has on This Irritant Poison.

One of the most frequent irritant poisons used for suicidal purposes is carbolic acid, and a more agonizing death could not be selected. Why any one should select this poison it is hard to understand unless on account of the fact that it is cheap and easily obtainable. This form of poisoning can usually be easily recognized by the odor, which is well known, and by the white burns or marks on the lips and mouth, which are typical of carbolic acid poisoning.

Send for the nearest physician, and in the meantime, as carbolic acid kills quickly, the first aid treatment must be prompt in order to get results. If possible cause the patient to vomit by giving an emetic such as ipecac or salt and water, a tablespoonful to a pint of warm water. This, however, frequently fails to work on account of the irritated condition of the mucous membrane of the stomach. One of the best chemical antidotes is epsom salt in solution. Another good chemical antidote is alcohol, the only trouble with this remedy being that it cannot be given in a pure form. It has to be diluted with water and for that reason loses its efficacy.

Just exactly why alcohol counteracts the effect of carbolic acid is not known, but if, for instance, carbolic acid is splashed on the hands and they are at once immersed in absolute alcohol there will be no resulting burn.—Dr. E. E. Hartung in National Magazine.

ROUTED THE SINGER.

Tosti's Encounter With a Persistent and Peppery Stranger.

"Tosti used to tell an amusing little story of feminine persistence," says Harold Simpson in his book, "A Century of English Ballads." "It was during one of his busiest mornings, with a long list of singing lessons to be got through, that a knock came at the door of Tosti's flat. His valet was ill, and so Tosti went to the door himself. A lady, a stranger to him, stood on the threshold.

"'Signor Tosti?' she inquired.

"Tosti bowed.

"'Oh,' said the lady, 'I am singing your song, "My Memories," at Manchester tonight, and I want you to kindly run through it with me.'

"'Madame,' answered Tosti politely, but firmly, 'I fear it is impossible. I have two pupils with me now, and a third is waiting in the next room, while others will shortly be arriving.'

"'But you must!' the lady persisted.

"'I am sorry—' began Tosti again when he suddenly received a violent push backward and the lady walked into the studio.

"Tosti followed, protesting. After [illegible] [illegible] [illegible].

"'[illegible], I shan't sing your song [illegible].'

"'[illegible] and Tosti [illegible] [illegible] the hand. 'I am [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible].'

An Unreasonable Friend.

Several young artists in Philadelphia are telling a story on another wielder of the brush who is a fellow member in a little club. One of the rules of the club is that each member must keep his finished paintings up to a certain number. The artist on whom the story is told is noted for his indolence. He keeps up to the requirement regarding the number, but never exceeds it. But for his distaste for work the artist probably would be very comfortably fixed financially, as he has considerable talent. As a matter of fact, he is usually on the edge of penury. Several days ago, when his exchequer was unusually low, a friend visited him in his studio. The friend looked at several of the paintings, while the artist lay on a couch, smoking a pipe.

"I like this," the friend finally said, pointing to one of them. He named a good price which he was willing to pay. The artist looked at him mournfully.

"Aw, don't do that," he said. "If you do I'll have to paint another."—Philadelphia Times.

Ancient Bridge Superstition.

A primitive notion existed among the Romans and other races that a bridge was an offense and injury to the river god, as it saved people from being drowned while fording or swimming across and robbed the deity of a certain number of victims which were his due. For many centuries in Rome propitiatory offerings of human victims were made every year to the Tiber. Men and women were drowned by being bound and flung from the wooden Sublician bridge, which, till nearly the end of the republican period, was the one and only bridge across the Tiber in Rome.

Strategy.

The turkey was not a very large one, and Mrs. Fodgers's boarders began to be a little anxious on the subject of its going around. Finally the last bit was distributed, and the idiot, glancing at his portion, observed that he had drawn the neck and the pope's nose.

"Ah, Mrs. Fodgers," said he, with a genial smile, "you are a wonder at making both ends meet."—Lippincott's.

Looking Ahead.

The 422nd Bargain Annex Event

The Christmas Annex Will Be Open On

SATURDAY, MONDAY, TUESDAY and WEDNESDAY

AND for these four days, the Annex will truly bear the spirit of the festive season. A great array of fancy and practical gifts are mingled with the more staple lines, a chief point of interest being the truly exceptional values that prevail on every hand. You will find in this department a hundred different ways of solving the problem of what to give, and you may do this with a very modest outlay. Each day will present an item of special value, that will not be on Sale until the day appointed. And after that of course, it will remain on sale until quite sold out. Particularly we wish to have you remember that the Annex is open Saturday, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Dress Goods and Suitings Mill Ends 33c

— JUST ABOUT HALF PRICE, will be the unanimous agreement of every Annex customer who pauses to look at, or examine these Ends. They are of 1, 1¼ and 1½ yards in length, all coatings, suitings and lighter weight dress fabrics. For making children's garments they will prove very worthy, while the Annex price speaks volumes for the saving one can secure. Price 33c an End.

A Clearance of Men's Coat Sweaters at 84c

THESE ARE THE KIND that are suited for wear beneath one's ordinary coat, because they are finished with V-shaped neck. In plain colors, and color combinations, these odd mill lines of heavy ribbed Sweaters would be splendid value at $1.25 and $1.39. Annex Clearing Price 84c.

Lowered Prices on Flannelette Blankets

THE PRICE IN THIS INSTANCE CANNOT be accepted as a measure of the quality, for "Kingcot" Blankets they are, in all the softness and soundness of texture that is characteristic of this make. And the sizes are most generous; the value most liberal, at the following prices:

MUSLIN AND LAWN BLOUSES 55c

Pretty garments that are embroidery and insertion trimmed. The styles are neat and attractive, they are all white, and a good range of sizes will be shown. At 55c the value is beyond comparison.

MEN'S FLANNELETTE PYJAMAS [illegible]

Each is fitted with breast pocket and military collar, and all sizes are to be obtained. The material is a heavy, English Flannelette in light colorings and stripe design. Considerably less than regular value at [illegible].

BOYS' AND GIRLS' TOQUES

Those of Reg. 25c value for ———— 19c

Those of Reg. 50c value for ———— [illegible]

WIDE SILK RIBBONS

Special values in Taffeta Silk Ribbons, of many colors, prevail in the Christmas Annex, as the following prices show:

4 in. wide 8½c 5 in. wide 11½c 6 in. wide 12½c

MEN'S WOOL UNDERSHIRTS 49c

Splendid value in these odd lines of Men's Scotch Wool Undershirts, that are rib knit. They are all regular 75c to $1.00 garments, the drawers that match being all sold. Consequently the clearing price on the shirts. In the Annex 49c.

MEN'S REINDEER MOCHA GLOVES 69c

Every pair of these Gloves in either grey, or tan, is our regular $1.00 value. They can be secured in practically all sizes, they are not lined, and are of a quality that renders them very acceptable as a gift.

Annex price 69c.

GIRLS' SCHOOL DRESSES [illegible]

Made of good wrapperettes in dark blue shades, neatly patterned in figures and stripes. Trimmed with braid and buttons, and making a smart school dress for girls of 6 to 12 years. Practically a dollar garment for [illegible] in the Annex.

WOMEN'S FLANNELETTE NIGHT GOWNS 49c

69c seldom buys a better Gown than these of heavy striped flannelette, procurable in blue or pink shades. They have a tucked yoke, and are trimmed with a frill. Annex price 49c.

TWEED KNICKERS FOR BOYS

Stout garments made of good dark patterned Tweeds in the bloomer style, with elastic at knee. Just the thing for the school boy and about half price at:

Sizes 5 to 8 ———— 29c

Sizes 9 to 15 ———— 39c

NOVELTY EXCELDA HANDKERCHIEFS
4 FOR 25c, OR 7c EACH

A bright array of colors and patterns, these being of mercerized finished and suitable alike for men, women and children. Very worthy value at 7c each, 4 for 25c.

GOOD READING FOR BOYS AND GIRLS 18c

Bound in cloth boards, the style that usually costs 25c, and comprising a select list of titles by Henty and Alger for the boys, and Elsie and Pansy stories for the girls. A nice Xmas gift for school children and very cheap too, at 18c.

MEN' LAUNDERED SHIRTS 55c
3 FOR $1.55

A splendid shirt to serve as an inexpensive gift; patterns and colorings are good; they have soft bosom and deep, laundered cuffs. Materials are fine prints and percales. Annex price, 55c, or 3 for $1.55.

MEN'S SAMPLE SCARFS AND MUFFLERS 47c

In these samples there are silk knitted scarfs with fringed ends, and all silk, padded folders or mufflers. There are many colors to choose from, the regular values being 75c, 85c and $1.00. Annex price 47c.

Men's 50 Cent Ties Are 25c

A line that will prove most acceptable as gifts, and which comprise twenty-five dozen pure silk ties in a varied assortment of patterns and colors, that is very pleasing. They are of full size, folded end shape, every one of them being a 50c tie. The Annex buyer secured them from the factory at half price, hence the correspondingly low figure for such good value in the Annex. During the 4 days, 25c each.

THEY HAVE HEMSTITCHED, EMBROIDERED and scalloped edges, and mounted on cardboard ready for Xmas giving. A great assortment is shown, these pretty Handkerchiefs being really 20c and 25c value. Annex price 2 for 25c.

Womens Felt Hat Shapes Wings, Mounts, Etc. at Rush Out Prices

THE FELT HAT SHAPES were formerly priced from $1.00 to $2.25, while the wings, mounts, etc., are worth from 75c to $2.00. All marked at rush clearance prices for the four days' Annex.

WINGS AND MOUNTS ... 25c

FELT HAT SHAPES —— 35c

TWO BIG VALUES FOR TUESDAY

Women's Winter Underwear 19c Garment

IF YOU ARE PASSING THE STORE on Monday evening or Tuesday you will see these garments in the window. And doubtless you will not fail to notice the warm, cosy look there is about them, with their long sleeves and drawers of ankle length. The sizes are 34 and 36 and they are procurable in white only. Our regular 25c garment on Tuesday for 19c.

Women's $1.00 House Wrappers 50c

ODD LINES FROM OUR REGULAR STOCK of $1.00 and $1.25 Wrappers. The colors are mostly blues, greys and reds, the remaining sizes being 34, 36 and 38. If you can be suited in these sizes, a very cheap and serviceable wrapper awaits you in the Annex. Tuesday's price 50c.

FOR MONDAY

Great Stationery Offer 29c per Box

EACH BOX CONTAINS 48 SHEETS and as many envelopes of a fine French Chiffon Linen Paper. Such gift boxes as these are seldom to be obtained for less than 60c. They will be on view in the window, and are to be sold Monday and the days following for 29c a box.

WOMEN'S OVERALL WORK APRONS 46c

Made to completely cover up the person by fitting over the shoulders and buttoning down the back. Material is a nicely patterned navy blue English percale. Neat and tidy, well made and cheap. Annex price, 46c.

SHETLAND FLOSS AT 6c SKEIN

Colors are black, cream, white, purple, pale blue, pink, cardinal and grey. A line that every one who is fond of doing fancy work will appreciate because of its low price. Single skeins 6c—Box of 16 skeins 89c.

WOMEN'S WHITE WOOL COAT SWEATERS $1.29

The bodies are of heavy, white wool throughout, trimmed with either blue, red, or green, and finished with pockets and V shaped neck. Really a $2.00 Sweater, that the Annex has marked at $1.29.

LEATHERETTE HAND BAGS 39c

Made in good, roomy size of black leatherette in imitation seal. The frame is gilded, the handles the same as the bag, and the lining is of moire. Particularly cheap at 39c.

Tong Gun Men.

The accuracy of aim among the gunmen of the Chinese tongs was remarked on recently by a visitor to Chinatown, says a New York letter. "Yes," replied a man who knows his Chinatown, "there was a time when the Chinese gunner shut his eyes tight and blazed away. Likely as not he hit a bystander. But practice has changed that. If you were to walk over to the neutral territory of the Bowery you would find on almost any good day a Chinese or two practising in the little shooting galleries over there. The chances are ten to one that they would be tong gunmen keeping their hands in. A Chinese who is not gun shy will almost invariably develop into a skilled marksman."

Grape Growing.

Growing of grapes in graperies furnishes an important source of revenue in some countries, notably Belgium and the channel islands, where large quantities are annually grown and exported. The United States is a good customer for them. Grape growing in pots is much practised in parts of Europe and especially in France, where the vines are largely used for decorative purposes on festive occasions.

Patents Too Expensive.

"Patents cost too much," said an inventor. "It should be as cheap to patent an invention as to copyright a book. Many a man hits on a good invention and then is afraid to risk his money patenting it.

"Do you know what it costs to protect an invention—to protect it all over the world? It costs $9,000, and it requires the taking out of no less than sixty-seven different patents."

To The Ratepayers of CENTRE WARD

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

I spoke with a merchant at his store door, and he said he supposed the people would go ahead and elect a raft of dead heads to the Council. In fact he said more dead heads. That merchant is a pessimist, and has a grouch.

But he may have reasons. His view of things comes from seeing men go into the Council, and who have made promises—promised too much, promised to do things, they really didn't believe they could or would do. It is the popular thing.

I am not—please observe—making promises. I don't just know what I can do until I get there—if I ever do. But I can assure the ratepayers that I will try and be useful, helpful and diligent in their and your service as I can be. That covers it.

I shall be very glad to receive your vote, and hope to be so favored.

Respectfully,

FRANK H. DOBBIN.

J. J. HARTLEY for MAYOR

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY OF PETERBOROUGH:

Ladies and Gentlemen:—At the earnest request of a large number of the ratepayers I have consented to be a candidate for the position of Mayor for the year 1914.

Being born and having lived all my life in Peterborough, and my whole life's savings being invested in Peterborough, I naturally have a deep interest in the welfare and prosperity of the City.

Should I be elected I promise you that I will guard to the very best of my ability, the interests of the ratepayers and will oppose all unnecessary expenditure. I will do my utmost to keep down the ever increasing rate of taxation consistent with needs of a growing City.

I may say that I am in favor of Municipal Ownership, and am in favor of having all city work done by our own people instead of bringing in outsiders to do it.

I will endeavour to see that the ratepayers get value for every dollar that is expended.

I have had considerable experience in municipal matters, having served ten years in the Council and fourteen years on the Board of Education, being Chairman of that Board for two years, I was also Chairman of the Board of Health for several years, so that you will see that I am not without a fair share of experience.

Should you do me the honor to elect me as Mayor of our City I will do my best to serve you to the extent of my ability.

Yours respectfully,

J. J. HARTLEY

TENDERS FOR PULPWOOD LIMIT.

TENDERS will be received by the undersigned up to and including Wednesday, the [illegible] of December next for the right to cut pulpwood on a certain area situated on the [illegible] River in the District of [illegible].

Tenderers shall state the amount they are prepared to pay as bonus in addition to the Crown dues of [illegible] per cord for Spruce, and [illegible] per cord for other pulpwoods, or such other rates as may from time to time be fixed by the Lieutenant-Governor in Council, for the right to operate a pulp mill and a paper mill on or near the area referred to.

Such tenderers shall be required to erect a mill or mills on or near the territory and to manufacture the wood into pulp and paper in the Province of Ontario—the paper mill to be erected when directed by the Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines.

Parties making tender will be required to deposit with their tender a marked cheque payable to the Honourable the Treasurer of the Province of Ontario, for ten per cent. of the amount of their tender, to be forfeited in the event of their not entering into an agreement to carry out the conditions, etc.

The highest or any tender not necessarily accepted.

For particulars as to description of territory, capital to be invested, etc., apply to the undersigned.

W. H. HEARST,
Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS.

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at the office of any Local Agent of Dominion Lands (not sub-agency), on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required in every case, except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside of his homestead. Price $3 per acre. Duties—Six months residence in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and cultivate fifty acres extra. The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land after report by Homestead Inspector on application for patent.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

A RACE FOR FAME.

How Robert Barr Managed to Get a Book to a Friend.

Robert Barr, the novelist, was one day at Euston station, London, to say goodby to Dr. McKenzie of McGill university, who was taking the steamer train for Liverpool, thence to sail for the United States. As they walked up and down the long platform together, says a writer who tells the story in Leslie's, Dr. McKenzie said jocularly:

"Let us go to the bookstall and see if any of your immortal works are there. If they are I'll buy one to take across with me. If they are not I'll tell all your friends on the other side that your supposed British reputation is a sham."

The two walked to the bookstall and examined it carefully, but nothing with the name of Barr was found.

The novelist was annoyed and would have entered a protest, but the doctor claimed that that was against the rules of the game. Time was short, and Dr. McKenzie took his place in the train. Mr. Barr bade him goodby and then made direct for the bookstall to give the dealer a piece of his mind, but as he glanced casually at the array of books in the most prominent place he saw a row of one of his novels.

The whistle had sounded. The train was in motion. There was no time for paying anything, so Mr. Barr grabbed his book and ran like mad up the long platform. The energetic railway officials thought he was a belated passenger and determined to throw him into the train. Doors in the moving carriages were flung open, and officials yelled frantically, "Jump in anywhere!"

It took great agility, but Mr. Barr succeeded. Dr. McKenzie was leaning out of his window, thinking from the outcry that some one had been killed, when Mr. Barr came alongside and said politely, if breathlessly, "Man, allow me to present you with a token of esteem."

Panting, but triumphant, Mr. Barr strolled back to the bookstall.

"Didn't some one steal a book from you a moment ago?" he asked.

"Yes," cried the indignant stallkeeper, "and he's bolted off to America with it!"

"Why don't you telegraph a description of him to Liverpool? It will be hours before the train is there," suggested Mr. Barr sympathetically.

"Description! I didn't see anything but his back and his legs."

"Oh, well, let it go!" said Mr. Barr airily. "It was a good book, for I wrote it myself, so I'll pay for it." And he laid down the money.

The Cassowary.

The cassowary is a natural boxer and the only bird, except perhaps the ostrich, whose method of defense and attack in warfare is the forward kick—straight out, like a man—is calculated to arouse envy in the bosom of any more a crack athlete. Another peculiarity of this bird is his ability to perform a sort of war dance over any particular object, a bit of rag, a stick or a stone, that attracts his attention.

AT THE AUCTION.

Great day. Folks have come from miles around because it is not only a sale, but a social event. On a platform in front of the barn stands the auctioneer, a merry, [illegible], white whiskered importation from [illegible], twenty-four miles away.

Auctioneer—Now, my good people, I have here in my hands a half a sack of—(aside) what is this, George? (to the assistant)—a half sack of beets. We have got a lot of dead beats up our way (loud laughter), but these are live beets. Who wants 'em? Who'll give me a bid?

Horrible Yap—Five cents!

Auctioneer—Five cents. Thank you. You ain't going to bust yourself on this, are you? (Laughter.) I'm offered 5 cents for this sack of beets. Who'll give me ten?

Old Man Hawkins (squeaking)—Ten cents!

Auctioneer—Thank you, uncle. I'm offered 10 cents for this bag of beets. And they are not dead beats either. (General snicker.) Who'll give me fifteen? Fifteen?

Mrs. Dobbins is about to bid fifteen, but doesn't decide quick enough, and the words are taken out of her mouth by Bill Hoover, who says loudly, "I'll give ye 15 cents!"

Auctioneer—Fifteen cents for a sack of beets and all live ones! Who'll make it twenty?

O. M. H.—Twenty!

Auctioneer—Twenty! Make it twenty-five?

H. Y.—Twenty-five!

Auctioneer (very much excited)—Twenty-five! Make it thirty!

H. Y. (still more excited)—Thirty!

Auctioneer (after the usual agony)—Sold to this gentleman for 30 cents. All good, ain't they, uncle?

H. Y. (opening bag)—Them ain't beets; them's carrots.

Auctioneer—So they are, uncle, so they are. Carrots are better than dead beats, ain't they? (General titter of approval. He proceeds to the next article and the next joke.)—R. L. Leigh in Puck.

Choice of Three.

"You'll have to do one of three things," declared the very portly conductor.

The ticketless passenger looked up innocently and said, "Well?"

"Show yer ticket, pay yer fare or get off," answered the very portly conductor.

The innocent passenger leaned out of the window.

"And you, too, my friend," he said seriously, "will have to do one of three things."

"Well?" queried the portly conductor confidently.

"Walk more," retorted the passenger, "eat less or bust!"

And by the time the fat conductor had recovered the train had left the station.—Buffalo News.

The Use of Antitoxin.

The American Medicine, strongly urging a more general use of diphtheria antitoxin, says that "the time is close at hand when failure to use antitoxin will impose criminal as well as civil responsibility." It adds that "for a medical man to assume an antagonistic attitude to antitoxin comes perilously near to willful negligence" and declares that the death rate from diphtheria has been steadily going down since the discovery of the preventive serum. "France has led the way," says this medical authority, "and with its mortality rate the lowest of all the civilized countries of the world takes unquestionable leadership among progressive nations. Her success, however, serves to put all the other countries to shame. If France can achieve such a distinctive triumph over one of humanity's dread diseases other countries can do likewise."

The Northwest Passage.

The search for the northwest passage began almost immediately after the discovery of America. In [illegible] a company was formed in London for the purpose of discovering such a passage, and from that time on for more than three centuries the quest was kept up. For many years the British parliament had a standing reward of [illegible] for the one who should succeed in finding a way around North America into the Pacific. It was only yesterday, as it were, that the work was completely done by A. Amundsen, who in 1906 succeeded in sailing through every inch of the long sought passage.—New York American.

TOLSTOY WANTED BLOOD.

His Quarrel With Turgeneff and the Reconciliation That Followed.

Raymond Recouly in the Paris Figaro gives the following account of an early encounter between Tolstoy and Turgeneff, which shows the Russian sage in a different frame of mind from the one in which the world has since come to know him:

It was on the estate of his friend, the poet Fet, near [illegible]. Turgeneff was among the invited guests. The hostess inquired after his daughter, who was being reared in France. Turgeneff spoke highly of his English governess. "With a truly British exactitude," he said, "she requested me to fix the sum which my daughter might spend for charity. And now she teaches her pupil to mend the ragged clothes of the poor."

"And you consider that a good thing?" asked Tolstoy.

"Certainly," replied the other. "It brings the benefactor into direct contact with the persons whom he is helping."

"On my part, I think that a well dressed child who handles dirty and ill smelling rags is playing a hypocritical and theatrical farce."

"I must ask you not to speak in this way," exclaimed Turgeneff, with menacing looks.

"Why should I not say what I am convinced is the truth?" remarked Tolstoy.

"You think, then, that I am educating my daughter badly," and, while Fet was interceding, "If you will talk in that way I shall box your ears." Then he left the room, begging his hosts to pardon his abrupt departure.

Tolstoy also went. At the neighboring station he wrote to Turgeneff demanding an apology. He ordered pistols and tried to provoke his rival to a duel. Turgeneff's answer, very dignified, brought the apology demanded by Tolstoy. He closed by saying that he thought it best that two men with such opposite tempers should henceforth break off all relations. Tolstoy, carried away by his anger (it was in 1861), declined to be satisfied with such an answer. He felt that he had been gravely offended. He demanded reparation by arms. He therefore repeated his provocations. His friend Fet, who attempted to pacify him, succeeded only in drawing from him this vigorous reply: "I beg of you henceforth not to write to me any more. I shall return your letters unopened, the same as I do with Turgeneff's." After these occurrences Turgeneff returned to France, where he passed the greater part of his time. Some months later, on reflection, Tolstoy regretted his violence. Seized with remorse, he sent Turgeneff a letter asking his pardon. "I find it exceedingly painful," he wrote, "to think that I have made an enemy of you."

Turgeneff forgave, as one may imagine, but the complete and definitive reconciliation took place much later.

A MINING STOCK TIP.

Isham Paid to Get It, and Then He Wouldn't Use It.

"I saw the other day what was for me a new dodge for parting the unsophisticated from their cash in exchange for worthless mining stock," relates Frederic S. Isham, the author. "It happened in a little mining camp in Canada.

"A fortune teller had pitched his tent opposite a 'broker's' shop, where a certain stock—say the Victorian 'mine,' not even a prospect—was being boomed. Having nothing better to do, one or two of us strolled into the fortune teller's place.

"He was the most plausible, persuasive and mystical kind of a mortal.

"'You are going to make a great deal of money,' he said to me after impressive preliminaries. 'Weren't you thinking of buying a block of mining stock today?'

"'No, I wasn't, but I was invited to buy some.'

"He went into another trance. 'I can't quite see it, what stock you are going to buy, but it begins with a V—the [illegible] seems it or like it—almost it. I can't quite tell any more. Only if you buy it you'll be very rich—sell for ten for one in a month—Victor, or something like it, is going to 600, and'—

"At this stage the fortune teller awoke. He came out of his trance professing not to know what he had been saying. We paid him and went out. Only we didn't buy any Victor or Victorian.

"The last I heard of the fortune teller the authorities were looking for him and his pal, the broker. Needless to say, neither has been found yet. They did very well, however, while they lasted—cleaned up twenty thousand or so."—New York Sun.

The One to Pay.

When she was Lady Randolph Churchill, Mrs. George Cornwallis-West consented to electioneer for Mr. Ashmead-Bartlett in his first parliamentary campaign. Mr. Ashmead-Bartlett was married to the Baroness Burdett-Coutts, a very rich woman, who was nearly forty years his senior. Lady Randolph, with her beauty and charms, did splendid work for the candidate.

To a group of farmers she said one day:

"Won't you promise me to vote for Mr. Ashmead-Bartlett?"

"My lady," said a red faced farmer, with a chuckle, "we'll all vote for him if every vote 'll be paid for with a kiss."

"Thank you very much," said Lady Randolph. "Your offer is accepted. I'll send for the Baroness Burdett-Coutts at once."

Deserted Their Towns.

So late as the end of the seventeenth century the inhabitants of Ceylon were in the habit of deserting their towns. Their customs are described by [illegible] Knox, who for nineteen years, from 1660 to 1679, was a captive among them. [illegible]

Is Your Back Full of Aches All Day Long?

THAT STAB-LIKE PAIN IN THE BACK IS SURE INDICATION OF KIDNEY TROUBLE

Mrs. Anna Rodrigues writes as follows from her home in Valencia: "For a long time I suffered with failing strength and nagging headaches. My condition grew steadily worse, my limbs became bloated and shaky, I was sallow and thin, felt [illegible] pains, dizziness and chills. I unfortunately didn't suspect my kidneys and was nearly dead when I discovered the true cause of my sufferings. I read so much about the wonderful health and strength that comes to all who use Dr. Hamilton's Pills that I felt sure they would help me. Such blessings of health and comfort I got from Dr. Hamilton's Pills I can't describe. They speedily put me right, and their steady use keeps me active, energetic, strong and happy. I strongly urge others to regulate and tone their system with Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut."

Former Local Priest Honored.

Lindsay Warder: The bells of St. Mary's Church never resounded their duty more proudly than they did last night, when they pealed forth their silver notes on the evening air announcing the coming of His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, D.D., of Peterborough, to officiate at the investiture of Venerable Archdeacon Casey, Vicar-General of the diocese, with the Monsignor robes. The Bishop was accompanied by many clergymen from outside points, and people of all denominations filled the edifice to witness the investiture.

A Hearty Octogenarian

On Friday, Mr. J. J. Lundy, ex-M. P.P. and a former Mayor of Peterborough, celebrated his eightieth birthday. Mr. Lundy is one of those ever-green men upon whom the hand of time does not seem to leave any appreciable marks. Whilst talking with an East Ward friend, Mr. Lundy remarked, "I think I am the oldest man in the city who was born here." His friend replied, "Why Jim, you are a kid as compared with Louis Spry. Louis, who was born here is nearly ninety."

Prehistoric Cars.

For many years people who travelled on the north branches of the G. T.R. wondered where the cars came from that ran on the Lindsay-Haliburton line. Some said they were prehistoric, others that they came from England, where they ran on George Stevenson's railway, but the secret came out in the evidence given before Police Magistrate Moore yesterday when a number of drunken cattle men were being tried for their Donnybrook fight in which damage was suffered by the car. A Mr. Jordan was called and deposed as follows: "Mr. Jordan thought the coaches were on since 1832 or 1839. It's a very old coach and there has been many a fight in them before." So there it is—the car is 81 years old or 283. You take your choice. Most people will accept the last figure as that seems to tally best with the consensus of opinion. They must have been wondrously well built to be now running after 283 years. Lindsay and Haliburton must be a long way back.

AN OPEN LETTER TO MAYOR BRADBURN

"plant and appliances of the said "company as used and operated "within the City of Peterborough, "all the rights, privileges and franchise of the said company, under "said by-law No. 1497 and the "agreement set out therein or to the "use of the streets of the said City "or any of them shall cease and determine and be at an end."

In compliance with this part of the Act passed by the Ontario Legislature, the present City Council have passed a by-law expropriating "all the company's property in the City of Peterborough," and have served notice on the company to that effect.

At the time this act was passed by the Legislature did you and the present council have definite what property and approximately its value you would have to purchase from the company in order to cancel this 30 year franchise?

When you passed the recent by-law expropriating all the company's property in the City of Peterborough did you know that the company owned the Auburn Dam Power plant and recently [illegible] thereupon? I am aware that the Act passed by the Legislature gives the city power to expropriate the whole or any part of the company's property, but if the city do not take the whole of this property then the company are still entitled to their 30 years franchise and may replace the part of the plant that is taken by the city and proceed to enter into competition with the city's plant.

Is this not a correct and fair statement of this part of the situation?

On the hearing before His Honor Judge Huycke, experts for the company swore that a fair valuation of all the property owned by the company within the city is $600,000.00. The city's expert swears to a valuation of $[illegible]. The experts are all honorable men with reputations to sustain and especially familiar with values of this class of property as would not question their reputation, in swear to absurd values. There is only one reason for such a vast difference between the two figures, the company's experts must have included property that the city's expert did not know of. What property of the company's did the city's expert value? Before passing the by-law expropriating the company's property were you not in a position to tell you definitely all the property in the city limits owned by the company? Did you and the Council instruct the City's solicitor to search in the Registry Office to ascertain what else the company owned within the city limits?

I sincerely trust that you will give a [illegible] and complete answer to all these questions and I am sure the citizens [illegible] you will enough to let the ratepayers have an explanation, since there is the majority of ratepayers [illegible] to know the real facts.

Yours, etc.,
W. [illegible]

DEATHS AND FUNERALS

Mrs. John Willoughby.

On Friday evening, at the home of her son-in-law, Mr. Thomas Robertson, 263 Bethune street, Mrs. John Willoughby, late of the township of Dummer, passed away.

The deceased was 82 years of age, and was born in Dummer. A year ago she came to this city.

Four daughters and one son are left to mourn her death.

INSULTING ROYALTY

Torture and Death Used to Be the Price For This Pastime.

People who went out of their way to libel their sovereign in days gone by did not usually get off so lightly as did the defendant in a recent notorious case.

For instance, Leigh Hunt, the famous essayist and poet, was sent to prison for two years—exactly twice the length of Mylius' term—for calling George IV. "a fat Adonis of fifty." And George was not even king at the time, only regent.

Going back further still, we find John Stubbs, a student of Lincoln's Inn, arrested for libelling Queen Elizabeth. He was sentenced to have his right hand cut off, and the barbarous punishment was inflicted in public in the market place at Westminster by driving a cleaver through the wrist with a mallet.

Then there was that unhappy Walter Walker, grocer, at the Sign of the Crown, who said he would make his son heir to the crown. When Edward IV. was told of this merry jest he ordered Walker to be arrested and put to death for treason.

Almost as hard was the fate of the Buckinghamshire cleric who, drinking one day in a village ale house, spoke disrespectfully of Henry VIII. "King Hal," he hiccoughed, "is no true king. Would I had his crown here that I might play football with it." The ribald was hanged, drawn and quartered, and pieces of his body were distributed as a warning among the market towns of the county.

In the reign of Charles I. an individual published a [illegible] [illegible] the monarchy. The book containing the libel was burned before his face by the common hangman, while he stood in the pillory in two places, having an ear cut off at each. To which has been added premium on new stock issued	174,[illegible]
Transferred from Profit and Loss Account	250,000.00
		$4,750,000.00

Your Directors regret to have to record the retirement of Mr. David Maclaren from the Presidency, on account of ill health. They are glad to be able to report, however, that the Bank will still have the benefit of his counsel and advice as a Director. The Honorable George Bryson was elected to succeed him as President, and Mr. J. B. Fraser was elected to succeed Mr. Bryson as Vice-President.

Since the last Annual Meeting, branches of the Bank have been opened at Estevan, Sask., Fort George, B. C., at the corner of Adelaide and Gerrard Streets, Toronto, and at Dalkeith, Ont. a sub-office has been opened three times a week, under the supervision of the Vankleek Hill Manager. The Branches at Englehart, Ont., South Porcupine, Ont., and Birch Hills, Sask., have been closed.

From the accompanying statement it will be seen that the Balance of the Five Thousand Shares of new stock issued in September 1912 has been sold.

The revised Bank Act came into force on 1st July last. Under Section 56 of that Act, the shareholders are required to appoint Auditors for the Bank at this meeting, and to vote the amount of their remuneration.

During the year buildings have been erected at Pembroke and Cobden, Ont., and a piece of land next to the office at Prince Albert having been secured, the enlargement of that building is now proceeding. In addition, the premises occupied by the Bank at Arnprior, Ont., and Rosetown, Sask. have been purchased.

The usual careful inspection of the Head Office and branches has been made, and the independent audit continued, as shown by the certificate appended to the Balance Sheet.

The Directors desire to testify to the satisfactory performance of their duties by the officers of the Bank.

GEORGE BRYSON, President.
GEORGE BURN, General Manager.

THE CLANRICARDE PLAQUE.

A Famous Specimen of the Sixteenth Century Goldsmith's Art.

One of the greatest cinquecento jewels in the world is the Clanricarde plaque, owned by Lord Clanricarde, who is known as the "hermit peer" and who claims direct descent from the Kings of Connaught. He guards with jealous care this precious example of the goldsmith's art, keeping it safe from possible thieves and the common gaze in a bank vault, to which he goes occasionally with great secrecy to feast his eyes upon its magnificence. Some years ago, by royal request, he lent it to an art exhibition in London, where it was admired and coveted by some of the greatest connoisseurs of Europe.

The huge disk is as delicately wrought as a spider's web and represents the figure of Hercules wielding a diamond sword. The sword blade is composed of a mass of perfectly matched small white stones, and a superb blue diamond scintillates from the hilt. The present owner inherited it from his mother, who was a Miss Canning before her marriage to the Irish lord, and the plaque is practically priceless. [illegible] from its value to collectors and its worth as a specimen of [illegible] art, it is [illegible] with a fortune in jewels.—New York Press.

Changed Impressions.

"What has become of that man who talked loud [illegible]?"

"[illegible] last any more of that [illegible]," replied [illegible] "[illegible] on the other side of the [illegible]."—Washington Star.

SURGEONS FEES

Pretty Big Sometimes, but Then There Is Another Point of View.

I have a warm spot in my heart for the big American surgeons, says a writer in the New York Telegraph, and because of regular attendance for years at some of the most famous clinics in this and other cities I have been a witness of their unadvertised charities—acts of mercy and kindness which were never heard of outside the walls of the hospitals they honor by their services.

I knew a wealthy man whose daughter was suddenly stricken and whose life was saved by the attending surgeon. His fee was $25,000. Straightway the father emitted a wail.

"It's robbery," he said. The surgeon faced him.

"Your daughter's life is worth $25,000 to you," he countered. "There was no denial.

"Well, this fee means that I can operate on fifty persons without any charge, and if you don't like it you can fight me in court, but I will get it without a suit or you will stand a lot of publicity."

And he got the money without recourse to a court of law.

It is safe to knock it down when you see a story of some great surgeon who has charged huge fees that there are many of his patients enjoying good health and relief from pain because he charged them nothing at all.

CINCANNATI GETS FAMOUS PAINTING

Mrs. Thomas J. Emery Buys Titian Masterpiece at Huge Figure

New York, Dec. 20.—A Titian with a notable history, one of the finest of the master's paintings, has been bought by Mrs. Thomas J. Emery, of Cincinnati, from Sir Hugh Lane, the famous British collector, and sent to Mrs. Emery's home in Cincinnati, it was learned last night. The price paid is given as $500,000.

The painting is a portrait of the young son of Charles V. of Spain, afterwards Philip II. Titian kept the original until his death. It was for a time in the Palazzo Palace collection, and later found its way to Munich, and then to London, so that although it was painted in 1550 it has only had four owners. Negotiations for its sale were begun in London only two months ago, and it arrived here recently on the steamer [illegible].

ANOTHER ATTACK ON TAMPICO MAY BE NOW IN PROGRESS

700 Federals, Who Deserted From Puebla, Turned on Pursuers, Annihilating Them

Mexico City, Dec. 21.—Private advices from Tampico received here to-day are in conflict with the official statement that the rebels have abandoned the oil fields and are in full retreat north of Altamira and pursued by the Federal forces. According to authoritative despatches from the Gulf port, the rebels have captured the most important bridges across the Panuco River in the suburbs of Tampico and are ready for another attack on the city. The southern rebels have occupied a number of strategic points in the Federal district, and have strongly fortified several positions on the hills.

It is evident that the rebels are getting a large supply of ammunition from this city. Large quantities of munitions of war for the insurrectos are being landed on the coast of Guerrero.

Many refugees arrived here last night from Torreon. After th[ey] left that city the railroad line was cut by the Carranzistas. Torreon is now isolated, and it is impossible for the Federals to ship cotton to the mills in the south. Cotton valued at several millions of dollars is stored in Torreon.

The rebels force in the district is very large, and is augmented every day. It is considered likely that the city will fall again into their hands.

Seven hundred Federals who deserted from the Puebla garrison turned on a pursuing force of Federal volunteers to-day and annihilated the pursuers.

A Public Meeting

An article in The Times, a few days ago advocating a public meeting for the purpose of holding an open discussion of municipal affairs., in view of the January elections, is likely to bear fruit. It is understood that some of our citizens are suggesting that the Mayor call such a meeting within a few days. The events at stake at the coming Municipal elections would thoroughly justify such action.

REFUSE TO TAKE BACK PERCENTAGE OF MEN

Conference Arranged to Settle Dublin Strike Proves Abortive.

Dublin, Dec. 21.—The conference arranged at the request of the English Trades Union Congress to try and reach an agreement between the strikers and employers has resulted in failure.

The employers are willing to reinstate only a percentage of the strikers, while the latter insist that a settlement can be reached only if the principle of "no victimization" is adopted by the employers.

MEN FROM THE WEST ARE TAKEN ON FARMS IN ONTARIO

About Fifty Were Provided For at Immigration Office To-day

Toronto, Dec. 21.—"We handled about fifty fellows this morning and got them on the way to jobs," said Mr. Robert Birmingham, of the Dominion Government Immigration Department at the Union Station. "[illegible] of them were men who are working their way back from the West. They should have stayed out there in the land of milk and honey with its ninety millions, instead of drifting along here where our own labor market is congested. I don't want to see many more of them between now and the new year. I have had them this morning from as far west as Moose Jaw.

Hardly Expected Them.

"We could have comfortably handled all who were sent to Ontario," continued Mr. Birmingham, "and I believe we have done so, but we hardly calculated upon having men wending back from the west. However we are doing the best we can for all of them."

"What do you do for them?" he was asked.

"Oh, tell them where they can get a job on a farm and arrange for their railway trip at a two-cent rate."

"That if they have not got money to pay their railway fare?"

"Now, if they have not got money they can," replied Mr. Birmingham. "Some of them walk and some I guess beat their way, others do not go at all."

No Allowance for Fare.

"Does the Government not make any provisions regarding assisting them by advancing railway fare to be returned out of their earnings?"

"Oh, no, not at all, we can only help them by arranging the two-cent rate with the railways."

Mr. Birmingham said he did not expect many more immigrants direct from the Old Country for Ontario this year and feels that he will be able to find farm work for all who apply to him for it. The two hundred farmers who applied to him in answer to the Government advertisement have about all been looked after.

POLICEMEN MUST BE INCONSPICIOUS ABOUT CHEWING TOBACCO

A Seeming Difference Between Police of Boston in Methods There as Compared With Peterborough.

Boston, Dec. 22.—Policemen seeking solace for the monotony of their beats by chewing tobacco or gum must do so inconspicuously under the new regulation promulgated today by Police Commissioner O'Meara. They are forbidden to have gum or tobacco in their mouth "in such manner as to be noticeable." Chewing toothpicks will not be tolerated.

Members of the force are forbidden to attend political rallies or conventions except when detailed for duty there. When in uniform they must not ride in automobiles other than department cars.

The police are instructed to assist newspaper reporters in any legitimate inquiry.

Nearly Five Thousand Apply for the Privilege of Joining the Expedition.

London, Dec. 21.—S. J. Foster Stackhouse, leader of the British expedition which plans to start for the Antarctic next year, has received 4000 offers of services from men eager to join the expedition.

Among the applicants are 18 [illegible]. One of the latter said in his letter that he is willing to act as [illegible] to the cook if there is nothing better for him to do.

ALL PASSENGERS ESCAPED INJURY

Canadian Northern Train From Fort William Left the Rails Near Lorette.

Lorette, Man., Dec. 21.—The Canadian Northern train from Duluth, Minn., and Fort William, Ont., was derailed near here to-day, and five coaches and a baggage and dining car were overturned into the ditch. The wreckage caught fire, but the two hundred passengers escaped through windows, scratched and bruised, and helped extinguish the flames. A relief train from Winnipeg returned there to-night with the passengers. A broken rail caused the accident. Three day coaches and all the hand baggage belonging to the passengers were destroyed by the fire before the bucket brigade had subdued the blaze.

SIR JAMES NOT SERIOUSLY ILL

Lady Whitney Now in New York, Returns To-morrow

Toronto, Dec. 21.—Nothing further than is contained in the despatches from New York regarding the condition of Sir James Whitney could be learned at the Parliament Buildings this morning. Hon. J. J. Foy said that nothing had been heard from New York to-day, and felt sure that if anything of a serious nature had developed he would have had word. Mr. Wallace, the Premier's secretary, also said that he had heard nothing fresh this morning.

LADIES WILL RETAIL BUTTER AND EGGS AND TURKEYS, TOO

But Supply Will Not be as Large as at First Supposed--Bring Your own Wrapping Paper

Toronto, Dec. 21.—Probably every woman in town is convinced that she is busier than every other woman, but you cannot find any group of ladies working harder than the members of the Housewives' League, which has recently been organized in connection with the Canadian Household Economic Association.

It is not for their own particular friends and families that they are expending all their Christmas energy. In their Christmas work they have managed to tuck in interest for the whole community.

For what could be more appreciated by every man and woman than a reduction in the cost of living? H. C. L. (High Cost of Living) has become a bugbear in many a family.

What They Have Done.

They have secured through the farmers, 200 turkeys, a dozen geese, 25 pairs of milk-fed chickens, 5 crates of eggs and 60 pounds of the best creamery butter, which they are putting at the disposal of the general public to-morrow at the following reduced prices. Turkeys, 23c pound; chickens (and do you grasp the significance of "milk-fed"?) 17c pound; eggs 40c doz.; butter 28c pound.

EDISON TO MAKE THE DEAF HEAR

After a Meeting With Helen Keller Says He Can Transform Sound Waves.

New York, Dec. 22.—A meeting which has been much desired by both for many years was arranged between Helen Keller and Thomas A. Edison at the Edison home in Llewellyn Park yesterday afternoon, just before Miss Keller and her teacher, Mrs. Macy, started west to continue a lecture tour. Miss Keller was much interested in all that Mr. Edison told her of recent experiments and inventions.

"Tell me more about your wonderful inventions," she said over and over again.

Mr. Edison showed deep interest in Miss Keller's keenness and delicacy of touch. After testing it in various ways he declared his confidence that he could translate sound waves into electrical vibration, which would given Helen Keller actual sound perceptions.

Miss Keller and Mrs. Macy will spend a day with Mr. Edison in his laboratories on their return from the West for the purpose of assisting in experiments to his end.

HEAVY EUROPEAN MAIL

Five Steamers Brought 830 Sacks Containing a Million and a Half Letters.

Montreal, Dec. 21.—Over a million and a half letters were received from the Old Country and handled at the Montreal Post Office during Saturday and Sunday. They were brought by five steamers, in 830 sacks. Besides this big letter bag for Montrealers, the local post office forwarded to-day two carloads of Old Country mail for Toronto and other Western points.

SCHMIDT ATTEMPTS TO INSURE VICTIM

Application for $5,000 Policy Produced at Trial for Murder.

New York, Dec. 22.—Han. Schmidt sought to obtained $5,000 insurance upon the life of his victim Anna Aumuller as far back as last April, according to the tesimony of Dr. Harold M. Hayes, an insurance company examiner, at today's session of the Schmidt's trial for murder. The state contents that Schmidt was planning then to murder the young woman. He killed her on the night of August 31. —

The blank upon which Schmidt wrote out the application for insurance was offered in evidence. It described the Aumuller girl as 'Mrs. John Schmidt and her occupation as housekeeper. The date of her marriage—the ceremony which Schmidt says he performed, acting both as priest and bridegroom—was given as May 5, 1912. The application was rejected by the insurance company, Dr. Hays said.

Although the trial moved rapidly and many witnesses were examined, the stae's alienists were not reached before adjournment. It was expected that they would take the stand tomorrow.

FIRST PLAY PLEASED

Ernie Marks Company Here—"Sweet Clover" To-night—Large Houses.

The Ernie Marks Stock Company opened a week's engagement at The Grand Opera House last night, presenting for the first time the four-act comedy-drama, "The Canadian Gentleman," to large and appreciative audience. The play itself was typical of the Marks Company. It was exciting and the climaxes brought loud applause from the audience. The play was intermingled with clean comedy. Mr. Ernie Marks, as Dennis O'Malley, being the cause of much merriment. That Mr. Marks has lost none of his popularity with Peterborough audiences was demonstrated. The other actors were fully up to the standard. The principal part, that of George Hathaway, Jr., the Canadian Gentleman, was taken by H. Webb Chamberlain and that of the villian by Mr. Wesley Barney; Carol Lynn as "Carina", Marie La Tour as Harriet Carrolton; Hazel Brown as Polly Brighteyes; Chas. A. Taff as Zeppo; Howard Brown as George Hathaway, Sr., and Gus Hogan as Carlos., all acted their parts very creditably. The vaudeville specialties were particularly good last night and will change at each performance.

CURE FOR GENERAL PARALYSIS REPORTED TO BE DISCOVERED

Experiments by Pasteur Institute With Serum From Salvarsan Have Proven Very Successful

Paris, Dec. 21.—Dr. Levaditi, of the Pasteur Institute, and Dr. Marie head of the Villejuif Asylum, have made experiments which they announced yesterday give reasonable hope of being able to find a cure for general paralysis.

The treatment consists in the application of salvarsan to the brain as spinal injections have failed. Dr. Ehrlich's compound is not used directly, but in the form of a serum obtained from rabbit's blood after the injection of the maximum quantity of salvarsan. The serum is then heated for three quarters of an hour at a temperature of [illegible] degrees. The microbe destroying power of the serum thus obtained was recently shown by Dr. Ellis and Dr. Swift Americans.

Two patients of these physicians were treated in this manner on Dec. 1. Two small openings were made in front of the temples of the patient. Two injections of five cubic centimetres of the serum were given, the needle being directed under the dura mater, or outer envelope of the brain, so as to bathe the brain with the serum.

Both were advanced cases of general paralysis. The injections were followed by convulsive reactions lasting three and five days respectively. There was such a striking improvement in the patients that four others were subjected to similar treatment.

POLICEMEN OF OLD LONDON ARE AFTER INCREASED PAY

Novel Spectacle Witnessed in Trafalgar Square on Sunday They Were Civilian Coats

London, Dec. 1.—Trafalgar Square which has been the scene of so many ghosts of discontented workers and political agitators, witnessed a novel spectacle to-day, when 300 leading policemen assembled there to protest against the official ban placed recently on their union and to demand more pay.

The policemen were civilian hats and coats, but the uniform trousers which they wore and their semi-martial step betrayed their calling.

In their speeches their was an utter lack of fire which the Trafalbar Square frequenter expects from the agitators who use the steps as a place to speak from, but there was plenty of plain speaking. The conditions on which the recent increase in pay was made caused much discontent, and were denounced bitterly. Some of the speakers said the union had already a membership of 3,000 and more were joining every day.

A tone of restraint marked the speeches. One policeman said it was regrettable that organized labor hated the police, and alleged that this arose from the fact that the police were used to defend the employers of labor. On the other hand, he continued, organized labor must not believe that the policemen's union would be a force which the workers can use to fight the master class. The duty of the police, he went on, is to be impartial and to serve the community as a whole.

AGED WOMAN NEVER SAW A RAILROAD LOCOMOTIVE

Geneseo, Dec. 22. — Benjamin Hill, an octogenarian of this place, is dangerously ill; his sister, Miss Mary Hill, has already been helpless for some months as a result of illness and old age. Neither, it is said, can last long. The two are the sole survivors of the hermit Hill family, which is one without a parallel in this section.

Miss Hill, though 77, and up to late years, healthy and strong, never in her life has been away from home or seen a railroad or locomotive. The times she has ever seen Main Street here, a half mile distant from Hill's tavern, she can count on her fingers.

The other brothers and sisters, of which there were eight, led precisely similar lives with the exception of "Ben," who often ventured as much as a half mile away from home.

Their fathers conducted the Hills tavern almost a century ago, continuing it until the railroads were built in Western New York. The railroads lessened highway travel until the Hills hotel business was ruined, and the anchorite lives of the children, passed in one of the wings of the old landmark, are said to have resulted from vows they had taken in their displeasure at the "iron horse" and the havoc it wrought in stage coach travel.

MRS. PANKHURST OFF TO SWITZERLAND FOR HEALTH

Militant Leader. Needs Lots of Air and Food After Her "Strike"

London, Dec. 21.—Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the militant suffragette leader, left London very quietly yesterday for Paris on the way to Switzerland to recuperate from her weakness brought about by a "hunger and thirst strike" in Holloway jail, from which she was released on December 17th. Her departure was not accompanied by any of the usual demonstrations.

Thirteen No Hoodoo to Her.

New York, Dec. 21.—Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, the Suffrage leader, declares that the year 1913, in spite of its unlucky number has been the "greatest and luckiest year" in the history of the movement for votes for women. During the year now drawing to a close, woman's suffrage had been taken out of the academic stage and was now in the realms of practical politics. Dr. Shaw told of the triumph in Illinois and the increase of favorable sentiment, the way that men are "coming over to a belief that women ought to vote and the marked attention that politicians are giving us."

CZAR REWARDS PIG TRAINER

Gives Jewels to Man Who Amused Imperial Children Despite Police

Gives Jewels to Man Who Amused Imperial Children Despite the Police.

New York, Dec. 22.—The Czar has created a stir by bestowing a valuable piece of jewelry on M. Vladimir Duroff, an animal trainer, whose performances at Yalta have give great enjoyment to the imperial children. Duroff is principally known in Russia for his incessant disputes with the police.

Once, when the local authorities had forbidden him to appear, M. Duroff entered the ring as usual and said: "Ladies and gentlemen, I regret that I cannot give my performance this evening, as the pig"—here he added the name of the Governor of the province—"refuses." He was turned out of the province of St. Petersburg for punning on the name of the Governor of the province, Gresser. The audience was convulsed, when the trainer, bringing forth three pigs of different sizes, introduced them in the following words: "Gross, grosser, am grossten" (big, bigger, biggest).

On another occasion he set a whole town laughing by dressing up one of his pigs in a policeman's uniform and turning it loose in the streets.

THE WEATHER.

To-day—Easterly Winds, moderately cold with light local snowfalls.

SKULL CRUSHED BY STEEL PAIL

Italian Laborer Was Instantly Killed When Sewer Cable Slipped Back

Toronto, Dec. 22.—[illegible] Dopopa was to-day removed from the sewers in process of construction at the corner of Bloor street and Pacific avenue with his skull completely crushed in and life extinct. The unfortunate man who was engaged as a laborer had descended to the bottom of the excavation, a depth of some 20 feet to load up buckets with loose earth. These were hauled to the surface by means of a cable attached to a derrick at the top of the sewer.

Dopopa affixed a steel pail full of earth to the cable and was watching it being drawn up when in some manner the cable slipped and the pail and its contents crashed down upon the unfortunate man's head, inflicting terrible injuries. Death was almost instantaneous.

Dopopa boarded at 14 Edward street. The body was removed to the morgue. An inquest will be held.

WOMAN AGED 120 TOWN'S GOOSE GIRL

Cares for Flocks, Knits Own Clothes and Recalls Seeing Napoleon's Army.

Boston, Dec. 22.—Hedwig Stawna, "goose girl" of the village of [illegible], Prussian Poland, has produced for official inspection a birth record showing that she was 120 years old Oct. 15. It is admitted by the registration authorities that, so far as they can discover, she is the only woman alive in Germany who saw Napoleon's "grand army" march through Poland to invade Russia.

The aged woman does her own marketing. When the weather is reasonably fine she looks after the village geese, as she did when she was a child. Her eyesight is excellent. She knits most of her own woollen clothing and stockings and for others. Her memory is clear.

In all her 120 years the most eventful incident was the passing of a part of King Jerome's wing of the grand army through [illegible], where she was born, and later a few stragglers and out-riders of the Russian Cossacks.

LIFE IN NEW YORK

How It May Run in a Deep Rut in the Matter of Locality.

LAMENT OF A MAN WHO MOVED

The Homesickness That Came With Working Uptown After Twenty Years of Routine Travel to and From and in the Downtown District.

There are thousands and thousands of men in New York city whose business has been confined to one district for twenty years or more, whose daily routine seldom fluctuates, who are punctual in traveling by a certain train every day in the week, who reach their offices, having [illegible], at a regular hour and take up their daily grind and hold to it until the hour of closing.

Many of these men unconsciously get to know and make friends of people whose names they never learn. They become attached to localities in a strange sort of way and do not realize how strong is the attachment. Here is the story of one of them into whose life there has come a change through moving that startles and surprises him and throws a quaint light upon some of the city's people.

"In the twenty years that I was downtown," the man said in telling his experience, "I was in the habit, weather permitting, of taking a walk after the luncheon hour every day in some street between City Hall and the Battery. I have footed every bit of unbuilt ground in that territory. What marvelous changes have come in those twenty years! How many signs on buildings have changed in that time! How many houses have been pulled down! How many new ones have gone up, some of them towering skyward, to take the places of the [illegible]?

"I got to know the lower end of town so well I could shut my eyes and make a mental picture of many of the blocks and see the names on the buildings. If I wanted any article, from [illegible] to anything elaborate, I knew exactly where to get them. If some particular dish were desired I knew where it could be served and just what it would cost.

"A great city never stands still. It is as restless as the great deep. But the man who becomes a part of it does not think until he gets away from the part of it where he has done business what the changes are. When I began my strolls there were no tunnels under the two rivers. In the years that have drifted away great bridges have been constructed between Manhattan and Long Island. It does not seem long since I used to hear the restless puff of the coal fed locomotives of the elevated system, yet so gradually did the old order pass that I do not distinctly recall when the present system was installed.

"The changes that took place in business firms were interesting. Many, many times I have seen the name of the man who established a trade taken down and that of his son or sons take its place. So frequently were the same people met in the same place and at the same hour that we nodded as we passed, although none of us knew the name of the nodder.

"Not long ago the business with which I am connected made a jump uptown. Never until I took my traps uptown had I any occasion to walk in the street where our new building stands. The first day I went out to luncheon I had to search for a restaurant. It seemed odd. I saw people I never saw before. I read signs—one of my fool habits—I never read before. Many of the vehicles that passed were quite unlike those I used to see downtown.

"I had to change my hour and route for coming to business. For awhile I had to watch the street signs to know where to get off. How I missed the familiar call of the guard of the car—for I always came down in the same car in the makeup of the elevated train—the one I always boarded at the same hour.

"And that makes me think. I came to know by their faces most of the passengers who boarded that train at my station. I knew where most of them got off. Now that I am in new quarters in a new section I miss all those people with whom I traveled for years. Do they miss me, I wonder?

"And the [illegible] whom I came to know downtown—how they will be missed! There is the old street preacher who used to stand on a soap box near Wall street or on the stone steps of the custom house and talk to people in the summer days and again in the days that betokened the coming of autumn. Then there were the Lenten days when I spent a part of my hour at Trinity or in old St. Paul's. I came to know the regular attendants at those services so that the strangers became conspicuous. There are no street preachers in the new district to which I have gone. I wonder why. The middle district of the great city doesn't need spiritual direction as well as the downtown districts.

"And so it seems sometimes that I am in a new town, among new people, seeing new buildings, reading new signs, hearing new voices, but all in the same old New York. And when I think of the old walks I have taken downtown, the old buildings that I passed so often that they became as familiar as the faces I met and never knew by name, of the strolls along the [illegible] of the craft I saw so often coming and going—when I think of all these there comes over me that sort of feeling that a boy has when he misses his mother. I think it is called homesickness."—New York Press.

Protection From Lightning.

Sir Oliver Lodge stated that the problem of ensuring protection from lightning consisted in finding the best method of dissipating the enormous energy of the flash, but that [illegible] to get rid of the energy too quickly. A [illegible] is considered the best lightning conductor from [illegible] point of view, but it is almost impossible to protect a building from lightning unless it is completely enveloped in a metal cage. [illegible] that a building is safe when provided with a conductor [illegible] to the highest part of the building.

Skinning a Sea Otter.

A full grown sea otter is from four to five feet long and perhaps a foot or more wide. When a hunter secures one he loosens the hide from the nose and head, and without cutting it lengthwise at all he pulls the skin down over the body, the hide being so elastic that this is not a difficult job. It is then stretched over a smooth board six and a half feet long, nine inches wide at one end and ten at the other end. Each end of this board is tapered to a point. Another board exactly the same size is then inserted, and the skin is stretched a foot or eighteen inches longer than its original length. A third board half the length of the other is wedged in and the skin tightly tacked at the ends to hold it in place. If any flesh adheres to the skin it is then cut off, and the hide is cured and dried in this condition. In a few days it is taken off the boards and turned fur side out, when it is ready for market.

CHRISTMAS APPEAL

FOR

The Hospital for Sick Children

COLLEGE ST., TORONTO

Dear Mr. Editor:—

Thanks for your kindness in allowing me the privilege of appealing at this Christmas time on behalf of the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto.

It would take more space than you can spare to tell of the good work done for the sick and deformed children of this Province. Let me, however, in a few words, tell you of the progress of the work of the Hospital.

One nurse, six little white beds, a few dollars, a few friends—this was the beginning. The beds have grown to 250, the dollars to thousands, the friends to hundreds. 1875, the first year, 44 in-patients, 67 out-patients; 1912, last year, 1,000 in-patients, 25,000 out-patients; 1875, 1 nurse; 1912, 70 nurses.

Since 1875, thirty-eight years ago, the Hospital has admitted within its walls 21,018 children as in-patients, and 159,231 as out-patients, a total of 180,249, or an average of 4,743 per year. Of the 21,018 in-patients, 15,200 were from Toronto, and 5,818 from other parts of the Province; 10,180 of the total in-patients were cured, and 6,367 were improved.

In the Orthopedic Department last year, of the 1,040 in-patients, 375 were treated for deformities, 25 hip disease, 37 Pott's disease, 2 knock-knees, 15 bow-legs, 63 club feet, 3 lateral curvature of the spine, 44 infantile paralysis, 6 wry neck, and 75 tubercular disease of knee, hip and ankle. In 1912, the Surgical Apparatus Shop manufactured 437 appliances for in-patients and out-patients, including ankle braces, spinal braces, hip splints, bow-leg splints, club-foot splints, plaster jackets, etc.

In this Department in 23 years nearly 900 boys and girls have been treated for Club Feet and 850 corrected. Half of these came from places outside of Toronto. Surely we have a fair claim for help from the people of this Province.

Prof. Malveney Known All Over the World
Proprietor of World's Famous Tape Worm Exterminator
Tape worm is bred from a parasite. It is of pipe shape, having two, four and six suckers. It lays the eggs, which are connected together. They develop and form a body, which is the worm. Each section is an individual, having a mouth or mouth. The worm grows much longer than the bowels where it is located, and sometimes a whole colony of them are found, enough to fill a quart of solid worm, and when put in a bucket of water would apparently fill it. It is the hardest task in the world to destroy this parasite, without doing injury to the individual who may be so unfortunate as to have it, as the parasite clings to the bowels, freeing itself from the body of the worm, and remains there to breed another. It is an internal demon and causes its victim to suffer all the symptoms of disease imaginable. The [illegible] physicians are led to believe the patient is suffering from some other disease, as nearly every person has different symptoms. Some have been treated for cancer of the bowels, consumption of the bowels, consumption of the lungs, chronic dyspepsia, nervous prostration, appendicitis, hypochondria, hysteria, inflammation of the bowels, appendicitis, and other complaints, when one or more of these worms were eating their lives away.
Prof. Malveney has made the discovery to free the victim without injury to the system, destroying the parasite as well as expelling the worm with one dose of medicine without any previous starvation. [illegible] his office, where he has in his possession the most wonderful collection of these parasites which have been expelled from hundreds of people by his famous remedy, some bottles containing colonies of worms, and anyone seeing them cannot imagine how a person could possibly live with them in his bowels. It is surprising the number of people that have them. Thousands have them and are not aware of the fact. The letters and testimonials the professor has in his possession are enough to convince you of this alarming fact. Some of the most prominent symptoms are: ravenous appetite, dizzy spells, headaches, cramps in the bowels, a feeling of something moving in the bowels. Segments may be in evidence at any time, and this is complete proof of the presence of tape worms. There are many other feelings of distress which take too long to enumerate. Strange to say some people of strong constitution have very little distress.
Prof. Malveney's world famous Tape Worm Exterminator is safe, sure and harmless. No starvation, no danger, is not disagreeable to take. One dose nearly always effects a cure. Information free. Phone Park 4080. 367 Dundas street, Toronto.

Our Point of View

If eating onions to prolong life becomes general there will be a chance for some man to make a fortune by inventing a first-class deodorizer.

—o—

It may be true that opportunity knocks once at every man's door, but we believe that there are times when she does it with padded knuckles.

—o—

Among the great hits of the season should be included the Council's crack at the Otonabee Power Company, depriving them of the street franchise.

—o—

This is the season of the year when the small boy butts into back corners and makes discoveries that lead directly to the identification of the man who impersonates Santa Claus.

—o—

Now that the Council has secured hydro-electric light and is naturally jubilant, it is to be hoped that it will cease its jubilation long enough to let us know about how much the thing will probably cost.

—o—

The friends of Mr. J. B. McWilliams are hoping that he will be elected a member of the Board of Water Commissioners, not only because he brings brains and ability to the Board but also because he will introduce one of the finest crops of home-raised whiskers that has been seen in Peterborough in a generation.

FOR THE PEOPLE

Hon. Dr. Roche, Minister of Interior, has taken a most important step in the interests of the people of Western Canada. He has decided to reserve all lands adjacent to water powers in the rivers flowing through Dominion lands. This means that western water powers will be securely held in the interests of the Western people.

In keeping with its administration of all the rest of the western public domain the late Government recklessly distributed the power rights to heelers and political favourites.

Here is an example. The late Government leased a water power on the Winnipeg river to private interests at only $100 a year although the rights were worth thousands if not ultimately millions. The company fortunately wanted to assign its rights and the government's consent had to be obtained. Dr. Roche seized the opportunity to arrange new terms by which the company must pay [illegible] per horse power developed.

If the western provinces, for instance, ever decide to go in for a hydro-electric poRer policy like Ontario the power will be there ready for them.

"We are simply carrying out our policy of saving for the people of Canada what is theirs by every right," was the comment of Dr. Roche on his new policy.

THE C.P.R.

As an instance of the manner in which the business of the C. P. R. has grown during the past few years it may be stated that whereas the revenue from passengers amounted a few years ago to something like $8,000,000 per annum, it now amounts to $35,000,000 per annum. To earn this money meant that the Company had to carry 1,766,982,012 passengers one mile. A decade ago the revenue from freight was something like $30,000,000. To-day it is $90,000,000, which means that 11,242,690,998 tons were carried one mile during the year, while the total tons of all classes of freight during the year were 12,936,689,155. This gives an illuminating idea of the strides the Company has made since the original mail contract was entered into with the C. P. R. and other companies. Especially does it show the standard quality and capacity reached in so few years — so that even in districts which have yet to yield a noticeable volume of business the character of the operating is of the highest, in respect of everything entering into a first-class system. This has its effect in the general result, but the point is that the C. P. R. has aimed at providing the amplest accommodation, not only in the East where the population is denser, but even in sparsely populated districts in the west, which, nevertheless, will yield the fruit of which the Company has sown the seed in confident faith.

Bronchitis Cured By Medicated Air

Every Breath Carries Healing Balsams to the Sick, Sore Places in

No Drugs to to Take — You Simply Breathe a Healing Balsamic Vapor the Nose and Throat.

Montreal this time gives splendid praise for the modern way of curing colds, catarrh and bronchitis.

Instead of taking sickening drugs into the stomach, or using an old-fashioned spray, the sensible man nowadays breathes the soothing vapor of Catarrhozone and gets well right away. This is exactly what Mr. Joseph Ducasse did, and writing from his office at 57 St. Paul street, he says:—

"I suffered for years with the worst form of chronic bronchial throat and nasal catarrh. I tried all kinds of syrups, ointments, tablets and washes, but they proved ineffective. In fact I could get no relief. I read in the Montreal Witness of Catarrhozone and bought an outfit. In a few hours I got relief. The air passages of my nose were cleared out, and I was able to breathe freely. My throat was strengthened — my voice improved—and no longer gagged and coughed. The effect of Catarrhozone was wonderful. Now I am well—no bronchitis—no throat distress. I urge everyone with a weak throat, with a cough, a cold or a touch of catarrh to use Catarrhozone freely."

Get the Dollar outfit—lasts two months and is guaranteed. Smaller sizes 25c. and 50c. each, all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Company, Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

G. C. WAINWRIGHT, Manager

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY

Ladies and Gentlemen:

The retirement of Mr. W. H. Hill has decided me to acquiesce with the desire of a number of ratepayers who wish me to be a candidate for a seat on the Utilities Commissioners' Board for 1914.

We all realize that the Board of Water Commissioners is, and needs to be, an efficient, business like organization. For the coming year, the management of the local Hydro-Electric will be an important addition to the duties of the Commissioners.

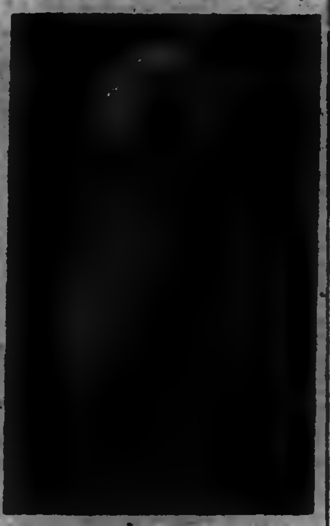
It will be my aim, if honored with a seat at the board, to co-operate with the present members of that commission, and to assist in continuing the success achieved by the Waterworks department.

I shall also endeavor to help, as far as is in my power, with the organization of the local Hydro-Electric system. Having from the beginning felt the advantages of this system, I shall do my utmost to make this public utility of the greatest possible service to the citizens of the municipality.

The qualification which I present to you in support of my candidature is service in your interest for five years on your board of Aldermen.

On this record I ask your support at the polls.

Respectfully,
ROBERT HICKS.



TO THE ELECTORS OF PETERBOROUGH:

Ladies and Gentlemen:—

Last year a large number of ratepayers requested me to be a candidate for Water Commissioner in opposition to Mr. Moore. I not only declined to be a candidate but did what I could to prevent opposition. The Commissioners at that time had lost suits on with the contractors where about thirty thousand dollars of the people's money was at stake. Mr. Moore being a lawyer I considered he should be the best posted man on the Commission to fight the contractors and in the interest of the City it would be a mistake to remove him.

This year I have again been waited upon by a large representation of the ratepayers who believe that with my thorough knowledge of all the waters in this district and my many years experience as alderman I should be a capable man for the position. I have consented to be a candidate and my past record in the Council I think is proof that if elected will give you faithful and honest service.

The taking over of the Hydro-Electric system will require a great deal of time—more than any man who has a large business to attend to separate. Not being in business I can give all the time required, and if necessary will make a personal inspection of every house in the city and see that rich and poor are treated alike.

I can see no reason, with the large body of ready made reservoirs of the Otonabee River there should be any shortage of water for either household or lawn service, or why there should not be a reduction in the water rates. A good supply of good water is a necessity in every house and should be available for the people at low rate.

To the ratepayers who are now residents of the City and not personally acquainted with me, would say that for a number of years I occupied the position of alderman, and always stood at the head of the poll both as a representative of No. [illegible] Ward and also after the Ward system was abolished.

General street railway extension and cheap transportation like cheap light and water, should be the goal of our municipal government. When a worker can have his home and garden anywhere, and is not tied to a locality his prospects are greatly improved.

Trusting that the ratepayers who want good service in the future as I have given the past will give me their hearty support.

I am, yours very truly,

FREAKS OF NATURE.

Two Queer Rock Formations on the Island of St. Helena.

There are at least two queer freaks of nature on the island of St. Helena—or, rather, four, for one of them is a group of three figures—known the world over as the "Devil's Nose" and "Lot and His Daughters." Any one who is able to study the island as it is and not run wild over the Napoleonic legends which have clustered about that "seabound rock" since the days when the "Little Corporal" was housed there in his living grave will find much that will repay for investigation, time and study.

The quaintest of the natural formations are the oddities above alluded to. The first of these imitative forms is a rocky promontory which has been known by names which signify Old Nick's nasal projection since May 22, 1502, when Juan Castella and his men sighted the island just in time to see the devil disappear beneath the waves in the best harbor, leaving his nose as a reminder of what might happen should the venturesome Spaniard seek to take possession of his Satanic majesty's favorite haunts.

"Lot and His Daughters" are three conical rocks which can only be conjured into representing a man and two women by a strong play of the imagination. According to the views of some writers they are weather worn statues of colossal size, probably the work of some aborigines of the island. Their gigantic size, however, would seem to preclude this idea. When or by whom they were dubbed "Lot and His Daughters" no authority has ventured to say.

CONJURING BIRDS.

Trick Sparrows of Hongkong and One of Their Feats.

The famous Chinese conjuring birds are Java sparrows. At street corners in Hongkong sedate old Chinese may be seen putting the birds through their tricks for the benefit of strangers.

When the stranger, pursuant to the suggestion of the owner, hands over the necessary coin this is placed with the pack of cards at the cage door. Then the owner will undo the fastening of the door. The bird, eying the coin, then the cards, then the coin again, as if he thought his performance too cheaply valued, descends from his perch, opens the door with his beak, hops outside, draws a card from the pack and passes it to his master. He receives in reward one grain of rice.

The man takes the little picture from the case received from the bird and hands it to the stranger to inspect. He then returns it to the case, accompanied by the tiniest flat slip of bamboo, and shuffles the case up with the rest of the pack. The bird descends and selects a case, and the stranger opens it, to find the identical one containing the bamboo.

How can this be accounted for? The only possible way of explaining is that the bamboo slip is slightly scented.—Exchange.

Rough on the Pianos.

Once in the company of President Diaz I spent a few nights in the Mexican earthquake zone as the guest of the governor of the state. As a measure of precaution the plaster ceilings of our sleeping rooms had been replaced with strips of matched boarding. "If a trembler should come in the night, senor," remarked my host as he was bidding me good night, "wait for nothing, but make straight for the patio. I think these boards will hold until you get from under cover." And that evening, when I took the governor's wife out to dinner, she had remarked sadly: "We are so benighted here in the hot lands. It is impossible even to have music, for no sooner do I have my grand piano tuned than an earthquake comes along and then it is over."—E. Alexander Powell, F. R. G. S., in Everybody's.

Origin of the Opera.

The opera, like nearly everything else interesting in the world of mind, had its origin in ancient Athens. The earliest librettos were by Sophocles and Aeschylus, such as the "Agamemnon" and "Antigone," a band of flutes and lyres constituting the orchestra, the dialogues being musically declaimed and the choruses sung to the best music of the time. Thus do we have the germ of all later developments in the line of opera.—Exchange.

Enforcing the Rule.

The passenger with the huge square package persisted in riding on the rear platform of the car.

"What have you got there?" demanded the conductor.

"It's a painting of Mount Vesuvius—if you think you have to know," said the passenger.

"Well, you'll have to take it to the front platform," said the conductor. "No smoking is allowed back here."—Chicago Tribune.

Exchange of Courtesies.

"Mornin', Riggs."

"Mornin', Griggs."

"I hope you're enjoying good health."

"You don't suppose I could enjoy poor health, do you?"

"You could if you were a new doctor in a strange community. Mornin'."

"Mornin'."—Chicago Tribune.

PUPLIC OPINION

REPLY TO THE STAR

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—The Toronto Star disputes my statement that Labour has abandoned Liberalism in Britain. The Star, however, is very mild about it, and probably at the time the article was written The Star had not seen The Globe's statement that if Labour wanted to beat out Liberalism it was going the right way about it. But what is the use of denying it? Do not the Labour Party in parliament in Britain conclusively demonstrate the fact? But The Star realizes that the reason for it is the serious part of it. Let us come up to the question once more: Originally industry was carried on in private houses. There were no machines. The introduction of machines meant the hiring of people in factory centres and if the factory owner was to make full use of his magnificent opportunities he could only do so by depriving the farmer of his hi-h prices. He began to bawl loudly for Free Trade. The word "free" caught the public fancy. "Cheap food" was surely a goal worth striving for. But how has it all worked out? The free or unprotected workingman soon became the victim of the man with capital, who readily found way also to put the wives and children (even as young as 5 years old) in factories in competition with the husbands and fathers themselves. And awful as all this was and is nevertheless trade continued to expand! Of course it would. But what was that in it to justify the sacrifice of Humanity to the god o money? As years rolled by the condition of the worker grew desperate, and by all sorts of means he contrived to improve that condition. He resorted to strikes and various other forms of disorder. He has come at last to the age of order. He asks for regulation. Now Regulation is the very opposite of freedom, whether of trade or labour competition. That is the reason of the present day breakaway from Liberalism. Liberalism has thriven on freedom, the freedom of the capitalist to do as he likes with the man without money. The day of Liberalism is done. Control, regulation, in the interests of ALL, the people is the order of the present day. It is only recently that the public ownership of public utilities was tolerated at all. [illegible] in active [illegible] a theory or robbery of vested interests. But we are learning. The people are learning. The people of Canada [illegible] the free labour market [illegible] of Liberalism has been as old [illegible] as the hills. Let The Star take up Liberalism and the people to the [illegible] of the capitalist. It took the land from the farmer and the people of Britain.

It will have to [illegible] to do [illegible] the way it [illegible].

Yours, etc.,

One Consolation.

During the time he acted as United States consul in Glasgow Bret Harte occasionally indulged in a day's sport with the gun, and it was during one of his shooting excursions that the humorist met with an accident which might have disfigured him for the remainder of his life, his face being badly cut through the recoil of an overloaded gun. Fortunately the doctor's skill prevented him from being permanently marked.

Writing about the occurrence to his friend, T. Edgar Pemberton, who quotes the letter in his "Tribute to Bret Harte," the novelist concludes his letter by telling of an amusing effect which was made to console him on account of the accident.

"When the surgeon was stitching me together," he wrote, "the son of the house, a boy of twelve, came timidly to the door of my room.

"'Tell Mr. Bret Harte it's all right,' he said. 'He killed the hare.'"

Poets and Dogs.

Poets have always loved dogs. In this poets and boys resemble each other. Walter Savage Landor was devoted to his dog Giallo and Byron's epitaph upon his dog Boatswain we all remember:

I never had but one, and there he lies.

Cowper was very fond of his dog, and we know how Charles Lamb, who was a prose poet, loved his Dash and how Mrs. Browning appreciated the little Flush to whom she indited a poem. The Earl of Shaftesbury kept his noble collie in his library with him at all times and Samuel Rogers always walked out with his dog. Scott declined an invitation to dinner when his dog died, saying that he could not accept on account of the "loss of an old friend."—St. James' Gazette.

To Electors of CENTRE WARD

Having decided to offer my services as Alderman for No. 2 or Centre Ward, at the request of a large number of ratepayers I pledge myself, if elected, to assist in the administration of the city's affairs to the best of my ability. My platform briefly is Lower Taxation. Careful scrutiny of city's finances. Advancement of city's Industrial interest. Extension of the present Street Paving scheme; and all things calculated to make Peterborough a bigger and better city.

Soliciting your vote and influence,

GILLESPIE FOR MAYOR

To the Electors of the City of Peterboro

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—

At the urgent solicitation of many of my business and personal friends, I have consented to become a candidate for the position of Mayor of your City, and respectfully solicit your votes and influence.

As in the past, I shall not make any rash promises, to gain the vote of any elector, but, if elected, my attitude on every question will be to stand firm for the best interests of our Progressive City.

Having been interested in Peterborough all my life, and one of your Aldermen for five years, I may fairly claim to be in close touch with every section and every interest of the municipality, and familiar with its needs and ambitions.

I believe that in all respects the will of the people should prevail; that a vigorous but economical administration is the best administration, and that if your Chief Magistrate is able to devote a fair proportion of his time to his civic duties, it will not be to your disadvantage if he brings with him the experience and energy he displays in the conduct of a large and successful business of his own.

If my course in the Council during the past five years has in the main met with your approval I shall esteem it an honour to have your further approval and support in the coming contest.

Yours respectfully,

G.A.GILLESPIE

To The Ratepayers of CENTRE WARD

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

I spoke with a merchant at his store door, and he said he supposed the people would go ahead and elect a raft of dead heads to the Council. In fact he said more dead heads. That merchant is a pessimist, and has a grouch.

But he may have reasons. His view of things comes from seeing men go into the Council, and who have made promises—promised too much, promised to do things, they really didn't believe they could or would do. It is the popular thing.

I am not—please observe—making promises. I don't just know what I can do until I get there—if I ever do. But I can assure the ratepayers that I will try and be useful, helpful and diligent in their best [illegible] service as I can be. That covers it.

I shall be very glad to receive your vote, and hope to be so favored.

Respectfully,

A duel in Berlin had to be postponed the other day because the creditors of one of the principals objected on the ground that they had a real and very large financial interest in his continued existence on this earth. They could not prohibit the dueling altogether, but when it did take place it had no serious consequences. Not a drop of blood was spilled. The humorous aspect of this intervention by sober, prosaic business men in "an affair of honor" has proved another blow to the tottering institution of the duel.

BUSINESS LETTERS

Business letter writing is no longer merely "correspondence," but "literature," and the correspondent who formerly wasted his precious breath on such inanities as "Yours received and contents duly noted" is now relegated to the "old school" class, and unless he is willing to adopt the new rules of letter writing he is likely to change not only his position, but find it necessary to change his vocation as well.

The up to date business man does not waste time indulging in the preliminaries of "I beg to acknowledge receipt" or "In reply would say," but goes straight to the subject at issue firmly, without frills, even eliminating the time worn advice, "Awaiting your early reply," and closing without the absurdity of "Begging to remain."

"Write to a man exactly as you would talk to him if he were sitting at your desk," is the maxim of one of the best authorities on letter writing in Chicago. By eliminating useless phrases having no bearing on the subject the business man not only saves his own time in dictating, but that of his stenographer in transcribing the notes. By the old method of letter writing the opening and closing of letters contained almost five lines of useless "form" matter which would average on 160 letters just 800 lines of superfluous effort.—Chicago Tribune.

THE CRESCENT

Legend of Its Adoption as an Emblem by the Turks.

The crescent has been known since time out of memory. In ancient mythology it decorated the foreheads of Diana and of Astarte, the Syrian Venus. In the days of Rome's greatest glory the ladies wore it as an ornament in their hair.

Since the foundation of Constantinople, the ancient Byzantium, it has been the emblem of the city and as such adorns its walls and public buildings, besides being stamped on its coins and postage. The legend which accounts for its universal adoption in Turkey, and Constantinople in particular, is as follows:

Philip of Macedon laid siege to the city in the year 340 B. C. He chose a night of unusual darkness for the proposed assault, but was foiled by the moon suddenly breaking from behind a cloud. In commemoration of this providential deliverance the crescent was adopted as the symbol of the city. The Mohammedan sultans were slow to assume this emblem until some one mentioned that it was the symbol of increasing greatness, power changing as rapidly as the phases of the moon.—Westminster Gazette.

"It may be, my dear, and it may be the beginning of a long period of servitude."—Youngstown Telegram.

J. J. HARTLEY

The Workingman's Candidate For

MAYOR

Unanimously Endorsed by the Trades of Labor Council

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY OF PETERBOROUGH:

Ladies and Gentlemen:—At the earnest request of a large number of the ratepayers I have consented to be a candidate for the position of Mayor for the year 1914.

Being born and having lived all my life in Peterborough, and my whole life's savings being invested in Peterborough, I naturally have a deep interest in the welfare and prosperity of the City.

Should I be elected I promise you that I will guard to the very best of my ability, the interests of the ratepayers and will oppose all unnecessary expenditure. I will do my utmost to keep down the ever increasing rate of taxation consistent with needs of a growing City.

I may say that I am in favor of Municipal Ownership, and am in favor of having all city work done by our own people instead of bringing in outsiders to do it.

I will endeavour to see that the ratepayers get value for every dollar that is expended.

I have had considerable experience in municipal matters, having served ten years in the Council and fourteen years on the Board of Education, being Chairman of that Board for two years, I was also Chairman of the Board of Health for several years, so that you will see that I am not without a fair share of experience.

Should you do me the honor to elect me as Mayor of our City I will do my best to serve you to the extent of my ability.

Yours respectfully,

J. J. HARTLEY

TOWER HILL

Tower Hill is perhaps both the most important eminence and the most notable spot in all London. Few of us think what great persons have quietly lived there and what others, equally great, have wept and died upon it.

To it, or rather to Great Tower street, came Rochester to pursue his trade as an Italian fortune teller, while the bedizened Buckingham often walked thither to consult a conjurer, a shrewd, farseeing rogue, who, when Felton bought at the cutler's shop on the summit of the hill for a shilling the knife with which he killed the duke's father, may have known for what purpose it was required.

William Penn was born on this hill in a house close to London wall. Forty-four years later—that is, in A. D. 1685—a poet lay dead, choked by a crust which starvation had urged him to devour too greedily, in an upper room of the Bull tavern. This was the ill fated Otway. At the time when the son of the muses lay dead Betterton, the celebrated founder of the stage after the restoration, was wringing tears from the eyes of the public, not for the famished dead, but at his own fictitious sorrows in "Venice Preserved."

It was in Great Tower street that Peter the Great used to pass his evenings drinking hot pepper and brandy with his boon companion, Lord Carmarthen.—London Standard.

ATHLETIC DEVOTIONS.

Gymnastic Exercises That Impressed the Kurdish Villagers.

Everything is liable to be misunderstood, even gymnastic exercises. This truth was brought home to George H. Hepworth, and he tells his experience in "Through Armenia on Horseback." The author was stopping in a Kurdish village, and the inn possessed but one general living room.

In the morning I began my regular gymnastics, stooping until my fingers touched the floor, throwing my arms about like the spokes of a wheel, striking out from the shoulder and going through all the exercises, none of which I ever omitted. I would gladly have taken a sponge bath, but it would have been impossible to get enough water. A pint is enough to suffice a Turk.

Well, I got under way with my exercises when I saw that my audience was excited; conversation dropped into a whisper, then ceased; word passed from one to another, and one by one the occupants of the room quietly left. I feared that they were offended and wanted to call them back and apologize. Just then my dragoman entered, laughing.

"What has happened?" I asked.

He laughed the harder as he replied: "The Kurds think you are practicing devotional religious exercises, and they retired under the impression that you would regard their presence as an intrusion."

Invisible Indians.

All Indians seem to have learned a wonderful way of walking unseen, making themselves invisible like certain spiders, which, in case of alarm, caused, for example, by a bird alighting on the bush their webs are spread upon, immediately bounce themselves up and down on their elastic threads so rapidly that only a blur is visible. The wild Indian power of escaping observation, even where there is little or no cover to hide in, was probably slowly acquired in hard hunting and fighting lessons while trying to approach game, take enemies by surprise or get safely away when compelled to retreat. And this experience transmitted through many generations seems at length to have become what is vaguely called instinct.—John Muir in Atlantic.

An Elusive Water Lily.

The water lily of the Amazon has very elusive habits. The buds open twice, the first time just a chink at the tip in the early sunrise hours, a sort of premonitory symptom. On the following evening it spreads its four sepals with such alacrity that you can see them move. But the big white bud among them remains unchanged until 4 o'clock in the morning, when it hurriedly spreads its blossom wide open, remaining in this condition only half an hour. Within the hour it has nearly closed, and by another hour and a half the entire flower has been drawn under water by the coiling of the stalk.

Handed Down.

THEY EAT NO BREAD.

Places Where the Poorer People Have to Use Substitutes.

There are regions wherein the poorer classes or peasantry eat little or no bread. Baked loaves of bread are practically unknown in many parts of southern Austria and Italy and throughout the agricultural districts of Roumania.

It is said that in the village of the Obersteiermark, not far from Vienna, bread is never seen, the staple food being sterz, a kind of porridge made from ground beech nuts, taken at breakfast with fresh or curdled milk, at dinner with broth or fried lard and with milk again for supper. This dish is also known as heiden and takes the place of bread not only in the Austrian district named, but in Carinthia and in many parts of the Tyrol.

In northern Italy the peasants affect a substitute for bread called polenta, a porridge made of boiled grain. Polenta is not, however, allowed to "granulate," like Scotch porridge or like the Austrian sterz, but is boiled into a solid pudding, which is cut up and portioned out with a string. It is eaten cold as often as it is hot and is in every sense the Italian's daily bread.

A variation of polenta called mamaliga is said to be the favorite food of the poorer classes in Roumania. Mamaliga is like polenta in that it is made of boiled grain, but it is unlike the latter in one important respect—the grains are not allowed to settle into a solid mass, but are kept distinct, after the fashion of oatmeal porridge.—New York Herald.

Birthdays in Sweden.

In this country children, however much they may enjoy birthday celebrations and gifts, are quite content to have them once a year, but the fortunate children of Sweden have three birthdays in the course of every twelve months. First and most important is the real birthday, but the other two are also occasions for festivity and the presentation of small gifts. These two days are those whose names the Swedish boy or girl bears. For every day in the Swedish calendar has its own special name, besides the weekly name which it bears like the days of other countries. To American ears a statement such as that made by a little Swedish girl who was asked as to the date of her birthday, "The [illegible] of March, [illegible] of May and [illegible] of September," has at first a [illegible] strange sound.—Harper's.

Christmas Announcement

WE take pleasure in once more presenting to your our Annual Announcement in connection with the Holiday Trade, and would respectfully call your attention to the fact that we have secured from the leading markets of the world an up-to-date stock of holiday goods, suitable for Christmas and New Year presents, which we are selling at a bargain. This year we are better prepared than ever to cater to the wants of the public.

In both quality and prices, we defy competition. Our expenses are comparatively insignificant as compared with the other larger stores in the city, and the fact that we have not got to look to the profits from our bookstore trade to carry us through, but have a large printing and book manufacturing business as well, in addition to our rapidly expanding newspaper business.

We have made expensive preparations for the Holiday Trade, and invite the public to call and inspect our stock and get our prices before purchasing elsewhere.

Calendars, Handy Booklets, Christmas and Text Cards

We have in Calendars, Booklets, Christmas and Text Cards a stock of the latest designs, and a very large assortment to choose from. Special discounts to parties taking a number.

Fancy Goods

In Fancy Goods, as in every other line, our stock is up-to-date. We can supply you with presents for young and old, rich and poor, wives, husbands and sweethearts. We only give a mere hint here of the articles with which our shelves are loaded:—Brush and Comb Setts, Manicure Setts, Writing Desks, Collar and Cuff Boxes, Glove and Handkerchief Boxes, Ladies' and Gentlemen's Travelling Companions, Jewel Cases, Photo Boxes, Albums, etc., etc. These goods are all new, and made in designs and of material not shown before.

Books for All

We ask an inspection of our stock and prices. We aim to give our customers the best possible value for the money. Dainty Gift Books, Padded Poems, and an endless variety of Cloth and Leather Bound Works. Also Bibles, Hymnals, Children's Illustrated Books, etc.

Games for Young and Old

Our stock in Games is very complete, including Fishpond, Flips, Game of India, Halma, The Century Ride, Lost Heir, Authors, Checkers, Dominoes, National Lotto and all the popular 10 cent games.

New Souvenir Novelties and Small Wares

The following are but a few of the many very desirable articles suitable for Yuletide remembrances: Purses, Card Cases, Burnt Leather Blotters, Pen Wipers and Book Markers: Tea, Cream, Pin and Ash Trays, Ink Wells, Bon-bon Dishes, Japanese Cups and Saucers, Bread and Butter Plates, Rose Bowls, Vases, Biscuit Jars, all kinds of bric-a-brac, etc.

For Dolls We Lead—Others Follow

We propose to lead this season in the Doll Trade, and are showing Dolls at prices that defy competition. Handsome Kid Dolls, Dressed Dolls in all sizes, Bisque and Composition Dolls, Wax and China Dolls, Rubber Dolls and Dolls that may be used for Fancy Pin [illegible], etc. Dolls from 1c up.

Please Remember

1.—That The Times Bookstore has everything marked close to cost.

2.—We can sell cheaper than any other house. The reason we can afford to do so is, because our expenses are practically nil compared with other concerns.

3.—We are large manufacturers of stationery supplies and books, employing about 40 persons, so that in these lines we have goods at first cost.

4.—We sell to the wholesale trade, who again sell to the bookstores and stationers throughout the country, so that by purchasing direct from us you save, in many cases, the profits of two "middle men."

5.—The Times Bookstore is confident that it can give you satisfaction, and would urge an early inspection of our stock before the rush begins. You only have to select what you want and have the goods put aside for delivery when required.

Soliciting the favor of your esteemed patronage, and wishing you the compliments of the season, we remain,

Very respectfully yours,

Times Bookstore

A Goat and a Valentine

By [illegible]

[illegible]

Drusilla Fowler detested the Franklins' goat, for it had all but devastated her small domain during the summer. [illegible] beds had been trampled [illegible], and, as for the little kitchen garden near the orchard, the succulent heads of lettuce and even the hard cabbage heads had fallen victims to the insatiable appetite of Billy the goat.

Of course the Franklins were very sorry about it and tried to [illegible] Billy [illegible] [illegible]

This crisp February morning Drusilla came to the gate [illegible]

Now, Drusilla in her mind's eye could see the beds blooming once more with roses and pinks and sweet Williams, pinks and marigolds and mignonette, while the bearded Billy peered through the palings.

Little Bessie Franklin ran through her own yard waving an envelope frantically. "Oh, mother," Drusilla heard her shout, "somebody has sent me a valentine!"

So this was St. Valentine's day. Drusilla's red lips pressed into a thin red line as she remembered that there was one other thing in the world she detested as heartily as she did the goat Billy, and that was St. Valentine's day. The hot color flew to her cheeks as she [illegible] events which had happened ten years before and which had thereafter made that anniversary a detestable day.

She had not been engaged to Gregory Ware, but on the 13th of February Gregory had said to her that there was something to be settled between them. "You'll know tomorrow, Drusilla, and you'll believe what you get, won't you?" he had whispered in an agony of embarrassment, for Gregory was the shyest man in the world.

And Drusilla had guessed that he was to send his love in a valentine, and she was radiant with happiness. [illegible]

When the next day had come, there was no valentine, and [illegible] estrangement, and after awhile he went away to another village and found work there, and Little River saw him only occasionally and Drusilla not at all.

So Drusilla always avoided going to the postoffice on Valentine's day that she might evade even the appearance of being interested in the anniversary of the good saint. But today—and she frowned as she recollected it—there was a matter of sending a money order to the city that must be attended to, for an impecunious cousin had written and asked for a loan to tide over a financial difficulty. Drusilla Fowler was not a shirker where duty presented itself, and so she swallowed her repugnance and buttoned herself into a thick warm cloak and pinned on her most becoming hat, for Drusilla had pride in her appearance.

Her adventures began from the very moment she passed out of her own yard into the street. The Franklins' goat was hungrily browsing on the privet hedge that surrounded his master's yard, and as he turned his little evil eye on Drusilla she involuntarily uttered a vicious little "Scat!"

Billy wheeled about on the pivot of his hind legs, reared himself menacingly, dropped his head and made one dive after Drusilla Fowler. But she had gone. With the speed of an antelope she had gathered up the skirts of her long cloak [illegible]

The first building into which she might safely turn was the postoffice. It stood at the corner of the main street and the road that ran to the river. The doors were usually wide open even in this wintry weather, and there would be friendly hands to help her in and to close the portals against the invasion of Billy. Once she glanced behind and saw his waving gray whiskers and the glitter of his evil eye and renewed her speed.

At last the postoffice. Drusilla dashed across the street up the wide stone steps and reached the top as the frenzied goat clattered his hoofs on the bottom one. Drusilla was conscious that big familiar hands, warm and friendly, grasped her own and drew her to a place of safety behind a tall broad shouldered figure—Gregory Ware's.

The goat bounded up the steps and slipped through the doors, his hoofs skating along the oiled floor; then he saw his reflection in the glass front of the tier of letter boxes and paused, [illegible] angrily.

Some one laid a tentative hand on his back and was rewarded with a vicious lunge. Billy removed his gaze [illegible] the glass. He pawed the floor angrily; he bleated once more, and then before the astonished onlookers could prevent him he bent his head and smashed violently into the glass front, shattering it in a thousand flying fragments and toppling the whole structure on to the startled postmistress and her assistant.

Fortunately nobody was hurt, not even Billy the goat. The glass front of letter box No. 12 was impaled on one horn, and on the other was a fancy embossed envelope that inclosed a valentine. Somewhat subdued, he was captured by several citizens of Little River and tethered to the doorknob. Then one and all went forward to assist in restoring order in the chaos of mail matter.

Drusilla, pale and frightened, still hovered in the corner into which Gregory Ware had thrust her and which he had left without a word to help clear up the wreckage. Fanny Bicknell, the sharp faced, sandy haired little postmistress, pointed a skinny finger at Drusilla, while her little dark eyes flashed resentfully.

"I declare, Drusilla Fowler, ain't you got any better sense than to tag that goat of the Franklins into the postoffice? I expect the gov'ment will get after you. You've broke all the rules of the office. It says no dogs allowed inside, and that means goats and such. I thought you didn't take no stock in the Franklins' goat."

"I don't," retorted Drusilla, with spirit. "He chased me all the way down here. He's the bane of my life. You can look to Mr. Franklin for damages."

"I shall," said Miss Bicknell acidly, and then, addressing the men who were picking up glass preparatory to raising the fallen section of boxes, she added: "What you men fussing over there? Remember that's all gov'ment mail matter you're handling."

"Picking some of these letters out of the dirt under your boxes, Miss Fanny," said Gregory Ware grimly. "I should recommend that you have something done about your boxes. The whole thing is cracked and warped, and the mail box is full of cracks. Look under here where it stood!" He pointed to a square dust outlined space on the floor where several yellowed and dirty missives were mingled with bits of dirt and splintered glass. "You're the postmistress, Miss Fanny. You'd better see what these letters are doing underneath the mailing box."

He stood back while the fussy little woman came forward and picked the letters out of the accumulated soil. She examined them closely—there were three in all—and then she looked inquiringly around the office.

"These must have slipped through the crack in the mailing box," she said after a while. "Here's a bill from Pryor & Hamish for Angus Bartlett. Come to think of it, Angus's dead [illegible] [illegible] so there's no harm done there! And here's a postal card [illegible] Co. ain't got the sample of [illegible] cloth she asked for, [illegible] dated two years back [illegible] matter to nobody either, [illegible] And—here's a letter [illegible] Drusilla Fowler! [illegible] Gregory, give that [illegible] to Drusilla [illegible] Gregory's hand and turned away.

He came toward Drusilla, his [illegible] face white beneath its coat of tan. When he spoke his voice was thick with emotion.

"Drusilla, here's a letter Miss Fanny just found under the mailing box. Like as not it's been there all this last ten years, ever since I mailed it one night before Valentine's day. I never understood—why—you—never answered it," he said with slow emphasis as she took the letter from him. "Now I know, but I suppose it's too late."

She opened the missive with shaking fingers and drew from within a lacy and flowered valentine. Wreaths of roses and forget-me-nots surrounded two loving hearts, and underneath was a printed verse that was heavily underscored in ink:

While I protest my heart is thine
I would inquire if thine is mine.
If this be true pray give a sign
To say you'll be my valentine.

And the name of Gregory Ware was signed to it, and the date was ten years ago! Drusilla stared at it until all the coldness had fled from her eyes and a great tenderness invaded her face. Ashamed to lift her betraying glance to his serious inquiring one, she pressed the valentine with unconscious grace to her heart.

"Oh, this ought to have come before—it ought to have come before!" she cried passionately.

"Is it too late now, Drusilla?" asked Gregory softly. "It's never too late to be happy—if you want to be," he suggested.

"I want to be," sighed Drusilla contentedly, and then later she added: "Who would have thought that goat of Franklin's would prove a blessing in disguise?"

Little River folk watched agape, and nobody but those two understood why Gregory Ware and Drusilla Fowler led the Franklins' pet goat home with such solicitude or why Gregory bought it afterward and changed its name to Valentine.

"It can browse in the south meadow. He'll make a nice playmate—for somebody some day," he added vaguely.

Lord Chesterfield on Dante.

In Lord Chesterfield's letters to his son letter 217 is dated from London Feb. 8, 1750. It begins:

"My Dear Friend—You have by this time, I hope and believe, made such progress in the Italian language that you can read it with ease—I mean the easy books in it—and indeed in that as well as in every other language the easiest books are generally the best, for whatever author is obscure and difficult in his own language certainly does not think clearly.

"This is, in my opinion, the case of a celebrated Italian author to whom the Italians, from the admiration they have of him, have given the epithet of il divino. I mean Dante. Though I formerly knew Italian extremely well, I could never understand him, for which reason I had done with him, fully convinced he was not worth the pains necessary to understand him. * * * The two poets worth your reading, and, I was going to say, the only two, are Tasso and Ariosto."

How to Arrange the Garden.

Run the rows north so that the sun will shine on both sides of every plant.

Make a path three feet wide or more along two sides of the garden at right angles to the rows. Have no path in the center. Make a path a foot wide between every five rows of small vegetables.

Put the tall vegetables (corn and pole beans) where they will not shade the small vegetables—that is, at the north end of the garden.

Use the warmest, highest and best drained spot for the earliest crops—viz., the first sowing of peas, with spinach, lettuce and radishes between the rows.—Country Life in America.

Historical Home Crumbling.

One of the most [illegible] landmarks in [illegible], the old adobe [illegible] hotel, South Pasadena, Cal., is crumbling and efforts are being made to keep the structure intact. It was in this house that General Fremont and the warring Mexican chief, General Andres Pico, sat at dinner on a day in 1847. Here the treaty was signed giving over to the Americans the whole of California. This house is the oldest one in South Pasadena, [illegible] the whole valley in that section.—Los Angeles Times.

TENDERS FOR PULPWOOD LIMIT.

TENDERS will be received by the undersigned up to and including Wednesday, the [illegible] of December next for the right to cut pulpwood on a certain area situated on the [illegible] River in the District of Timiskaming.

Tenderers shall state the amount they are prepared to pay as bonus in addition to the Crown dues of 40c. per cord for Spruce, and 20c. per cord for other pulpwoods, or such other rates as may from time to time be fixed by the Lieutenant-Governor in Council, for the right to operate a pulp mill and a paper mill on or near the area referred to.

Such tenderers shall be required to erect a mill or mills on or near the territory and to manufacture the wood into pulp and paper in the Province of Ontario—the paper mill to be erected when directed by the Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines.

Parties making tender will be required to deposit with their tender a marked cheque payable to the Honourable the Treasurer of the Province of Ontario, for ten per cent. of the amount of their tender, to be forfeited in the event of their not entering into an agreement to carry out the conditions, etc.

The highest or any tender not necessarily accepted.

For particulars as to description of territory, capital to be invested, etc., apply to the undersigned.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS.

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at the office of any Local Agent of Dominion Lands (but not Sub-agency), on certain conditions.

Duties.—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required in every case, except when residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3 per acre. Duties—Six months residence in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and cultivate fifty acres extra. The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land after report by Homestead Inspector on application for patent.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

HE ASKED THE TIME.

A Question and Answer That Changed a Clerk's Position.

How many clerks measure up to the standard of the young bookkeeper in this story from Human Life? He was employed in the passenger department of a great railroad. It was just a little before lunch. Some of the clerks were putting on their coats, some leaving for the washroom, some consulting the clock; some were still busy. Suddenly the "boss" entered. He glanced about him and then approached the young bookkeeper.

"What time is it?" he asked.

The young man kept on figuring, and the boss put a hand on his desk and repeated the question.

Instantly the other looked up, surprised to see the chief at his elbow.

"I beg your pardon, were you speaking to me?" he asked.

"Merely inquired the time—that was all," said the other.

The bookkeeper glanced about the room, located the office clock and said, "It's ten minutes to 12."

"Thank you," said the general manager and vice president, and strolled out.

That conversation cost the young bookkeeper his place—in the passenger department—and put him under a higher officer "on the firing line." Nine years later he was assistant general manager, and while still in the thirties became a general manager, full fledged.

Bounced Through.

Serjeant Wilkins once defended a breach of promise case for a singularly ugly little man, which case he told the defendant, after reading his brief, must be "bounced" through. And the serjeant did bounce it through.

"Gentlemen of the jury," he said at the close of a most eloquent speech, "you've heard the evidence for the plaintiff, and, gentlemen of the jury, you have admired that most bewitching lady, the plaintiff herself. Gentlemen, do you believe that this enchanting, this fascinating, this captivating, this accomplished lady would for one moment favor the advances of [illegible] with anything more than [illegible] and indignation [illegible] of the wretched and repulsive [illegible] of defendant?"

His client looked up from the well of the court and piteously murmured: "My, Serjeant Wilkins! Oh, Mr. Serjeant Wilkins!"

"Silence, sir!" replied the serjeant in a wrathful undertone. "Gentlemen," he continued, bringing his fist heavily down on the desk before him, "do you think that this lovely lady, this fair and smiling creature, would ever have permitted an offer of marriage to be made to her by this [illegible] of humanity, this stunted creature, who would have to stand on a sheet of note paper to look over twopence?"

Instant verdict for defendant.—London Globe.

Notices Which Make You Smile.

There is quite a rich crop of humor, usually unconscious, to be reaped by the observant in the notices displayed in shop windows, of which the following announcement by a youth and bird fancier is not at all a bad example: "Doves for sale, cheap. Eat anything. Fond of children." Not long ago a Farringdon road butcher had in his window this notice: "Wanted, a respectable boy for beef sausage." An east end publican announced, "Billiard tables upstairs, 1 shilling per hr." A well known High Wycombe tobacconist proclaims from his shop window, "This shop is open on Sundays from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m. in spite of Charles II." "Wanted, a [illegible]," ran another similar notice. "Applicants must be accustomed to rigorous discipline. Only the efforts of such candidates will be [illegible] who have served in the army or been married for a considerable length of time."—Westminster Gazette.

HIS GIRL FRIENDS.

Mark Twain Dearly Loved Children as Playmates.

THE ANGEL FISH SOCIETY.

A Delightful and Touching Story About Little Margaret, One of Its Members, and the Genial Humorist—A Pretty Compact and a Quaint Letter.

Like many another great man, Mark Twain was fond of children. He never outgrew childhood, and he always chose young playmates where they were to be found. He formed curious societies of these girl friends. Back in the nineties, when he was living in Europe, he created a club which was to consist of one (only one) girl in each country of the globe, the duty of said member being to write occasionally to the chief officer, who faithfully replied to these random and far faring messages. Of course these little girls were swept into womanhood presently, but even to the last years of his life the member who signed herself "France" remained faithful to the law.

Another club of girls, little girls, became one of the chief interests during his final years. It had its beginning in Bermuda during one of his frequent visits to those happy islands. It was called the Angel Fish club, after a gorgeous swimmer of those waters, and he gave to each member an angel fish pin as a society badge. It was a successful club, and on his return to America he elected other members, enough to make twelve in all.

His home at Redding, Conn., Stormfield, had been originally named Innocence at Home, and as Angel Fish headquarters Innocence at Home it always remained. Members with their parents visited him there, and the billiard room, where the "fishes" were likely to spend most of their time knocking the balls about, under the chief member's instruction, was called the Aquarium, and gay prints of many Bermuda fishes were hung along the walls to carry out the idea. Each member had the privilege of selecting one of these as her patron fish and of identifying it with her name.

It was in Bermuda one day when he was walking along the beach with one of his angel fish members that he picked up a small iridescent double shell, delicately hinged together. He separated it and handed his companion half.

"You will be going away from me pretty soon, Margaret," he said, "and growing up, and I won't know you any more. I shall see a great many Margarets, and now and then one of them will say she is my Margaret, but I will say, 'No; you resemble my Margaret, but you are bigger than my Margaret, and I can't be sure.' Then I will take out this shell and I will say, 'If you are really my Margaret you will have the other half of this shell and it will fit exactly.' Then if she has the shell and it fits I shall know that it is really my Margaret, no matter how many years have gone by or how much older she has grown."

All this he said very gravely and earnestly, and the little girl took the shell thoughtfully and promised to keep it always. Next morning when she came running up to meet him on the hotel veranda he looked at her questioningly.

"You look like Margaret," he said, "but I can't be sure. If you are really my Margaret you will have a shell I gave her once—the mate to this one."

He got no further. The talisman was promptly produced, and it fitted exactly. He returned to America, and somewhat later Margaret received a letter—one of the pretty letters he was always writing to children. In it he said:

"I am always making mistakes. When I was in New York six weeks ago I was on a corner of Fifth avenue and saw a [illegible]"

Margaret, with her mother, called when they returned to America. When the cards were brought to him he looked at them and said:

"Well, the young lady, her name seems familiar, but I can't be sure it's my Margaret without a certain token which she is supposed to carry as a guard." The shell came up without delay. He took the two halves now to a jeweler and had them set in gold as charms. One of these Margaret wore on a ribbon about her neck, and the other he linked to his watch chain, where it remained till he died. What a sweet fancy it all was!

He spent the last months of his life in Bermuda in the home of one of his angel fish, Helen Allen, daughter of the American vice consul there. She was his daily companion, and it will be her lifelong happy memory that she brightened and comforted his final days.—Albert Bigelow Paine in Ladies' World.

Dizzy Headaches
Cured in One Night

If Troubled With Head-Fullness, Ringing Noises, Specks Before the Eyes, the Stomach is at Fault.

Quick Relief and Certain Cure Came From Dr. Hamilton's Pills

"I had terrible pains in my head. My appetite faded away, and when I did eat anything it disagreed and made me very sick for hours after each meal. The pains in my stomach and the dizzy headaches I had to endure almost set one wild. Sometimes attacks came on so severely that I had to go to bed. I would feel so worn, depressed and utterly miserable that for hours I wouldn't speak to my family. My system was poisoned with wastes and nothing helped me till I used Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Without this grand system-cleaning remedy I would still be sick, but each day brought me better health and spirits. I was cured and made strong, ruddy, and healthy, and will always use and recommend Dr. Hamilton's Pills."

Harding Discharged.

At yesterday's police court, Frank Harding was charged with having been disorderly. The defendant pleaded not guilty, but was waiting for his counsel, Mr. Gordon. Harding was discharged at once. Crow, was found guilty of having started the scrap.

Stores Open Late.

The merchants of Peterborough have decided for to-night and to-morrow night to keep their respective stores open after ten until 9 o'clock. Still, to give you a tip, gentle reader, help the merchants and clerks out by buying early before Christmas.

After a Lindsay Brakesman.

Lindsay Post: Chief Chilton is on the lookout for one George Stevenson, a G.T.R. brakesman, for whom he has a warrant. He is charged with the theft of two watches, valued at $25 and $30 from Mrs. [illegible]'s boarding house on [illegible] street. The accused disappeared the night before last, and it is also alleged that he left behind an unpaid board bill amounting to about $25.

Youthful Gamblers Fined.

At yesterday's police court five young men were charged with having been gambling. They pleaded guilty. It was a case of Sunday gambling, but one of the boys said "If we had known it was Sunday we would not have gambled. I wish you would let us down light on account of Christmas." Four of the boys were fined $10 and costs, and the fifth who has a previous conviction on a similar charge was mulcted $20 and costs.

T.A.S. Officers Elected.

At a largely attended meeting of the [illegible] T.A.S., the election of officers for the ensuing year took place as follows:

Crow Was Fined.

At yesterday's police court Gordon Crow was charged with being disorderly at a local hotel. P. C. Patterson said he went to the hotel and found crow sitting on Frank Harding. He had to use his club to get Crow off Harding's neck. Harding, in the box said he had not taken a drink that day. Crow followed him to the lavatory and caught him by the neck. Crow's friends kicked the witness. Crow, who was not present, had pleaded guilty. Crow was fined $5.75. The fine was paid.

Dog Fight Disastrous.

Yesterday morning Mrs. Dwyer was charged with assault. Annie Elliott was the complainant. Annie said the trouble started with a dog fight between her dog and Mrs. Dwyer's dog. Willie Dwyer kicked her on the forehead. Willie is possibly larger than a peanut. Mrs. Dwyer ordered her away and pulled her hair. To Mr. Gordon, acting for the defendant, she said she hit Mrs. Dwyer over the back with a stick. The Magistrate warned both the ladies in the case, and dismissed the charge.

Local Heirs Gain.

A Calgary despatch says that Probate of the will of the late John Breckenridge, the well-known railway contractor, who died in Calgary on May 28, last, has been granted. The gross value of the estate is sworn at $340,838.25. To his sister Margaret Breckenridge, of Peterborough, Ont., he leaves $25,000; to his sister Annie Irwin, of Peterborough, Ont., $25,000; to his brother Matthew T. Breckenridge, of Peterborough, Ont., $25,000.

Mr. H. P. Morgan in Business.

Work was commenced yesterday on the store formerly occupied by Yeates Bros., as a tobacco store, next to the Bank of Nova Scotia, making changes to accommodate a new hardware business to be conducted by Mr. H. P. Morgan. Mr. Morgan was for fifteen years with the Peterborough Hardware Company, and is an experienced man in every department of the Hardware business.

Alleged Criminal's Razor Broken.

The razor with which Bourbonais now in jail here awaiting remand, on a charge of trying to cut his wife's throat, is now in possession of Chief Thompson. The razor has its thin edge badly broken, possibly from contact with the hands of his wife, who is now in the hospital with her hands badly cut from grasping the implement when the alleged assault was made. It is said that the tendons of two fingers of her hand may be definitely severed.

Boy's Narrow Escape.

Frank Bourbonais, the eleven year old boy of Mrs. Bourbonais, now in the hospital from wounds alleged to have been made with a razor in the hands of her husband, had a narrow escape from death on Sunday. The lad was playing on the ice near the trestle bridge on the spur line to the Quaker Oats plant. The ice broke and he went into the water. Kenneth Heard and several other boys were near and used an old punt, which fortunately was close at hand, and after considerable difficulty succeeded in rescuing Bourbonais.

City Issues a Writ.

A writ for $5,396.50 was issued yesterday by City Solicitor R. H. D. Hall for the City of Peterborough against Edward Conroy, David Conroy and Jas. Bogue, in connection with sewer work. The plaintiff's claim is against Edward Conroy for $5,396.50 due by the defendant Edward Conroy, to the plaintiff under a contract between Edward Conroy and the plaintiff, dated September 16th, 1910, and against the defendant David Conroy and Jas. Bogue as sureties under bond in favor of plaintiff, dated 16th of September, 1910, for the due carrying out of the contract. Mr. Conroy has a counterclaim against the city.

Too Much for Local Eggs.

Strictly fresh eggs sold in Port Hope on Saturday last for 40 cents a dozen. As it would only cost about 1½c per dozen to bring eggs to Peterborough from our southern suburb, there is something "rotten in the state of Denmark" here. Our farmers are, in some instances, unloading cold storage eggs as "fresh" at 60 cents a dozen. Whilst the paper does not advocate socialism the few rich in the city, who must have their "trifles" and "angel cakes" at any old price are making our farmers rich by depriving the poor of a necessary commodity when they pay such exorbitant prices.

A Bad Man From Lindsay

Referring to a case there of a wife being led astray Lindsay Post says: "It appears that the husband had been working at his trade in a western town, but had some difficulty in getting a house in order to bring his wife and three little children to live with him. During his absence from his family a [illegible] farm entered his home. It is the same old story of a weak woman, and a villain's tempting tongue. The Lindsay man persuaded the wife to leave her husband and little ones. She listened and was tempted, and came to Lindsay on Thursday. The man brazenly paraded Kent St. with the faithless wife, and it is claimed, made the statement that he had married her.

The P.C.I. Ball a Success.

Last night the Conservatory of Music Hall was appropriately decorated for one of the most successful functions of the season. The occasion was a ball given by the Rugby Club of the Peterborough Collegiate Institute. The floor was in fine condition and the music good. Pretty girls whirled round on the arms of their particular cavaliers. Refreshments were served at midnight and enjoyed by all present. The patronesses were Mrs. W. H. Bradburn, Mrs. H. Hall, Mrs. E. C. Hurdle, Mrs. W. H. Hill, Mrs. Dickson Hall, Mrs. R. Gladden, Mrs. V. Eastwood, Mrs. A. H. Stratton and Mrs. J. F. Harvey. The committee in charge, who are to be congratulated on the success of the ball are Messrs. V. Eastwood, [illegible], F. [illegible], [illegible] and [illegible], the league [illegible]

A lady recently arrived from Calgary, yesterday, said to The Times, "Your asphalt pavements are just like ours in appearance and usefulness."

No, Sadie, the Edison car conductor did not say "many a tattered pair of trousers covers a warm heart." His remark was "Many a slit skirt indicates a fine understanding."

In an unconscious sense of humor, Lindsay Post gives the names of Canadian cities using magnetite lamps. The list begins Lindsay, Peterborough ending with Halifax and Winnipeg.

It might be noted that the five young gamblers fined at yesterday's police court, did not include the young men recently fined for a similar offence.

An Emily farmer living on the 6th concession, a few days ago found a five acre grass snake on his property. Fellow! That's nothing a resident a Dickinson(?) in the police court recently thought he saw a purple snake with yellow ears.

DEATHS AND FUNERALS

Mrs. J. P. Motherel.

A well known resident of Peterborough passed away Sunday afternoon in the person of Mary Ann Dixon, wife of Mr. John P. Motherel, 146 Murray street.

She was born 79 years ago in the Dixon homestead at the north end of Park street, and all her life has been spent in Peterborough. She was a member of the George street Methodist church.

Besides her husband the following sons and daughters survive: Messrs. James H. and Albert E., Peterborough, William D., Ottawa; Fred J., of Toronto; Mrs. P. L. Mooris, of Erie, Pa.; Mrs. Dr. Middleton, MacLeod, Alta.; and Mrs. R. Shelton, of this city.

The funeral will be held this afternoon from 146 Murray street, to the Little Lake cemetery.

MOB HANGS NEGRO UP FOR MURDER

White Posse Overpowers Deputy and Lynches Prisoners Near Shreveport.

Shreveport, Dec. 22.—Confessing to the brutal murder of Calvin Ballard, merchant at Vivian last week, two young brothers were lynched by a mob at Blanchard, La., near here, early Tuesday morning.

The negroes are:

Ernest Williams.

Frank Williams.

Details are lacking and news of the double killing by the mob did not reach Shreveport until after noon.

According to reports at the sheriff's office, Deputy Sheriff Ratcliffe had started to Shreveport with the negroes, when a mob of white men demanded surrender of the blacks.

The officers refused. He was overpowered and the negroes were hanged to a nearby tree.

No arrests have been made. One of the negroes is said to have been employed by Ballard, the slain merchant.

Ballard was prosperous merchant, and it was believed by the authorities that he was slain for money kept in his store.

VENGEANCE THEORY; WON PRISON PARDON

Another theory was vengeance. Ten years ago, Frank Ballard, in a [illegible] his brothers, Frank Ballard, in a row over the latter slapping a small negro boy in the face. Ballard was sent to the penitentiary at Baton Rouge. His good behaviour won him a position at the State prison as trusty.

During his third year at the "pen" Ballard prevented a wholesale escape of negro and white convicts. His [illegible] was like a pardon. Freed, Ballard returned to his home town and started a store.

When his body was found on Saturday morning in the store, it was thought that one or more of the convicts he had prevented from escaping committed the murder out of vengeance.

The murder caused intense excitement, and posses immediately started on a search. Bloodhounds were brought from Shreveport and put on the trail.

Blanchard is a little town of not more than 300 whites and negroes. It is in Caddo parish, near Shreveport, and on a branch line of the Kansas City Southern Railroad.

Of Saturday's market chickens of about similar size to Hartz Mountain canaries brought about similar prices, pound for pound, as those imported songsters. Truly the life of Peterborough farmer must, these days be along Easy street.

If a little alum be dissolved in the last water in which children's clothes are washed it will render them less inflammable.

Importing Arms Into Ireland Cannot Now be Legally Stopped

The Irish Home Rule Question Is Rapidly Becoming Acute

Shipments of Arms From One Part of United Kingdom to Another Not Within Meaning of the Act

Special to The Times.

London, Dec. 23.—The Lord Chief Justice of England states that the Government's action in forbidding the importation of arms into Ireland is contrary to law, and cannot be enforced. This leaves Ulster free to arm to the teeth, and the followers of Sir Edward Carson are likely to take full advantage of the law in this respect. At a largely attended meeting held in Belfast, an automobile corps was organized in order to move troops rapidly from one point to another, if necessary.

That the Government has blundered is now practically admitted by the Castle officials at Dublin.

The Church of England is taking a serious view of the outlook in Ulster, where the Unionists threaten armed resistance to Home Rule. The Bishop of London has authorized special prayers in the churches of his diocese and also has sanctioned "a solemn service of intercession for the preservation of peace in Ireland" in which the litany has been modified to include the following:

"Let us pray that we may be spared the calamity of civil war. (Silent prayer.)"

It is now known that Sir Edward has under his command at least one hundred thousand trained men, ready at a moment's notice to fight against Home Rule. It is unthinkable that the Government will go so far as to force civil war on the country. Should a collision, however, occur, the whole nation would rise and sweep the Government from office at once.

GIRL SLEPT BY OPEN GAS JET

Prompt Action Saved Miss Ida Wood From Death

Toronto, Dec. 23.—The odor of gas emanating from a room in the apartment house of Mr. Dennis [illegible], at [illegible] Shaw street, early this morning, drew the attention of some of the boarders, who on effecting an entrance into the room, found its occupant, Miss Ida Wood, a young girl boarder, lying in a semi-conscious state on the bed, while the gas jet was partly open. The girl was [illegible] and had evidently inhaled the gas during her sleep. She was rushed to the Western Hospital, where the efforts of Dr. [illegible], who attended her, proved successful, for after a time she revived. She was unable, however, to account for the open gas jet.

THE HYDRO SITUATION

Mayor Bradburn and Ald. W. J. Johnston, chairman of the Power Committee of the City Council, interviewed Mr. Gaby, chief engineer of the Department, yesterday at Toronto, in regard to the remarkable situation which has developed in this city in regard to Hydro power. Mayor Bradburn had not returned last night at 9 o'clock, but Ald. Johnston was seen by The Times, and stated that there was nothing for publication at present. He, however, said that the ratepayers had no cause for worry, as matters would be straightened out to their satisfaction in the course of a few days.

The Otonabee Power Company, whose franchise expires on the 31st of the present month, is circulating petition asking for its renewal. It is being largely signed by their old patrons.

QUEBEC PURCHASE LONG STEP TOWARD CONTROL BY PEOPLE

Ottawa Regards Waterfront Deal as Part of Big Government Plan

Ottawa, Dec. 23.—Purchase by the Government of three miles of the most valuable portion of the harbor front of Quebec City for a quarter of a million dollars is regarded here to-day as the most advanced step which the Borden Government has yet taken towards Government ownership towards the nationalization of harbors and ports. It is said also to herald the approach of still more advanced legislation along this path of policy.

Space Occupied by Allans

The area taken over by the Government takes in the space now occupied by the Allan line. The Government has under consideration extensive plans for its development and these may be [illegible] at the coming session of Parliament.

Since coming into office, Mr. Borden has given steady and convincing proof of his leanings towards the policy of Government ownership of public utilities. The construction of big state-owned elevators at Port Arthur and Fort William and the proposal to erect another at Port Nelson, was a long step towards that goal.

For Control by People

The measure last year to take over and operate branch railways in the Maritime Provinces, which was rejected by the Senate, was another move in the same direction, and the purchase yesterday of such a large part on the Quebec waterfront for Government development is still another important advance. The coming session, it is believed, will witness still further departures towards the idea of control by the people for the people.

SEARCH TWO BUILDINGS FOR THOSE MISSING

New York Apartment House and Clermont Salvation Army Home Burn With Toll of Three Dead.

New York, Dec. 23.—Three persons were killed and four injured, one probably fatally in a fire which destroyed an apartment house at No. 300 Amsterdam Avenue early today.

A score of other tenants had narrow escapes. Two were trapped by the flames, but were rescued by prompt action on the part of firemen and police. Mrs. Margaret Mercer threw her infant son, Joseph from a third story window. Police and firemen failed to catch the child and it will probably die. Then Mrs. Mercer jumped and was seriously injured.

The dead: Mrs. Mary McManus, [illegible], burned to death in her apartments; Thomas J. McManus, [illegible], her son; Miss Mary McManus, [illegible]. The injured: Mrs. Margaret Mercer, Joseph Mercer, her husband; Joseph Mercer, Jr., infant son; Michael J. Sullivan, fireman, [illegible] by fall from fire escape.

FLAMES CUT OFF EXIT.

The fire was discovered on the second floor of the apartment building. Within a few minutes it had gained such headway that flames were rushing up the stairway well to the roof and cutting off all escape by the stairway. The Mercer family huddled near a window in the front of the apartment.

The flames came [illegible] closer until Mrs. Mercer's night dress was ignited. Then she tossed her baby to the street and jumped.

Thomas McManus, Jr., who perished with his mother and sister, was a veteran of the [illegible], [illegible]. He was a fireman attached to Engine Company No. 45 and was off on 24 hours leave.

SCRAMBLE OFF JUST IN TIME

Fishermen Quit Ship as It Sinks in Deep Water—Was Rammed by a Tug.

New York, Dec. 23.—Forty fishermen scrambled off the schooner Seneca in North River to-day to the tug Daniel Willard just before the schooner with a big gap in her side sank in twenty-five feet of water. Backing out of her pier she had been rammed amidship by the tug owned by the Penna Coal Company. No one was hurt. The Seneca was a converted yacht.

WITH PEG LEG, FATHER OF 11 TO WED GIRL 20

Phonograph Factory Girl's Note on Record Brings Proposal From Courageous Widower in Ireland.

West Orange, N.J., Dec. 23—A proposal of marriage from a widower of eleven children has been received by Miss Jessie Cosgrove, who was employed in a phonograph factory here. A few years ago, for a joke, Miss Cosgrove wrote a note on a piece of paper which she inserted in a record, "Where the River Shannon Flows." There was a large demand for these records in Ireland and yesterday, Miss Cosgrove, who is soon to be married, received the proposal from one Dennis O'Finn of West Meath, Ireland.

In part the letter says: "In a talking machine record I found a note in which you say you are looking for a man. Being as I am a widower, I would like to say I would not mind if you would come to this country so I could marry you. Although I am [illegible] years old now, my health is just as good as when I was [illegible]. I have a wooden leg, because I lost the real one in a steam road accident, but the artificial one does not interfere with my walking or work.

"My good wife died from a fever more than twelve months ago, and having pity on my eleven little ones, I thought to ask if you would become my wife so I could interest their bringing to you, for I have heard that you American women do make good wives."

NEW HIGH RECORD MADE BY ROYAL BANK

Montreal, Dec. 23.—The business of the Royal Bank of Canada reached a new high record in the year ended financial statement just issued. During the period mentioned, the profits crossed the two-million-dollar mark, reaching a total of $2,142,100.22, after deducting all charges of management and other expenses, accrued interest on deposits, full provision for bad and doubtful debts and rebate of interest on unmatured bills.

The profits for the year, together with the $630,239.36 brought forward in profit and loss account at the beginning of the year just ended, made a total of $2,772,319.58 from which to meet the dividends and appropriations. These were as follows:—

Four dividends at the rate of 12 p.c. per annum	$1,387,200
Transferred to Officers' Pension Fund	100,000
Written off Bank Premises Account	250,000

This total of $1,737,200 being deducted from the sum at the disposal of the bank, left a balance of $1,035,119.58 in the profit and loss account at the end of the year. The net result of the year, therefore, is that the profit and loss account has been increased by $404,900.22 after all deductions for expenses, dividends and appropriations have been made.

EARNINGS AT RECORD LEVEL.

As the paid-up-capital of the bank amount to $11,560,000 it will be seen that the profits for the year are slightly in excess of 18½ p.c. on the capital.

Equally pleasing are the figures contained in the statement of assets and liabilities. As against total liabilities to the public amounting to $154,761,460.04, are cash reserves of $21,408,300, are cash reserves of $21,408,300.72, being 13.83 p.c. while the liquid assets amount to $72,806,701.71 and bear the ratio of 46.06 p.c. to the liabilities.

A new item in the cash assets this year is the amount of $3,000,000 deposited in the Central Gold Reserve. This deposit gives to the bank additional powers in the matter of note circulation, the total of which at the end of November amounted to $13,176,034, or $1,616,000 in excess of the paid-up-capital. The amount which the Royal carries in the new Central Gold Reserve, is the largest of any Canadian Bank.

GROWTH OF YEAR.

Deposits bearing interest are well above the hundred-million-dollar mark, being $101,900,700.67. When this is added to the sum of $36,276,071.00 on deposit but not bearing interest, total deposits of $138,177,[illegible] are reached.

An interesting comparison in the liabilities to shareholders is seen in the fact that as against a paid-up capital of $11,560,000, the Reserve Fund of the Royal Bank is $12,560,000 or just $1,000,000 in excess, or if the profit and loss fund be added to the reserve, the total becomes $13,575,119.

Call loans reach a total of about $19,819,000, of which $10,517,[illegible] was elsewhere than in Canada, the balance of $9,[illegible] being on call in Canada. The current loans, however, amounted to no less than $[illegible] and in addition to this was the sum of $[illegible] loaned to cities, municipalities and school districts and $[illegible] to Provincial Governments, making total loans of $[illegible]. Altogether, the assets of the bank now reach the large total of $[illegible]. These assets have been mounting up from year to year [illegible] the commercial requirements of the country.

LOCK THIEVES IN EMPTY BOX CARS

Women Caught Stealing Coal in N. Tonawanda Placed Under Arrest

North Tonawanda, Dec. 23.—Complaints reaching Erie railroad officials that coal consigned to the city is short-weight. F. J. Foley of the railroad's detective force, came here from Buffalo to learn who was responsible for the shortage. With Patrolman John Barry and Frank Rhoney the detective saw women with sacks which they filled with coal from the cars.

As fast as they came the patrolmen and detective arrested them and locked them in a box car. When ten of the coal thieves were in custody a call was sent in for the patrol wagon and the prisoners were lodged in cells at the police station.

HON. ADAM BECK MAY BE KNIGHTED SHORTLY

Toronto. Dec. 23.—Rumor says that the name of Adam Beck, Chairman of the Hydro-Electric Board, will be included in the list of birthday honors at New Years, after which the Minister of Power will be addressed as "Sir Adam".

Nobody knows about that unless it be the Governor-General".

said Hon. J. J. Foy, acting Premier in the absence of Sir James, at the Parliament buildings. It is admitted generally that a title for Mr. Beck would fit very suitably into the situation.

"Mr. Beck is wealthy enough to support the dignity," was one comment. He is popular, and Mrs. Beck is a social leader. A pioneer of the Hydro-Electric development in this province, he deserves such an honor. But if Mr. Beck is to be knighted nobody knows it, unless it might be Sir James.

MR. BORDEN AVOIDS TITLE

Possibility is Hon. Mr. Rogers May Win Honor

STURDY SCOT GOT THE JOB

Guelph, Ont. Dec. 23.—A husky little Scotsman, who was out of work gave an Englishman a sound thrashing in front of the City Hall this morning because he insinuated that the Scot would not work if he got chance.

SIR JAMES BETTER LEFT ROOM AND LADY WHITNEY BACK

Hon. Dr. Pyne, Who Was in Constant Attendance is Reassuring

New York, Dec. 23.—Hon. Dr. Pyne, said this afternoon that Lady Whitney had left for Toronto this morning, Sir James' condition having become so reassuring that she felt no alarm about leaving.

Sir James will probably remain in New York for two weeks or until he is thoroughly rested.

Was Just Overworked

Sir James Whitney is ill, but not in dangerous condition according to Dr. Pyne, who was interviewed late afternoon at the Manhattan Hotel.

Dr. Pyne said: "It certainly is not true, as reported, that Sir James Whitney is dangerously ill. He was overworked, run down and nervous, and he came here a week ago for his rest and complete recovery. He is in his rooms here at the hotel and I alone am attending him. He seems greatly improved this afternoon and I anticipate that he will have completely recovered within a few days."

Down Stairs For Meals

New York, Dec. 22.—Sir James Whitney, Premier of Ontario, whose homeward trip from Washington was interrupted here owing to a slight illness, was said this morning to be feeling better and able to come down stairs for meals at his hotel. It was undecided just when Sir James would leave for Toronto.

IT IS SAID ANNA YOKINEN PROBABLY DIED FROM EXPOSURE

Reported That the Post-Mortem Gave No Evidence of Violence

Toronto, Dec. 23.—Almost perished with cold, in a demented condition, and forced from starvation to eat raw corn gathered together in the fields, it is believed that Anna Yokinen, the young Finnish girl, came to her death as the result of natural causes. The postmortem examination, while it has not been made public, is said to have decided the fact that the girl had not been subjected to any violence, and was physically unharmed.

A quantity of corn is said to have been found in the young woman's stomach, but partially chewed and in an unripe condition, strengthening the theory that frantic with hunger and having lost all sense of direction she crawled into the stook, and there [illegible] away, at the [illegible] protected in a measure from the biting winds and severe frost.

Wandered for 21 Days

It seems scarcely possible to believe that the young woman could have wandered about the countryside for nearly 21 days unnoticed by any of the residents in that neighborhood, but this appears to be the only solution of the mystery. That after she bade her friend good night at the corner of Avenue road and Bloor street, she was suddenly stricken with some form of dementia appears to be the reasonable theory to accept.

Retracing her steps, it is believed that she went back to Avenue road and Bloor street. Probably she noticed that a change had come over her, and went back to call on her friend for assistance, but that, unable to locate her had started north on Avenue road. Where the unfortunate girl wandered from that point can only be conjectured.

Lay Down in Fields

North of Forest Hill road and west of Dunvegan road a number of small farms are located. Even north of this again the houses are more widely separated, and it is believed that fatigued with much walking she lay down in the fields to rest. That she may have contracted a cold which produced a high fever and added to her already unsettled condition of mind is regarded as quite possible.

RAMONA BORDEN REGRETS MOTHERS DIVORCE CASE

San Francisco, Dec. 23.—Ramona Borden, "the poor little rich girl," is sorry that the Supreme Court denied her mother a divorce from Gail Borden, the condensed milk king. From the palatial Borden home in Southern California she sends forth her regret to her mother who is living in seclusion in San Francisco, and declares that she doesn't see how women can "retain her respect" with a divorce.

And the "poor little rich girl" will stay with her mother, in spite of the decree of the Supreme Court.

"I am very sorry mother didn't get her divorce," she said, "I have made friends with my father, but I shall never leave my mother to go to him.

"I will not discuss the divorce — that my mother's business. But I believe that any woman should be allowed a divorce if she wants it. My father and mother can't get along, and it would be better if they were divorced. I certainly shall not make any effort to reconcile them.

"As for me, my love for my mother is so strong that I should stay with her on any account.

"Whatever my mother's lot is, I will share it.

"Mother has been receiving $10,000 a year from father. Just what effect the divorce suit will have on this I don't know."

NEW ZEALAND IS DETERMINED TO HAVE A NAVY OF HER OWN

But Under the Control of the Admiralty—Colony is a Fertile Field for Investors

London, Dec. 23.—Arthur Myers, ex-Minister of Finance in New Zealand, speaking here yesterday, reviewed the economic and financial condition of his country in order to justify past and future calls on the London money market, and he also described what was being done and aimed at by the Dominion in relation to the problem of Imperial defence in the Pacific.

Last year 85 per cent. of New Zealand's export trade was with the British possessions, and 86 per cent. of her imports came from the British possessions. They were determined that the standard of living should not be lowered by Asiatics. The time has come when New Zealand should have her own navy in time of war. That navy would be placed under the control of the British Admiralty. The Dominions whose shores were washed by the Pacific should unite to police the Pacific Ocean and to relieve the mother country of the duty of safeguarding trade routes in those waters.

Mr. Myers also stated that the total debt of New Zealand was £[illegible], of which £[illegible] was directly reproductive. It was sometimes asked how New Zealand could pay £[illegible] a year in interest. That [illegible]. They spent nearly half a million a year on old age pensions, a million on Education, [illegible] few years, and no doubt would be for some years to come.

To show the capacity of the people to bear their responsibilities, he mentioned that in 1912 the deposits in the banks and savings banks amounted to £44,[illegible].

GIRL IS NOW REDUCED TO A SHADOW

Little Valley, Dec. 23.—Laura Buffum, the 13-year-old daughter of Mrs. Cynthia Buffum, indicted for murder in the first degree, and who is in Little Valley jail awaiting trial, was weighed last Friday. She tipped the scales at 17 pounds. This shows more plainly than [illegible] descriptive words [illegible] tell how the child has wasted away from the effects of supposed arsenical poisoning. Previous to being taken ill the child weighed between [illegible] and [illegible] pounds. She is reduced to a [illegible] skeleton. Her condition, however, is such that hopes of recovery are entertained. The plan of removing her to a hospital in Buffalo where she can have the benefit of the best and most approved treatment [illegible] by specialists [illegible] keen interest in the child's [illegible].

The date of the trial of [illegible] Frybus, alleged paramour of Mrs. Buffum, and who is under indictment for murder in the first degree, [illegible].

A Sympathetic Oriental

By EUNICE IDA BLAKE

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

I am the wife of a United States army officer and have lived a good deal of my time on the Pacific slope, where the only servants to be had are Chinese. There is no doubt but the Chinese make very good servants if they wish to be good, but if they prefer to be bad they can excel at that too.

I married in the infantry and went out with my husband to a station where the Chinese were as thick as blackberries. I had the pride natural to a bride of showing how well I could keep house and appreciated the importance of winning the confidence of my servants, or, rather, at that time my servant, for the wife of a second lieutenant—neither she nor her husband having anything but his pay—is not supposed to keep more than one.

My first Chinese servant was Ti Wang. Ti was the smoothest, softest tongued rascal I ever met. He had enough duplicity in him for an eighteenth century European diplomat. To him words were indeed intended to conceal ideas.

"You velly young wife," he said to me. "You want velly good Chinaman for cook. Mucky Chinamen velly bad. Ti feel solly for Melican lady. Ti be good cook."

All this was spoken with a look of commiseration for a young thing like myself that to one familiar with the men from the Flowery Kingdom would have boded no good. I did not doubt that my servant would be a great comfort to me. It was not long before his true inwardness showed itself. He first made an excuse of having a sick brother who couldn't washy-washy to provide for to wheedle me out of a month's wages in advance. Then he surreptitiously tucked under his capacious coat and ample sleeves all the staple kitchen provisions I had bought to last several months. Tea, coffee, sugar and spices disappeared like magic. Then, having received an offer of better wages than I was giving him, he took himself off without so much as saying he was going.

My next servant was Charlie Li. Why so many Chinese are called Charlie I don't know, though Li is an appropriate name for them. Charlie was recommended by the major's wife, who had him in her kitchen for awhile when her regular servant was ill. She told me she would rather have Charlie than the other. I had no fault to find with Charlie except that he stayed with me but a day. He didn't stay long enough to ask for any wages, and since experience had taught me not to pay Chinamen in advance he didn't get any.

After this servants were passing through my kitchen, none staying with me more than a week. In vain I refused to engage one unless he would agree to stay a month. Something must be scaring them away. I didn't see how they could see anything in a young woman of nineteen to frighten them, and I was the only person with whom they came in contact. One of them, who was about to depart after three days of service, I asked why he left.

"Why not?"

"Donno. Chinaman won't stay here."

"Why do you go so soon after coming?"

"I am velly well."

He did not seem to care whether I believed him or not. Indeed, he knew he was lying, and I knew it too. However, I had had such bad luck with Chinese servants—and there were no others to be had—that I made up my mind to do my own cooking for awhile.

Meanwhile my husband, who had been making inquiries for me as to servants from brother officers' wives, began to be considerably vexed that I could not keep any of them. There was no such loss of servants among those who sent me mine, and it appeared that I must either be too exacting or have a frightful temper or some other blemish that prevented a servant from working for me, whereas the truth was that after the earlier ones left I simply gave up everything to those who came later, granting all requests and opposing them in nothing. I didn't even dare criticise the cooking of a single dish. The first tiff I had with my husband was when he ventured to remark that perhaps I didn't give them quite free rein enough. I resented the imputation with a fervor that sent him off to the officers' club and prevented his ever making any such suggestion in future.

One day I put the tin bread box out in the sun, turning it up on its side and exposing the bottom. I was surprised to see Chinese characters on it. I wondered what they meant. When a woman begins to wonder what is the meaning of anything it is preparatory to making plans to find out. I called the servant of my next door neighbor, who was beating a rug, to come over and translate the characters. He did so as follows:

"This is a very bad woman. She doesn't pay the servants' wages and gives no extras."

That smooth tongued villain Ti Wang, who had pitied my youth and inexperience and had robbed me besides, had chalked a notice on the bread box warning all other servants against me. I waited patiently till my husband came in from his duties and, showing him the characters on the bottom of the box, handed him a translation.

Brain of Humans and of Animals.

Professor Ranke some time ago brought out a new fact concerning the brain of a man as compared with that of other animals. It has long been known that the brain of a man does not weigh so much as that of a whale or an elephant and that there are birds and apes whose brains are heavier than a man's in proportion to the weight of their bodies. But Professor Ranke showed that the way to reveal the actual superiority of the human brain is to compare its weight with that of the spinal cord. Measured in this way, man's brain is proportionately far heavier than that of any of the lower animals.—Harper's Weekly.

The term "cabal" as applied to secret factions of any kind had its rise in England about 1667, being first applied to the cabinet of Charles II. and formed from the initials of the cabinet members' names—Lord Clifford, Lord Ashley, the Duke of Buckingham, Lord Arlington and the Duke of Lauderdale—C. CHRISTMAS APPEAL

The Hospital for Sick Children

COLLEGE ST., TORONTO

Dear Mr. Editor:—

Thanks for your kindness in allowing me the privilege of appealing at this Christmas time on behalf of the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto.

It would take more space than you can spare to tell of the good work done for the sick and deformed children of this Province. Let me, however, in a few words, tell you of the progress of the work of the Hospital.

One nurse, six little white beds, a few dollars, a few friends—this was the beginning. The beds have grown to 250, the dollars to thousands, the friends to hundreds. 1875, the first year, 44 in-patients, 67 out-patients; 1913, last year, 1,648 in-patients, 25,[illegible] out-patients; 1875, 1 nurse; 1913, 70 nurses.

Since 1875, thirty-eight years ago, the Hospital has admitted within its walls [illegible] children as in-patients, and 159,231 as out-patients, a total of 190,249, or an average of 4,762 per year. Of the 31,018 in-patients, 15,[illegible] were from Toronto, and 5,818 from other parts of the Province; 16,150 of the total in-patients were cured, and [illegible] were improved.

In the Orthopedic Department last year, of the 1,648 in-patients, 379 were treated for deformities, 35 hip disease, 37 Pott's disease, 2 knock-knees, 19 bow-legs, 61 club feet, 3 lateral curvature of the spine, 44 infantile paralysis, 6 wry neck, and 75 tubercular disease of knee, hip and ankle. In 1913, the Surgical Apparatus Shop manufactured 427 appliances for in-patients and out-patients, including ankle braces, spinal braces, hip splints, bow-leg splints, club-foot splints, plaster jackets, etc.

In this Department in 36 years nearly 800 boys and girls have been treated for Club Feet and 650 corrected. Half of these came from places outside of Toronto. Surely we have a fair claim for help from the people of this Province.

Will you, the reader of this letter, help to give crippled children a fair start in life?

Busy dollars are better than idle tears. The sympathy that helps is good, but the Hospital has to have the sympathy that works.

While Christmas Bells are ringing to the glory of Him "Who made the lame to walk and the blind to see," give, give, give, and help the Hospital to help God's little ones, upon whom the heavy hand of affliction has been laid.

Will you please send a dollar, or more, if you can spare it, to Douglas Davidson, the Secretary-Treasurer of the Hospital, or

J. ROSS ROBERTSON,
Chairman of the Trustees, Toronto.

Prof. Mulveney Known All Over the World

Proprietor of World's Famous Tape Worm Exterminator

Tape worm is bred from a parasite. It is of [illegible] shape, having two, four and six suckers. It lays the eggs which are connected together. They develop and form a body, which is the worm. Each section is an individual, having a sucker or mouth. The worm grows much longer than the bowels where it is located, and sometimes a whole colony of them are found, enough to fill a quart of solid worm, and when put in a bucket of water would apparently fill it. It is the hardest task in the world to destroy this parasite, without doing injury to the individual who may be so unfortunate as to have it, as the parasite clings to the bowels, freeing itself from the body of the worm, and remains there to breed another. It is an internal demon, and causes its victim to suffer all the symptoms of disease imaginable. The cleverest physicians are led to believe the patient is suffering from some other disease, as nearly every person has different symptoms. Some have been treated for cancer of the bowels, consumption of the bowels, consumption of the lungs, chronic [illegible], nervous prostration, melancholia, hypochondria, hysteria, inflammation of the bowels, appendicitis, and other complaints, when one or more of these worms were eating their lives away.

Prof. Mulveney has made the discovery to free the victim without injury to the system, destroying the parasite as well as expelling the worm with one dose of medicine without any previous starvation. Visit his office, where he has in his possession the most wonderful collection of these parasites which have been expelled from hundreds of people by his famous remedy, some bottles containing colonies of worms, and anyone seeing them cannot imagine how a person could possibly live with them in his bowels. It is surprising the number of people that have these [illegible] have them and are sick or weary of [illegible] life. The bottles and [illegible] the professor has in his possession are enough to convince you of this alarming fact. Some of the most prominent symptoms are ravenous appetite, dizzy spells, headaches, cramps in the bowels, a feeling of something moving in the bowels, etc. Segments may be in evidence at any time, and this is complete proof of the presence of tape worm. There are many other feelings of distress which take too long to enumerate. Strange to say some people of strong constitution have very little distress.

IMPROVING THE I.C.R.

The government is rapidly making a real railroad out of the Intercolonial. This line is being made thoroly up-to-date in every respect so that it is in a position to hold its own with its big private-owned rivals. The latest plan is the introduction of train despatching by telephone. A contract has been let for the installation of a service, as a start, from Moncton to St. John.

Every Weak Throat Quickly Strengthened And Bronchitis Cured

Grand Results Follow the Direct Breathing Remedy, Which Cures Without Drugging

The country is fairly wild over the wonderful recovery that throat sufferers are making every day with Catarrhozone. From ocean to ocean comes letters telling of rapid cures—and cures when the complaint was chronic and long standing. It's a brand new principle upon which Catarrhozone works—not a single dose of medicine to take—nothing to upset the stomach or spoil digestion.

You can breathe through the Catarrhozone Inhaler medicated air that is full of healing, soothing, balsams, full of piney, antiseptic essences that resemble the air of the pine woods in the Adirondacks. The piney vapor has a truly marvelous action on weak throats. It brings strength and health to the bronchitis, stops that hacking, irritating cough, prevents hoarseness and difficult breathing. You can't find anything for weak-throated people on earth more beneficial than Catarrhozone. It means heaven on earth to the man that has had bronchitis, catarrh or throat irritation. You will realize this the first time you use Catarrhozone, which is a scientific preparation designed for diseases of the nose, throat and bronchial tubes. Get the large size, it lasts two months, costs $1.00; medium size, 50c.; sample size, 25c. All storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

COMPRESSED ICE.

Sinks in Water and Crumbles Into Powder When Warmed.

All know that ordinary ice will float. This relative lightness of ice with respect to water is due to expansion of the water at the moment of freezing. If water is frozen under immense pressure it comes that this expansion is prevented and ice heavier than water is produced.

G. Tammann has prepared this modification, which he calls Ice III., as follows: He compressed water to 3,000 kilograms (6,614 pounds) and cooled it in solid carbon dioxide snow and finally in liquid air. Under these conditions a colorless, transparent ice is formed. It is much denser than ordinary ice and heavier than water; consequently it sinks when placed in water. Ice III. is very unstable, and on slight warming it swells out and breaks up into a dense white powder. The volume of the resulting powder is apparently four to eight times that of the original ice. This powder formed by the breaking up of the dense form is nothing more than ordinary ice in the form of fine crystals, which, of course, on further warming melt at zero degrees centigrade.

Experiments on Ice III. show that it is impossible to obtain it by separation from water at atmospheric pressure and then suddenly cooling. There would never be a possibility of this unstable form of solid water being formed in nature.—New York Tribune.

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY

Ladies and Gentlemen:

The retirement of Mr. W. H. Hill has decided me to acquiesce with the desire of a number of ratepayers who wish me to be a candidate for a seat on the Utilities Commissioners' Board for 1914.

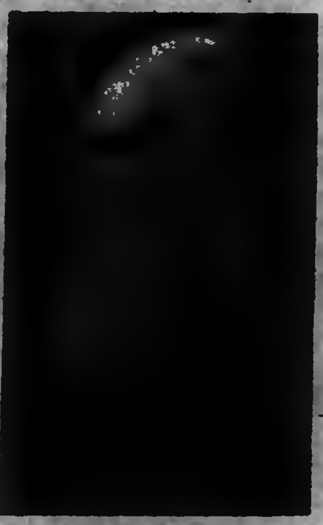
We all realize that the Board of Water Commissioners is, and needs to be, an efficient, business like organization. For the coming year, the management of the local Hydro-Electric will be an important addition to the duties of the Commissioners.

It will be my aim, if honored with a seat at the board, to co-operate with the present members of that commission, and to assist in continuing the success achieved by the Waterworks department.

I shall also endeavor to help, as far as is in my power, with the organization of the local Hydro-Electric system. Having from the beginning felt the advantages of this system, I shall do my utmost to make this public utility of the greatest possible service to the citizens of the municipality.

The qualification which I present to you in support of my candidature is service in your interest for five years on your board of Aldermen. On this record I ask your support at the polls.

Respectfully,
ROBERT HICKS.



TO THE ELECTORS OF PETERBOROUGH.

Ladies and Gentlemen:—

Last year a large number of ratepayers requested me to be a candidate for Water Commissioner in opposition to Mr. Moore. I not only declined to be a candidate but did what I could to prevent opposition. The Commissioners at that time had law suits on with the contractors where about thirty thousand dollars of the people's money was at stake. Mr. Moore being a lawyer I considered he should be the best posted man on the Commission to fight the contractors and in the interest of the City it would be a mistake to remove him.

This year I have again been waited upon by a large representation of the ratepayers who believe that with my thorough knowledge of all the waters in this district and my many years experience as alderman I should be a capable man for the position. I have consented to be a candidate and my past record in the Council I think is proof that I should [illegible] you faithful and honest service.

The taking over of the Hydro-Electric system will require a great deal of time—more than any man who has a large business to attend to can spare. Not being in business I can give all the time required, and if necessary will make a personal inspection of every house in the city and see that rich and poor are treated alike.

I can see no reason, with the large body of ready made reservoirs of the Otonabee River, there should be any shortage of water for either household or lawn service, or why there should not be a reduction in the water rates. A good supply of cool water is a necessity in every house and should be available for the people at a low rate.

To the ratepayers who are now residents of the City and not personally acquainted with me, would say that for a number of years I occupied the position of alderman, and always [illegible] both as a representative of No. [illegible] Ward and also after the Ward system was abolished.

General street railway extension and cheap transportation like cheap light and water, should be the goal of any municipal government. When a worker can have his house and garden anywhere, and is not tied to a locality his prospects are greatly improved.

Trusting that the ratepayers who want good service in the future will have given the [illegible] their hearty support.

I am, yours very truly,
J. S. McWILLIAMS

PUPLIC OPINION

The Times does not hold itself responsible for the opinions of its correspondents.

OPEN LETTER TO ALDERMAN JOHNSTON

Alderman Johnston, Chairman of Power Committee.

Sir,—I, in common with many of our ratepayers would like to know what it is going to cost to light our our town section. From the best information I can get each light will costs $60.00 per light per annum, which includes cost of installation power to light the lights, interest on sinking fund spread over a period of years and maintenance and repairs.

You have installed 100 lights in downtown section. From the best information $60.00 a year will cost the ratepayers for this little bit of street lighting the sum of $6,000.00 a year. Under our old system I find that there were only nine lamps in this whole district which costs the ratepayers only $50.00 per lamp per year which amounts to an annual charge of only $450.00 a year as against $6,000 a year under the system you have installed.

If the rest of our city is only moderately lit I would like to know what our total bill for street lighting is going to be. The ratepayers are completely in the dark. If only one mile of our streets costs $6000.00 per year to light, what is the remaining 85 miles of our streets going to cost?

Yours etc.,
R. F. MacGREGOR.

THE POWER SCHEME

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—Will the Government get us out of the hole? That is the question. Or have we got to do as the Seymour Power Co. say and buy them out for $600,000?

The city asked the Commission at Toronto for power and should have let it go at that. It is not a wise proposition for us to run up against any big, expensive power policy, when we ought to be able to buy power from the Government.

FELLING BIG TREES.

The Great Waste That Comes With Making Up Their Beds.

In logging operations the felling of one of the big trees requires much skill in order that it may not be broken in the fall, as such an accident means perhaps the loss of fully $800 owing to the value of the wood. As yet, however, the old method prevails of cutting it part of the way through with the crosscut saw worked by two men, the ax being used for an incision on the opposite side, the trunk being felled by means of wedges.

In felling the tree a number of smaller ones are frequently cut down to form a bed on which it may fall so that it will not break on account of its weight. Here is a great waste since the felling of a Sr. 150 tons in weight may require the sacrifice of a group of other trees which at maturity would equal it in size. In the "clearings" may be seen thousands of the young trees which have been cut down merely for "beds."

Undoubtedly a mechanical system could be utilized in the work, such as a portable power derrick, the top of which could be attached to a tree by the block and tackle system, thus allowing the trunk when cut through to be lowered gradually by means of ropes of steel cable without the timber being injured and the crushing of the smaller trees near it.—W. A. Day in Cassier's Magazine.

Strange Feats of Eye and Hand.

An expert who prided himself upon the smallness of his writing sent the president of the French academy a grain of wheat on which he had written 281 words. A Polish poet wrote all of Homer's "Iliad" on a piece of paper which could be rolled up small enough to go into a nutshell.

In the sixteenth century a man named Mark offered to Queen Elizabeth a gold chain of fifty links. The chain was so fine it could not be seen unless it was put on a sheet of white paper. To prove its lightness Mark tied it to a fly, which flew away with it. The most curious fact in this matter, which required an extraordinary a facility of touch for making this ornament, was that Mark was a blacksmith, accustomed to all kinds of heavy tools all day long.

A Spaniard, Joseph Fabs, made a carriage as large as a grain of wheat. Under a magnifying glass it was possible to see the interior fitted up with seats, every detail being carried out to perfection.

BURNING OF WIDOWS.

The Horrible Rite India Maintained For Over Twenty Centuries.

The abolition of the horrid rite of widow burning in India was decreed by the British authorities in 1829.

The dreadful practice was found there by the Macedonians under Alexander the Great 300 years before Christ, and for more than twenty-one long, weary centuries did it repeat its almost inconceivable torture and agony upon the women of India. The sacrifice, while not actually forced on the wife, was so strongly insisted on by public opinion that it amounted to a law, and its victims were legion. Scores of widows were often burned upon the funeral pile of a single rajah. In Bengal, the head center of the monstrosity, thousands were sacrificed annually, and the figure for all India was appalling.

The millions of widowed women were completely at the mercy of the remorseless superstition of the times. The ministers of Brahmanism told the widow that her sacrifice was necessary as a means of her own happiness and that of her husband in the future state, and oftener than otherwise she consented to be burned along with the dead body of her husband. Unless she did this she was covered with the maledictions and curses of the people, was virtually outlawed and unceremoniously cast outside the pale of human sympathy and consideration and had to spend the rest of her days in degradation and wretchedness. It was death on the funeral pile of her husband or a living death of contumely and shame, of loneliness and misery.

The women of India can never discharge their debt of gratitude to England for the abolition of the suttee.—New York American.

ON THE TRAIL.

But He Didn't Know the Kind of Game He Was Trailing.

In the old days a man known as Judge Douglass lived in Helena, Mont. The judge had met with an accident in his youth and had lost both of his legs above the knees. He never would get artificial legs, but had some big leather pads made to fit on the ends of the stumps and walked on them.

Locomotion was slow for the judge, but he managed to cover a good deal of ground and was very fond of walking out on the edge of the town, where he could take his exercise without being the subject of remark from strangers in the city.

One day an Englishman came to Helena to hunt. He had some letters and put up at the Helena club. He stayed around for several days. Finally, after a light fall of snow, he decided to go out into the mountains and get a sheep or a deer or something.

He left early in the morning. When it came night he had not returned. His hosts around the club waited until 8 o'clock and then decided to go out and look him up, thinking he might have been lost in one of the gulches or canyons in the hills.

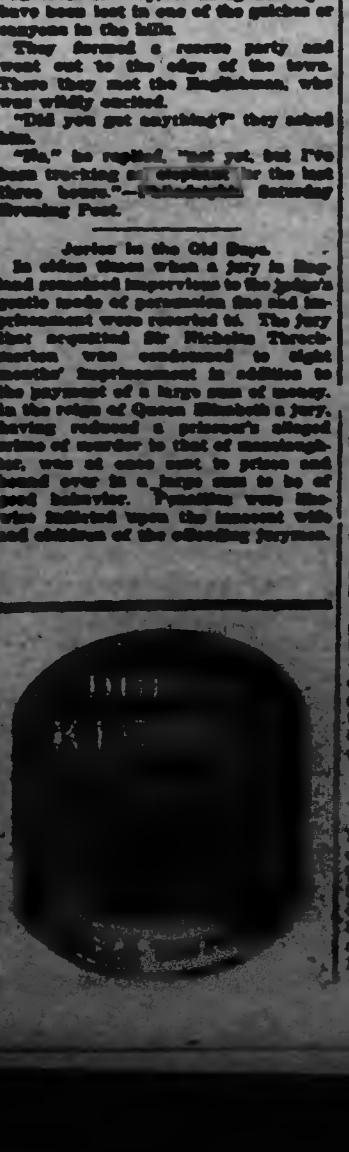
They formed a rescue party and went out to the edge of the town. There they met the Englishman, who was wildly excited.

"Did you get anything?" they asked him.

"No," he replied, "not yet, but I've been tracking an elephant for the last three hours."—Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post.

Juries In the Old Days.

In olden times when a jury in England remained impervious to the judge's gentle mode of persuasion fine and imprisonment were resorted to. The jury that acquitted Sir Nicholas Throckmorton was condemned to eight months' imprisonment in addition to the payment of a large sum of money. In the reign of Queen Elizabeth a jury, having reduced a prisoner's alleged crime of murder to that of manslaughter, was at once sent to prison and bound over in a large sum to be of good behavior. Penalties were likewise inflicted upon the innocent wife and children of the offending jurymen.



THE SPREADING PLAGUE.

It Has Become, In a Measure, a World-wide Menace.

The terrible bubonic plague, which appeared in Hongkong in 1894, spread from there to Bombay and in the next twelve years carried off more than 6,000,000 victims, has been almost quiescent for the past few years, but in 1910 it appeared in a virulent form in Harbin, has since spread to other cities and is now a worldwide menace.

More alarming than the reappearance of the disease in Manchuria is the discovery of the disease in the eastern coastwise counties of England, where several deaths have occurred.

Until 1906 little was known regarding the mode of propagation of this terrible disease, although the disease itself is as old as history. In 1906 the Indian plague research commission definitely traced the spread of the epidemic to the fleas on the black rats of the country. The rats themselves have the disease. A flea which sucks the blood of the rat takes the germs into its stomach. If the flea bites a human being within a period of three weeks the germs are transferred and the human being contracts the disease.

Until recently it had been supposed that only the black rat is susceptible to the plague and that only the flea known as Pulex cheopis could transfer it. Later discoveries, however, have shown that the common brown or Norway rat is also liable to the disease and that it may be transferred by the ordinary rat flea.

Still another matter of great interest has been disclosed by the cases in England, which are not the bubonic, but the even more deadly and more dangerous pneumonic plague. The bubonic form, in which the lymphatic glands swell and suppurate, is transferable only through some such medium as the rat and the flea. The pneumonic form, on the other hand, is directly infectious.—Youth's Companion.

The Dead Sea Is Spreading.

The Dead sea is encroaching upon the land about it so rapidly in this decade that whole forests of trees which formerly grew at some distance from its banks are now partially submerged. Maps of the sea made twenty years ago show an island near the northern extremity of the lake which was not found during a recent survey, and it is supposed that this has been lost in the rising waters. The Turkish government sold the mining rights on the shores to a syndicate for about $200,000, and if the sea for some unknown reason continues to rise these holdings will be almost unattainable.

Cards For the Puppies.

A novelty in Paris is the lap dog visiting card. Poms and pugs which go visiting with their mistresses in fashionable circles have their own tiny pasteboards tucked away in little pockets of their outdoor coats. Such dogs have two sets of cards, which are duly left on other dogs at the houses where they are calling with their mistresses. One card gives the dog's real name and its race, while the other records its pet name joined to the family name of its owner. Cards are left according to the pedigree of the dog visited.

Australia and Our Canal.

The advantage of the Panama canal to Australia is thus referred to in a Melbourne paper: "It means that in another three or four years we shall have to rearrange our mail service to Europe and our whole ocean transportation service. The first route to Britain will go by the [illegible] —because the Panama canal will shorten the journey to and from Britain by several days and thus put all [illegible] the new route in possession of an incomparable economic advantage over users of the old."

RULE OF THE ROAD.

Several travelers were seated in the hotel lobby discussing the difference in customs of the various countries they had visited. "What struck me as most peculiar abroad," said one, "is the custom of keeping to the left instead of the right, as we do here. Why is the rule reversed?"

"I think I can explain that," said a reserved looking man in the corner. "In medieval and later periods abroad men were in the custom of wearing swords. The sword was worn, as it is now, on the left side. Consequently in drawing their weapon it was done with the right hand, and to get quickly upon guard a man had to have his right side to his opponent; hence the custom of keeping to the left.

"In America when every man carried his life in his hand on account of savage Indians all men carried guns. The easiest and most natural way to carry a gun, either afoot or mounted, is over the left arm with the muzzle pointed outward, and it takes but a very slight movement to throw the butt against the right shoulder. For that reason the early settlers kept to the right of the road so their weapon could instantly be brought to bear on any mark that was necessary."—Philadelphia Times.

Odd Way to Rest.

There is nothing that will rest you so quickly as to sit on a straight back chair and, lifting the feet from the floor, push them out in front of you as far as possible, stretch the arms, put the head back, open the mouth wide and make yourself yawn.—Family Doctor.

DIDN'T KNOW BEETHOVEN.

The Ignorance That Exists In Russian Official Circles.

The following amazing story illustrates how deep is the ignorance of Russian officials on some matters and how bitter is their hatred of even the mere mention of the name of the late Count Tolstoy.

It is required by the Russian law that whenever a concert is to be held the police shall be notified of the fact. Recently a club complying with this injunction also forwarded a copy of the program, wherein appeared the item "Kreutzer Sonata." Across this the chief of police wrote, "Tolstoy prohibited." However, the program was proceeded with unaltered, and, hearing this, an infuriated chief of police summoned the directors of the club before the governor. "How dare you disobey orders!" they were asked. "You were told that Tolstoy was prohibited." Light dawned on the concert promoters, and they quickly explained that the "Kreutzer Sonata" which appeared in their program had no reference to Tolstoy's book of that title, but to a musical work composed by Beethoven. "Everybody knows Tolstoy," snapped the governor, "but who knows your Beethoven?" It was only by a telegraphic appeal to M. Stolypin, who assured the governor that there was such a person as Beethoven and that he had written a "Kreutzer Sonata," that the club officials were able to convince the governor that he had jumped to a hasty and wrong conclusion.

HE WON THE HOUSE.

Ned Harrigan's Plea at a Critical Point In a Play.

Edward Harrigan once said that the most trying moment in his theatrical career occurred in New Orleans soon after the civil war. He had gone south with his company and, yielding somewhat to popular request, put on "The Blue and the Gray." The play had been a success up north, but down south, with the air still full of the bitterness of the war, it was a dangerous experiment. Tony Hart was to represent the Confederate gray, so he hunted up a uniform of the Louisiana Tigers, and when he came marching on, young, stalwart, handsome, the typical soldier boy in the beloved uniform, the house, men and women, cheered and shouted and cried for all their heroes embodied in this boy. Harrigan, standing in the wings in his northern blue, waiting to go on, had just one thought—"They'll kill me!" Then he stepped out, the embodiment of the enemy, and a cold, dead silence fell upon the house. Not a hand moved for him. The audience was tense with emotion, and there was only an instant to act if the play was to be saved. Harrigan, big, kindly, good looking, came swiftly down to the front and stepped over the footlight gutter, leaning down to them. "For the love of heaven, won't you give the Yankee a hand?" he exclaimed. At once the house was caught and all the pentup feeling turned the right way. There was a yell of applause.

J. J. HARTLEY

The Workingman's Candidate For

MAYOR

Unanimously Endorsed by the Trades of Labor Council

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY OF PETERBOROUGH:

Ladies and Gentlemen:—At the earnest request of a large number of the ratepayers I have consented to be a candidate for the position of Mayor for the year 1914.

Being born and having lived all my life in Peterborough, and my whole life's savings being invested in Peterborough, I naturally have a deep interest in the welfare and prosperity of the City.

Should I be elected I promise you that I will guard to the very best of my ability, the interests of the ratepayers and will oppose all unnecessary expenditure. I will do my utmost to keep down the ever increasing rate of taxation consistent with needs of a growing City.

I may say that I am in favor of Municipal Ownership, and am in favor of having all city work done by our own people instead of bringing in outsiders to do it.

I will endeavour to see that the ratepayers get value for every dollar that is expended.

I have had considerable experience in municipal matters, having served ten years in the Council and fourteen years on the Board of Education, being Chairman of that Board for two years, I was also Chairman of the Board of Health for several years, so that you will see that I am not without a fair share of experience.

Should you do me the honor to elect me as Mayor of our City I will do my best to serve you to the extent of my ability.

Yours respectfully,

J. J. HARTLEY

COAXING SLEEP.

Simply a Question of Will Power and Self Suggestion.

Ordinarily we do not sleep by accident or haphazard. We simply resolve to sleep, and self suggestion plays a great part in the production of sleep. We go through a variety of actions, all suggestive of a change from our normal waking condition. We undress; we place ourselves in a comfortable position; we close our eyes; we believe and expect we are going to sleep, and the result is—sleep.

One of the great preventives of sleep is the fear of not sleeping, but a writer in Harper's Bazar says that once this fear is broken down we sleep anyhow. The insomniac worries about his insomnia, and this very worry deepens the mischief; hence the sufferer should suggest to himself again and again, "If I sleep, well; if I don't sleep, I will at least gain rest by keeping my mind calm and my body relaxed."

In a word, our chances of getting sleep increase if we assume the external physical attitude which corresponds to sleep if we relax every muscle and let it stay relaxed, if we breathe lightly and regularly, if we call up the imagination of a sleeping person and talk and think sleep to ourselves, repeating silently and in a quiet, dreamy fashion such a formula as this:

"There is no reason why I should not sleep. Therefore I can sleep. Therefore I will sleep. My mind is at peace. Sleep is coming. I am getting sleepy. I am about to sleep. I am asleep."

Christmas Announcement

WE take pleasure in once more presenting to you our Annual Announcement in connection with the Holiday Trade, and would respectfully call your attention to the fact that we have secured from the leading markets of the world an up-to-date stock of holiday goods, suitable for Christmas and New Year presents, which we are selling at a bargain. This year we are better prepared than ever to cater to the wants of the public.

In both quality and prices, we defy competition. Our expenses are comparatively insignificant as compared with the other larger stores in the city, and the fact that we have not got to look to the profits from our bookstore trade to carry us through, but have a large printing and book manufacturing business as well, in addition to our rapidly expanding newspaper business.

We have made expensive preparations for the Holiday Trade, and invite the public to call and inspect our stock and get our prices before purchasing elsewhere.

Calendars, Handy Booklets, Christmas and Text Cards

We have in Calendars, Booklets, Christmas and Text Cards a stock of the latest designs, and a very large assortment to choose from. Special discounts to parties taking a number.

Fancy Goods

In Fancy Goods, as in every other line, our stock is up-to-date. We can supply you with presents for young and old, rich and poor, wives, husbands and sweethearts. We only give a mere hint here of the articles with which our shelves are laden:—Brush and Comb Sets, Manicure Sets, Writing Desks, Collar and Cuff Boxes, Glove and Handkerchief Boxes, Ladies' and Gentlemen's Travelling Companions, Jewel Cases, Photo Boxes, Albums, etc., etc. These goods are all new, and made in designs and of material not shown before.

Books for All

We ask an inspection of our stock and prices. We aim to give our customers the best possible value for the money. Dainty Gift Books, Padded Poems, and an endless variety of Cloth and Leather Bound Works. Also Bibles, Hymnals, Children's Illustrated Books, etc.

Games for Young and Old

Our stock in Games is very complete, including Fishpond, Flips, Game of India, Halma, The Century Ride, Lost Heir, Authors, Checkers, Dominoes, Nations, Lotto and all the popular 10 cent games.

New Souvenir Novelties and Small Wares

The following are but a few of the many very desirable articles suitable for Yuletide remembrances: Purses, Card Cases, Burnt Leather Blotters, Pen Wipers and Book Markers: Tea, Crumb, Pin and Ash Trays, Ink Wells, Bon-bon Dishes, Japanese Cups and Saucers, Bread and Butter Plates, Rose Bowls, Vases, Biscuit Jars, all kinds of bric-a-brac, etc.

For Dolls We Lead—Others Follow

We propose to lead this season in the Doll Trade, and are showing Dolls at prices that defy competition. Kestner Kid Dolls, Dressed Dolls in all sizes, Bisque and Composition Dolls, Wax and China Dolls, Rubber Dolls and Dolls that may be used for Fancy Pin Boxes, etc. Dolls from 15c up.

Please Remember

1.—That The Times Bookstore has everything marked close to cost.
2.—We can sell cheaper than any other house. The reason we can afford to do so is, because our expenses are practically nil compared with other concerns.
3.—We are large manufacturers of stationery supplies and books, employing about 60 persons, so that in these lines we have goods at first cost.
4.—We sell to the wholesale trade, who again sell to the bookstores and stationers throughout the country, so that by purchasing direct from us you save, in many cases, the profits of two "middle men."
5.—The Times Bookstore is confident that it can give you satisfaction, and would urge an early inspection of our stock before the rush begins. You only have to select what you want and have the goods put aside for delivery when required.

Soliciting the favor of your esteemed patronage, and wishing you the compliments of the season, we remain,

Very respectfully yours,

Times Bookstore

The Halliday Emeralds

A Story of Their Quick Recovery

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Copyright, by American Press Association, 1913.

Elsie Halliday stood before her dressing table looking down at her jewel case with frightened eyes and a wildly beating heart. Costly gems sparkled from every velvet lined compartment but one. The white nest that had contained the famous emerald necklace, the Halliday heirloom, was empty.

She rang the bell, and after awhile a strange maid appeared.

"Where is [illegible] Louise, my maid?" asked Elsie.

"I do not think she is here, miss," returned the girl [illegible]. "I saw her running across the lawn shortly after your arrival. She went toward the street."

Elsie's eyes sparkled dangerously at this evidence of the perfidy of the [illegible] Louise. She turned to the waiting servant with a gesture of dismissal and when the door [illegible] to dress for the approaching dinner.

When her gown [illegible] had slipped into the white chiffon gown Elsie drew forth the string of pearls and clasped it about her slender throat. Without pausing to admire the charming effect she made a careful search of the room. The chair near the open window must furnish the first clew, and Elsie was not disappointed.

There was a tattered bit of lace evidently torn from a cheap handkerchief—a fragment from which dangled a bit of gold set with a drop of emerald green—and the lace smelled of that dreadful French scent which Louise persisted in using.

On the floor near the chair was a white silk handkerchief twisted into a loose knot. Elsie lifted it gingerly and inspected a few Japanese characters in dead black across one corner. The characters were too large for a laundry mark and must represent the owner's name, and that owner was probably a Japanese. Elsie Halliday knew that the Ormonds had a butler of that nationality.

Last of all, on the seat of the chair was a man's pearl cuff link, on the flat surface of which a golden [illegible] was finely [illegible]. Elsie studied the twisted "V" with [illegible] corner of her wardrobe. She went reluctantly down the broad stairs conscious that this visit she had anticipated must be inaugurated by the unpleasant features surrounding a jewel robbery. While she realized that the thief must be making a successful escape and that every moment but strengthened the difficulty of capture, Elsie hesitated to disturb the equanimity of her genial host, now in one of the happiest moods. Near the drawing room door two men were talking in low tones, and as Elsie passed one of them was saying: "I heard Ventnor was hard hit today. That drop in X. and Z. must have crippled him."

Elsie bit her trembling lips in an angry effort to gain composure. She hated herself for the lightning thought that had connected Ventnor's pecuniary difficulties with the pearl cuff link and the missing emeralds. In that instant she vowed to seek no further for the thief. The Halliday emeralds must go.

"You look troubled, dear," whispered Mabel Ormond in her ear. "Has anything gone wrong?"

"Everything is lovely," smiled Elsie brightly. "How dear of you to give me the rose room!"

"I knew you were charmed with it last year. Ah, Katura is a little late tonight. Rather unusual in our imperturbable Japanese."

It was not Harvey Ventnor who [illegible] noted his slightly dishevelled appearance, and then she saw with a sinking of the heart that the sleeve link was gone from one of his cuffs—the left one. The other, plainly visible, was of pearl inlaid with gold.

Ventnor, watching her now and then, seemed to be aware of her sudden coldness toward him. A hard look drifted around his pleasant lips, and his merry eyes clouded.

To Elsie it was a miserable dinner, and it dragged to a tedious close while her overstrained nerves seemed on the point of giving way altogether. She resolved to plead illness and return to New York the next morning. Ventnor's presence made it impossible for her to remain.

After dinner she had fled to the conservatory for seclusion, and it was there that Ventnor found her seated in a dusky corner under nodding palms. When she saw him she arose with a little frightened sob.

"Why—why, are you here?" she demanded brokenly.

"Am I so distasteful to you?" he asked, stopping short. "You have not led me to believe so."

"I did—you do not understand—what has happened today—must always stand between us."

He stared incredulously, boldly, at her. "You cannot possibly mean that my rumored failure on the street has affected your feeling toward me?" he asked scornfully.

"No, oh, no! How could you believe a little thing like that would make any difference to me? I mean this!" Elsie brought forth the pearl sleeve link and held it toward him in her rosy palm.

"You found this? It is mine. I thank you," he said gravely, slipping the link into his cuff and still holding her with his questioning gaze.

"It was in my room—on the chair where my dressing bag had been. You see"—she turned away her head so that she might not see his face—"you see, my emeralds were taken tonight from that very bag!"

"Ah!" There were anger and condemnation in his rapid glance before it turned to tender amusement. "And you have spoken to no one regarding the matter?"

She turned eagerly. "Not a soul. I shall never breathe a word. Only I hope I shall never see you again! How could you?"

"You mean, how could I rob the girl I loved best in the world?" he asked gently.

Ventnor took her hands in his and compelled her to return his straight look. "Do you love me, Elsie?" he asked.

"Yes," she said.

He released her hands and offered his arm.

"My poor little detective, come with me to Ormond. He has something to show you."

In the housekeeper's room a little group of people were centered about the table. There were Dick Ormond and his wife, Louise; Katura, the butler, and a strange, heavy set man with keen eyes. They turned with one accord as Elsie entered with Ventnor.

"Miss Halliday," began Dick Ormond soberly, "this has been rather an exciting evening for some of us—would have been for you only Mabel insisted you should be kept in ignorance until after dinner. Your emeralds have been stolen—and recovered!"

White and shaking, Elsie stretched forth her hand and received the green ripple of flame from Ormond. From one end of the chain a stone was missing.

"I know it," she said in a low tone. "I discovered their loss before dinner. I was going to tell you about it, only I"— She hesitated.

"She discovered a clew," added Ventnor calmly—"this." He laid the sleeve link on the table.

"And other clews," said Elsie hurriedly, telling her story now without reservation.

Then the stout man spoke with authority. "Very easily explained, Miss Halliday. Your maid had unpacked your trunk, and the butler here, in the absence of [illegible], was [illegible] the trunk to the [illegible]. A man stepped through the open window, slit open your dressing bag, extracted the jewel case, from which he took the emeralds, replaced the case in the bag and was escaping through the window when your maid, returning, discovered him, alarmed the butler and Mr. Ventnor, who was passing through the hall, and the three of them struggled to hold him. He was a husky chap and desperate, and they had a fight for it, each one having some evidence of the [illegible] your permission I'll take my fine gentleman along?"

He strode to a door and threw it open, revealing in a shallow closet the sullen, downcast face of the Halliday chauffeur.

"Henry!" Miss Halliday's lovely face was a reflection of passing emotions as she realized that the chauffeur had followed in the wake of her journey to rob her; that the valiant little Louise, who was Henry's sweetheart, had captured him for the sake of loyalty to her mistress and was even now crying her pretty eyes out over his degradation. Elsie swept all barriers aside and knelt down beside her weeping maid.

"Poor little Louise," she whispered softly. "You are far braver than I. I could never have done what you have today. Your reward will come later. My father will investigate, and if it is Henry's first offense it may be possible for you to marry and start afresh somewhere with the dot I shall provide."

Thus comforted, Louise dried her tears and was taken to dinner by Katura, while the police officer Ormond had summoned took his prisoner away. The Ormonds went back to their guests, and Elsie slipped away in their train.

At the drawing room door Ventnor placed his hand in hers and drew her unresisting into the conservatory.

"You said you loved me," he said firmly.

"I do," said Elsie humbly, "but I cannot expect you to value such an affection as I have displayed tonight."

"The reason you fastened suspicion so strongly upon me was a simple one, dearest. It was really because your heart was so filled with thoughts of me that there was no room to suspect anybody else. I am flattered—indeed"—

"Oh, you are generous, Harvey. Would you want to marry me now?"

"If you will have me," said Ventnor softly.

A Cure For Despondency.

A large, fleshy man with whiskers told me of a sovereign cure for despondency the other day. He had a number of girls in his employ, among them one that he knew was in struggling circumstances and supporting a sick mother on a none too healthy salary. She had come into the store and laid her purse and somber widow hat on the counter while she did something about the place. The large fleshy man got between her and the purse, and when she was not looking he slipped a five dollar bill into it and moved unconsciously about his business. In the afternoon he noticed that she had a red spot in each cheek, and she was heard asking other girls if they believed in fairies. She never solved the mystery—it was two years ago—and never will unless she reads this. But the five dollar bill was very useful in its little way, and the large despondent man felt so good for two whole days that he hip-hopped on the sidewalk on his way home.—Minneapolis Journal.

Living on Next to Nothing.

Most people do not need the evidence of recently published statistics to prove to them that it costs more to live in London than it once did. But it is doubtful if any Londoner now living was ever able to do it on £30 a year, as Boswell's poor Irish painter did. "He allowed £10 for clothes and linen. He said a man might live in a garret at 18 pence a week. Few people would inquire where he lived, and if they did it was easy to say, 'Sir, I am to be found at such a place.' By spending threepence at a coffee house he might be for some hours a day in very good company. He might dine for sixpence, breakfast on bread and milk for a penny and do without supper." Of course expenses can always be reduced to a minimum by doing without things. The question is, Which of our wonted expenses is unnecessary? Boswell's Irishman hinted at one. "On clean shirt days he went abroad and paid visits," says his ingenious chronicler.—[illegible] Chronicle.

Cheap Family History.

Even in political defeat there are compensations. A Washington delegate [illegible] who aspired to office tells of one that he discovered.

"Must have cost you a pile of money to run, didn't it?" a friend asked.

"About $1,000, but still I came out good ahead."

"How?" said the friend.

"Oh, [illegible]. My wife has a society [illegible] in her bonnet and had [illegible] to look up the family history, and when I [illegible]

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS.

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at the office of any Local Agent of Dominion Lands (but not sub-agent), on certain conditions.

Duties.—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres on certain conditions. A habitable house is required in every case, except when residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside of his homestead. Price $3 per acre. Duties.—Six months residence in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and 50 acres extra cultivation. The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land if [illegible] by Homestead Inspector on [illegible] for patent.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price, $3 per acre. Duties.—Reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

AN ANGEL.

There Was Mischief Afoot, and She Located It.

By MARTHA McC.-WILLIAMS.

Margaret came from the orchard whistling cheerily, a heaped basket of jewel red apples poised carefully upon her bare brown head. Miss Prudence Heathcote, her aunt and guardian, frowned at the whistling, but had to smile a bit when Margaret broke out: "Now, Prudence, precious, come at me with the saying about whistling girls and crowing hens! I know you hate my sole musical accomplishment, but this day is enough to set a graven image whistling, even dancing, if it was of anything softer than granite. You ought to be out in it. The orchard is a place enchanted. I didn't know until now things so prosaic as apple gathering and cider making could set themselves to music."

"H-m!" Miss Prudence said. "H-m! May I ask if Jimmy Blair is out there, as he promised to be?"

"Of course! A gentleman keeps his promises, doesn't he?" Margaret answered, tossing her head, but flushing in spite of herself.

Again Miss Prudence said "H-m!" There appeared to be nothing else to say. But after two breaths she got up and moved toward the kitchen, sighing out: "And of course he'll be here to dinner. That means cooking things. Men do have such atrocious appetites."

"I'm glad they do," Margaret retorted shamelessly. "I've got one to match anybody. Oh, Aunty Prue, do make a potato pudding! Make it very rich and have lots of thick, sweet, real lemon sauce."

"Go away, you baggage!" Miss Prudence said over her shoulder. "Who told you what Jimmy likes best? I've the greatest mind to make dried apple pies, just to see if he would know the difference," smiling at Margaret as she spoke the last sentence.

Margaret blushed very red and began to pout. "You mean Jimmy is so gone on me he's not in his right mind," she said. "But you're all wrong, Aunty Prue. I—I don't believe he—he cares for me a bit—hardly—not that way at least. All this week he's been as kind as could be, but distant, as if he was afraid I wouldn't understand."

"Then there's mischief afoot, which sort I've got to find out," Miss Prudence said vigorously, her hand on the doorknob, "for if ever any lad was clean out of his head, clean idiotic about a chit of a thing, it was Jimmy about you, all last week and all the weeks before it, since you came to stay with me."

"Mischief afoot, but where?" she kept mentally repeating to herself as she whisked about the trim kitchen, her brows puckered, her eyes introspective. On the surface she could see nothing. Nobody had openly any right or reason to be interfering between the pair. Jimmy was an orphan, the same as her Peggy. Moreover, he had never had the least shadow of an entanglement. True, various and sundry young women had been setting their caps at him—pretty caps, modestly set—but he had overlooked them all—unless it were— Miss Prue gave a great start. There was the root of the trouble; its name, Videlia Dane. Jimmy had rather made up to her in the weeks just before Peggy came. Now that she thought of it he had squired Delia to church two Sundays running, besides buying many things for her at the strawberry supper and fair. And Delia, it was well known, wanted to marry and settle herself. She had three younger sisters crowding her in the home nest. Naturally she would do what she could to hold Jimmy, the best chance in all Easton town.

But how she had done it Miss Prudence could not fathom, although she studied the problem almost to the detriment of her dinner. She sat down to it still puzzled. Jimmy greeted her and the dinner [illegible] and talked a great deal of his appetite and of many other things, but somehow did not eat with his usual zest, although he made a fair meal. Nobody with a palate could help doing that with such things as Miss Prudence set before him. Jimmy assured Margaret more than once that if such cooking was in the family her future husband was the luckiest fellow alive.

"I think so too. That's why it's so provoking not to have him come along," Margaret said at last. "Only think, Jimmy, I'm almost twenty-one and have never had a real sweetheart! Isn't it shameful when Aunty Prue is going to will me all her pretty things and the Heathcote silver? Fancy—an heiress without a sweetheart!"

"Such destitution is painful—so pathetic I hardly believe it exists," Jimmy said, turning away his head, then laughing [illegible] of something else.

Miss Prudence, watching him, saw that his [illegible] before he could speak. Of the seeing came enlightenment in part. She meant to [illegible] whole before she was much older, [illegible] so soon as dinner was over she sent Margaret away on errand and herself [illegible] Jimmy out to the barn with a pretense of wanting his advice as to the new [illegible] and [illegible]. She was a [illegible] critical [illegible]. So as soon as they were inside the stall space she wheeled upon Jimmy, asking pointedly, "What cock and bull story has Delia Dane told you?"

"Who said she had told me anything?" Jimmy retorted. "Besides, she didn't need to. My eyes are fairly trustworthy."

"Sure of it?" Miss Prudence asked. "If you are, please to tell me what they have told you about my Peggy. I know you think you've got a grievance—no, not exactly a grievance, but a hurt."

"It is a hurt, but I don't blame her for it. I can't. She—she must have met the other fellow first," Jimmy said, turning away his head. Miss Prudence stamped her foot. "What other fellow?" she demanded.

Jimmy answered miserably:

"The one I saw her kissing and hugging Saturday out under the chestnut trees. She was all dressed up in white and low necked, and they were carrying on like mad, else I shouldn't have seen them. I—I started to go up when I heard her talking, but after I caught a word or two sneaked away like a whipped hound."

"No doubt," Miss Prudence said angrily. "But tell me this—where did you sneak to? Went straight home, I reckon, and after supper over to the Daneses. That right?" Jimmy nodded. "Now tell me straight what Miss Delia told you and how she came to do it."

"I won't!" Jimmy said stoutly. "I'm no telltale. I'd seen enough, and Delia saw it had made me mighty miserable. All she did was to set me right—let me know Margaret was"—

"Playing, play acting with her?" Miss Prudence broke in. "Did she tell you that—tell you how the girls have been practicing against the church sociable? Delia was dressed up in man's clothes and my Peggy playing sweetheart to her. I know. I was there, up on the big dead trunk, holding the play book and laughing fit to kill. Now, don't you wish you had sneaked the other way?"

"You—you don't mean there isn't any other fellow?" Jimmy cried incredulously.

Miss Prudence sniffed. "Of course I don't mean any such thing. There are twenty other fellows—bound to be with a girl like Margaret—but I don't believe she likes any of them best unless it is the very chucklehead I'm talking to right now."

"Miss Prudence!" Jimmy ejaculated, then caught her tight in his arms. He was shaking like a leaf, as near to laughing as to crying.

Then Margaret came upon them and called out roguishly: "Is it to be really Uncle Jimmy? Well, I don't mind so long as we have you in the family."

"It's to be anything in the world you say," Jimmy said, darting to her. Then as he caught both her hands and held them against his breast he turned a beaming face upon Miss Prudence, saying, "Peggy is sweet enough, pretty enough, for anything, but when it comes to looking like an angel to a man in trouble, why, she'll never be in it with our Aunty Prue."

An Unpleasant Surprise.

A fussy passenger in a suburban trolley car suddenly discovered that he had a grievance against the road and forthwith proceeded to abuse the conductor.

The latter was a small man who persisted in saying that rules were rules and that he had no discretion in the matter.

Finally the fussy man became so very warm and seemed so determined to resort to fistic hostilities that an innocent bystander felt compelled to interfere.

"Don't lick the conductor," he said. "Lick the superintendent."

And just then a two fisted six footer who must have weighed 200 pounds at least arose from a nearby seat.

"That's a very good suggestion," he quietly remarked. "I'm the superintendent."

Whereupon the fussy man quietly slid into the nearest empty seat.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

HIS QUEST FOR A WIFE.

John Newcomb Was a Close Observer and Was Hard to Suit.

The sister of Simon Newcomb, the great astronomer, tells in McClure's of their father's John Newcomb's wanderings in search of a wife, whom he had decided to select in accordance with scientific theories:

"John Newcomb stopped at farmhouses for his refreshment, and in each house, if there was a daughter of marriageable age, he tarried perhaps a day or even longer to make a study of the maiden. He always made himself 'handy' about the place, drawing up water with the great well sweep, bringing in firewood—doing anything that he could do and still keep near the daughter.

"Disappointment met him at every door. At one house the cooking was poor, at another the house was not neatly kept, at a third there was scolding or faultfinding, a want of economy—and in all the maidens a lack of desire for learning or education. One young woman little knew by what a narrow margin she missed her fate. All was going smoothly till, when she was molding the dough for the baking pans, he noticed that a considerable portion of the dough was left in the wooden kneading trough. He asked her the reason for this, and her reply was that she left it for the hound because he was fond of it. She always did this, she said; there was plenty. 'Want of thrift,' decided the young man, and he shouldered his bundle and walked on."

Told Who He Was.

Dr. [illegible], a former rector in Eltham, Kent, England, one Sunday preached from the text "Who art thou?" After reading it he made a pause for the congregation to reflect upon the words, when a man in military dress who at that instant was marching very sedately up the middle aisle of the church, supposing it a question addressed to him, replied, "I am, sir, an officer of the Sixteenth regiment of foot on a recruiting party here and, having brought my wife and family with me, I am come to church because I wished to be acquainted with the neighboring clergy and gentry." This so deranged the divine and astonished the congregation that the sermon was concluded with considerable difficulty.

Sufferer of Twenty Years States Dr. Hamilton's Pills are a Real Cure

"I can't remember any time during the past twenty years when my heart wasn't aching. If I bent over, dark specks would come before my eyes, and it seemed as if all the blood in my body wanted to rush to my head." Thus opens the letter of Mrs. Enoch S. Berry, of Putnam P.O., and continuing her interesting statement she says: "Work or exertion made my heart beat terribly, and going upstairs caused such shortness of breath that it fairly frightened me. I tell you how I feel to-day and you can understand what a great cure Dr. Hamilton's Pills have made. I feel strong enough now to work like a man, as for going up stairs on the run, it doesn't bother me at all. I eat and sleep as any well person ought, and as for dizziness which used to frighten me so much, it has entirely disappeared. Dr. Hamilton's Pills helped me, and I know every woman that uses them will have better and good health. Delightful Performance

The popularity of the Ernie Marks Co. was attested to in no uncertain manner last night when a good sized house turned out to witness "Sweet Clover," a rural drama in four acts, full of strong situations and stirring climaxes. Ernie Marks as Joe Mason kept the audience in the best of humor throughout the evening, and the supporting company were all excellent in their respective roles. For to-night "Oliver Twist," in five acts, dramatized by Beaumont Claxton, from Chas. Dickens' book of same title.

A Floral Police Court.

The police court, in a somewhat modified way, has been turned into a greenhouse. A big sweet-scented geranium has been placed in one of the windows. Possibly there is a reason for the authorities in choosing that class of geranium for such a spot. Judging by the evident anaemic growth of this plant a subtle warning may be given to blacklisters who get the memory cure at Castle Nesbitt.

Local Cops Watching.

Chief of Police Campeau of Montreal has requested the local police to be on the lookout for one Roy Burns or Bryne, on a charge of shooting and the theft of $600 from a city newspaper office this week. The accused is described as being 23 years of age, 150 to 155 pounds, five feet eight inches in height, medium build, medium fat face, prominent cheek bones, brown eyes, dark complexion, dark eyebrows.

Baseball Officers Elected

At the annual meeting of the Peterborough Baseball Club, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President—W. H. Dunham.
Vice-Pres.—E. G. Patterson.
Sec.-Treas.—R. T. Carr.

The directorate: Messrs. F. Trebilcock, E. Dumond, Jas. Lynch, W. H. Bradburn, G. G. Graham, the President and the Vice-President.

The financial statement was adopted as read. Messrs. W. C. Ackerman and B. A. Ross were re-appointed auditors.

Lucky Port Hope Chinks.

Chinks must be popular in Port Hope. Yesterday a man named Roach was charged with having had a meal in a Chinese restaurant there. The magistrate, according to the Port Hope Guide, said he had no sympathy for men who would order up a meal and refuse to pay for it especially in a Chinese cafe. On the charge of being drunk the prisoner was remanded until called upon, but in the charge of beating a Chinaman a fine of $5 with $3.50 costs was imposed.

New Fireproof Curtain.

Messrs. J. J. Turner & Sons, owners of the Grand Opera House have installed a new asbestos fireproof drop curtain in that popular place of amusement. This curtain, 28 x 30 feet in size, is designed to prove a safeguard to the audience should a "fly" or some scene accidentally catch fire. The feature of the design as the audience sees it, is a picture painted in the art department of the aforesaid firm depicting a chariot race in the old Coliseum of Rome.

A Well Hooked Family.

At yesterday's police court William Huggins was charged with having assaulted his wife. Mrs. Huggins, in the box, said she was called to see her mother, who was dying. Her husband did not go as he was drunk. When she got back her husband wanted to know why she had gone. Her husband kicked her. "Did you buy this [illegible]?" asked the magistrate. "No," replied the witness. "I suppose you did not want publicity for the sake of love?" "No, there is no love in the matter," she replied. "He is all right when he's sober and before he was put on the blacklist." Joseph Galvin said Huggins in his presence displayed that he was drunk last Sunday. George Robb, a near neighbor of the Huggins, said Huggins was drunk. The informant, named Montgomery, a stepson of Huggins, said the latter was drunk Saturday and Sunday. Huggins was chasing his mother. Miss Montgomery saw her stepfather kick her mother. Huggins, in the box, said there were fights in his house. He was given a month in jail.

To The Electors of The North Ward

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,—

In making an appeal to you for your support in the coming municipal elections, I fully realize the handicap I am under in being a stranger to quite a number of you, even though I have been practising my profession here for seven years. My policy briefly is this:

An honest endeavor to show a dollar's value for every dollar expended, and the most economical and efficient government of the city's affairs. To attain this I have acceded to the wishes of a large number of the ratepayers in offering myself as a candidate for Alderman in the North Ward. Should I find it impossible to see you all personally before election day, I wish to make a most earnest appeal for your vote and influence, and can assure you that I will deem it my duty to fully merit your confidence.

Sure of Water.

Sir Joseph Prestwich had bought in 1864 a small estate near Sevenoaks, on which he built a residence, but it was high up on a dry and treeless chalk down. Where was water to be found? So confident was Prestwich in respect of water supply that he at once engaged an old well digger to sink a well 163 feet deep. The boring proceeded, but when a depth of 163 feet was reached the two workmen went to the city and sought an interview with their employer, whom they found at his desk. They explained that there was no sign of water and that in their opinion it was useless to bore to a greater depth. "Go on," was the quiet rejoinder. "You will come upon water tomorrow. You are within two feet of it." Next day it proved exactly as Prestwich had foretold, and ever after, among many of the denizens of the valley, he had the reputation, much to his amusement, of not being quite "canny."—"Life and Letters of Sir Joseph Prestwich."

QUEBEC ASSUMES TO DIRECT SCHOOL POLICY OF ONTARIO

The Orange Sentinel Deals With This Subject Without Gloves

French Language Has No Official Recognition in This Province, or is It Likely to Have Any

THE QUEBEC AGITATORS WOULD LIKE TO SEE SAME CONDITIONS IN ONTARIO AS EXIST IN QUEBEC

Toronto, Dec. 24.—The Orange Sentinel, whose managing editor is Mayor Hocken, of this city, in a pungent article, deals with efforts of Quebec to force their school policy on Ontario. Their denunciations of Bishop Fallon for his stand on the bilingual schools of this province are becoming more bitter every time they hold a meeting at the Monument National in Montreal and elsewhere. In addition to the tirades against every person who opposes the extension of French in Ontario these meetings always produce some self-appointed orator who declares that by wiping out the use of French in the schools of Ontario that race is being deprived of some of its rights granted in the constitution.

It cannot be stated too often or too plainly that in this Province the French language has no official recognition. The abolition of bi-lingual schools does not in any way interfere with the rights which the French people enjoy under the act of Confederation or by any other legal or legislative authority. It is the old plan which has been pursued by Roman priests for centuries. They made the most extreme claims so that like a man bargaining in a store they will secure at least a portion of what they are demanding.

The people of Ontario, through their Government, should set their face unflinchingly against any recognition of the French language in this province. The time must come when only the English language shall be used in all the primary schools of Ontario. Anything less than that will threaten the stability of this province as an English-speaking unit of Confederation. Our friends in Quebec may froth and fume as they will, but they may depend upon it that all their fumes and bluster will have no effect upon the electorate, who, in the last analysis, control the policy of this province.

These educational reactionaries would like to introduce the same condition in Ontario that exist in Quebec. Dr. J. K. Foran, K.C., of Ottawa, offered as the solution of the school difficulties in this province the creation of a council of public instruction upon the model of that in Quebec, which has two branches, one Protestant and the other Roman Catholic. The very thing that the best minds in Quebec are seeking to get away from these [illegible] the [illegible] for the Province of Ontario. The Council of Public Instruction in Quebec opens the way for the control not only of the Roman Catholic schools, but of the Protestant schools by the Bishops. Nobody is appointed on the Protestant branch of the Council of Public Instruction unless he is satisfactory to the Bishops and Archbishops. That is the state of affairs that Dr. Foran would like to introduce in Ontario. He would like the Roman Catholic Bishops of this Province to exercise the powers of the Minister of Education. Such a thing is never going to become a fact in this Province. On the contrary, we trust that our friends in Quebec will see how inefficient their method of school administration is and adopt the plan of responsible government for the schools and add to their Cabinet a Minister of Education.

A CHRISTMAS GREETING

The Times cannot let the Yuletide season pass without extending, as we do now, our heartiest wish that not only our thousands of readers, but that every resident of our progressive city and prosperous county, may enjoy a very Merry Christmas and a happy and prosperous New Year.

It has always been and always will be the policy of The Times to do what, in our opinion, tends to advance and foster the general good of humanity. Whilst there is at present a slight lack of work in the city, we believe that this is only a temporary condition. We believe that with the advent of New Year things will improve. We believe that the employes of our local factories who are now out of work can confidently look forward to a certain resumption of employment early in 1914.

Again we wish the public a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

THE CONSERVATION PRESS NOW ALLEGES EXTRAVAGANCE

Publish Forecast of Report of G.T.R. Commissioners, But It is Unconfirmed

Ottawa, Dec. 24.—An official forecast of the report of Messrs. Lynch-Staunton, K.C., and F. P. Gutelius, the commissioners appointed two years ago to investigate the construction of the National Transcontinental Railway, was given publication in the Government press to-day. The story, as sent out, states that wanton extravagance has characterized the whole undertaking, and that judged by the standard of the new Toronto-Sudbury line of the Canadian Pacific, the Government railway has cost the country forty-four million dollars more than it should have cost.

It is further alleged that the "line was located where it was most expensive to build," that "hard and fast rules against curves and grades have operated largely to increase the cost," that "there has been extensive over-classification of material," and that "huge profits were made by certain contractors who did little or no work themselves, but sublet the jobs and pocketed rake-offs in the hundreds of thousands." On one instance it is reported that the original contractor cleaned up $750,000 through sub-letting.

As far as can be learned from official sources here, this forecast of the commission's findings is both misleading and unwarranted by the facts. The report of Messrs. Staunton and Gutelius is not completed in shape for publication, and will not be for a considerable time yet. No advance copies of it have been given out, and no authoritative statement has been made justifying the charges of graft and wanton extravagance.

Similar statements in regard to the waste of public money in the construction of the road were repeatedly made by the Conservative press and by Conservative members of Parliament before the change of Government.

RUSSIAN IMPERIAL CROWN PRINCE SAID TO BE SUFFERING FROM TUBERCULOSIS OF HIP JOINT

The Grand Duke Alexis Nicholaievitch.

The Russian Imperial Crown Prince is suffering from tuberculosis of the hip joint and hemophilia, excluding any hope for his complete restoration to health, according to the St. Petersburg correspondent of the Vossische Zeitung who says he has his information from an absolutely authentic source.

The illness of the Tsarevitch, Grand Duke Alexis Nicholaievitch, has been shrouded in mystery. Many rumors have been current, but none heretofore have been given much credence.

The Tsarevitch is the only son of the Tsar and was born on July 30, 1904. He is now nine years old.

ENGLAND NOW EXPECTS MORE C.P.R. EXTENSIONS

London Standard Outlines the New Policy of the Railway Company

London, Dec. 24.—The Canadian Pacific railway market which has provided a number of surprises during the year now closing has in Pacific the year past of 1914 says the Standard, further developments of a character scarcely expected at present. The construction of trunk lines in the Dominion during recent years has brought about a far-reaching and fundamental alteration in the balance of power in the Canadian railway world, and the principal [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] with a view to maintaining a position [illegible]. MAYOR BRADBURN EXPLAINS THE LOCAL POWER SITUATION

Admits that the Council Was Aware That the Task Undertaken is a Difficult One

Peterboro, Dec. 24, 1913.
Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—Mr. W. H. Collier has addressed to me a letter through the local papers regarding the expropriation of the property of the Peterborough Light and Power Co., by the city. Having been absent from the city for a couple of days, I could not answer it sooner. I believe that the facts have been made public but I have no objection to give Mr. Collier or any other ratepayers, any information regarding this or any other city business.

I will try to answer Mr. Collier's questions.

Mr. Collier asks if the people were led to believe that the city could obtain possession of the company's pole line and distributing equipment for an approximate sum of $94,000, and that upon payment thereof, the company's franchise would cease. That is very close to the fact. The valuation of the property was about that sum and upon the city paying for and taking possession of it, the company's franchise was to be at an end.

He asks if at the time the Act of 1913 was passed, the Council knew definitely what property and approximately its value, the city would have to purchase from the company in order to cancel the 30 years' franchise.

Mr. Collier may remember that there was an Act passed regarding this matter in 1912. Previous to the passage of the Act the council had a valuation made of the property of the Peterborough Light & Power Co. The Act of 1913 was to amend the Act of 1912. When the bill which became the Act of 1913 was introduced into the Legislature, and when it came before the Private Bills Committee, the value of the property owned by the company had not materially altered.

He further asks if the Council knew when it passed the by-law expropriating the company's property that the company owned the Auburn dam, power plant and raceway connected therewith. It did not. The company did not own this property when the first bill was passed, when the by-law authorizing the debentures was passed, or when the second Act came before the legislature, and no conveyance of this property was registered so that the fact could be ascertained when the Act of 1913 became law.

Again, Mr. Collier asks whether, if the city does not take the whole of the company's property (by which I presume he means including the Auburn property), the company is not still entitled to their 30 years' franchise. That is a question that has to be considered. It may be that such is the case, but I am not prepared to say that it is or is not. If it is, it may be all the better for the city, for the city must have power and if it can take this excellent power property at its value the investment would be well worth considering by the Council and the ratepayers.

Mr. Collier asks what property of the company the city's expert did not value. The city's valuator made a valuation of the property the Peterborough Light & Power Co. owned at that time, that is the distributing system. As I have explained, it was not until after this that the company got a conveyance of the Auburn property.

The company did not give a statement of the property its experts included in their valuation. Mr. Colville said it included the Auburn property, which had been afterward purchased by the company.

Finally, Mr. Collier asks whether the Council before passing the by-law expropriating the company's property, was not in a position to find out definitely all the property in the city limits owned by the company. No doubt it was, but this would have been a considerable undertaking as there is a good deal of land in the city that they might have bought and it did not occur to any member of the Council to have a general search made in the Registry Office to see if any had been purchased. The Council knew that at the time of the passing of the Act of 1913, the Auburn dam according to the Registry Office, appeared to be the property of the Auburn Power Co., and no member of the Council had or could reasonably be expected to have had any idea, that after the passing of the Act authorizing the expropriation of the property of the Peterborough Light & Power Co., which the latter company fought against so hard in the legislature, that this company would voluntarily put the city in the position of being able to expropriate so valuable an asset as the Auburn Dam and Power plant. Mr. Colville said, when appearing before the county judge on this matter, that he expected to meet the city's representatives again in the legislature that is that the city would require further legislation before it could overcome the obstacles the company would put in its way. He may not be correct in this; there are more ways than one, usually of meeting a situation, and this one may be met. But if it should be that further legislation is necessary there is still a legislature at Queen's Park that will see that the people will get their rights despite the efforts of the best and shrewdest lawyers the company has in its service.

The council knew when it set out to get electric power and light for the people, that it would not have easy sailing. The members knew that they had a strong company opposed to it, a company that had practically brought under its sole control, all the available power in the Trent district and that was wealthy and powerful. The council, however, was firmly convinced, and still is, that it had taken the right course, and the people have shown emphatically that they agree with the council.

The company has tried more than once to frighten the people, and it failed. The people have been and are practically united in this matter, and the company will again endeavor to make a division among them. If it can succeed in dividing the people, it may have some chance of defeating the city and retaining its monopoly, but I do not believe it can succeed.

I am retiring from the council, but I feel as great an interest in this question as ever, for I believe it means a very great deal for the people. I sincerely hope and fully expect that the council will press forward the Hydro Electric scheme until there is electric power owned and operated by and for the people.

The electors should see that only candidates who are fully in sympathy with the city's electric policy are elected to the council.

Yours truly,
W. H. BRADBURN,
Mayor.

LAWYER'S SOUL WIDOW WON'T LEAVE HER CELL

Says She Wants to Die on His Grave--To be Taken Away by Night

Monticello, N.Y., Dec. 24.—After having been a voluntary prisoner in one little room of the offices of the late Melvin H. Couch, former district attorney of Sullivan county, for years, Miss Adelaide M. Branen, the "soul widow" of the noted lawyer, hesitated and shrank from again appearing in the world to-day. She is free of all charges and could leave the jail here at any time, but at her request is still confined in a cell with the matron watching over her. Now that she sacrificed the best years of her life, is gone, she regrets only that she did not die with him.

A report was circulated that Miss Branen had attempted to end her life in her cell early to-day, but this was denied by under-sheriff [illegible]. She has repeatedly said, however, that she "wants only to die on Mel's grave," and this has caused relatives of the dead man to request that Miss Branen be closely watched.

"I believe the woman is temporarily insane," said Dr. V. F. Chelotte, brother-in-law of Couch, to-day.

Miss Branen conferred with a local attorney to-day, and all Monticello is now anxiously awaiting the opening of Couch's will. Whether he has provided for the woman who made herself his virtual slave for years, is the question the entire town is discussing.

It has practically been decided that the people of Monticello shall not know when Miss Branen leaves the town, and the scene of the tragedy. When she has gained some composure and is more composed she will probably be escorted away under cover of night.

TAMING A SHREW

It Was Tried at Sea and Was Not Successful

By EVAN D. BALDWIN

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

How Jack Stoughton came to fall in love with Emily Gunter no one could ever find out. Jack was a fine, manly young sailor, and whenever he came home from a voyage all the girls made a dead set for him. Emily was the only girl in the village who paid no attention to him. Perhaps he was piqued on that account. Emily was fairly good looking, though she had a square jaw and the corners of her lips were drawn down, denoting a strong will.

On one of his homecomings Jack sidled up to Emily either from pique or curiosity or a little of both, and they were seen walking together on the beach or sitting on the dunes. Their friends observed that Emily usually had a scowl on her face and Jack seemed to be trying to get her into a good humor.

"What do you want with that girl, Jack?" one of his messmates who was ashore with him said to him one day. "She seems to be continually quarreling with you. You're the best natured man in our ship, so I know it's no fault of yours. If you marry her you'll get a wasp, take my word for that."

"I know you're right, Billy, but somehow there's a fascination in being treated as if she didn't care a rap for me and being hammered by her. The nearest I ever came before to an infatuation was by a little Mexican girl at Vera Cruz who tried to stab me. Singular, isn't it, how we men find a zest in that kind of women?"

"I can understand that so long as you're not married to one of 'em. But you just put your neck in a halter and give Emily Gunter the loose end and she'll make it hot for you all your married life."

"There was Petruchio, who tamed a shrew"—

"Petruchio be hanged! All imaginary! No man ever tamed a shrew. You can tame that kind of man, but not that kind of woman."

But Jack Stoughton was too intent upon tampering with gunpowder to heed his friend's advice. Shortly before they sailed he told Billy he had married Emily, that she seemed very amiable and that she was so averse to parting with him that she was bent on taking the voyage with him.

The Albatross, in which they were to go to Japan and return, was commanded by Captain Larkins. Billy Anderson was first mate, and Jack was second mate. Emily went to Captain Larkins and induced him to let her go on the voyage with them. He had never seen her before and thought a woman on board would have a refining influence on the crew. He had given his consent before Anderson told him what kind of woman Mrs. Stoughton was; but, having given it, he would not withdraw it.

The lady was very pleasant till the ship was well on her way—indeed, too far out to warrant a return—then she began to belabor her husband in no uncertain tones. What the trouble was no one knew, but Mrs. Stoughton's voice could be heard in her stateroom even in stormy weather above the whistling of the wind in the rigging.

It was not long before poor Jack was an object of pity on the part of the crew, and not a man but condemned his wife. The captain finally went to Mrs. Stoughton and besought her to let up on Jack, but got such a berating himself that he was glad to beat a retreat.

It is surprising that Captain Larkins, who had some twenty men under him, not one of whom dared to give him the least back talk, should have been driven from the after cabin and up on to the poop deck by a woman. The day this occurred and it had been discovered that Mrs. Stoughton was virtually in command of the ship each one of the crew went about his duties as if something momentous had happened. They had most of them been at sea for years, they had encountered hurricanes, some had lived for days on a raft without food or water, some had been cast upon desert lands, but none of them had ever passed through an experience like this. Their captain, whom they respected and feared, had been downed. They were as much taken aback as if their rudder had been put out of commission.

The captain had become a different man. He walked the deck with a hangdog look. He gave his orders in a humble tone, as if he would be much obliged if the men should obey them, and the men themselves did their duties languidly, as if some misfortune hung over the ship. Only one man, Jack Stoughton, seemed to have been improved by the incident. Before it occurred he had the demeanor of a whipped cur; now he went about as if he felt himself as good a man as any aboard.

The crew, sympathizing with their captain and one another in the presence of a strange misfortune, between watches consulted as to means of relief.

Where Abraham Fished.

Mrs. Victoria de Bunsen in "The Soul of a Turk" relates a legend concerning Abraham which will be new to many readers. She learned of it while at Edessa, the traditional Ur of the Chaldees. She was shown there a large oblong tank of water so filled with fishes resting just below the surface of the water that their fins and backs seemed almost wedged together so as to form "an almost solid layer of silvery fish."

"The guardian of the mosque threw some meal into the water, and the fish jump high to catch it, a great living pyramid, of which those which jump the highest form the pinnacle. The tradition is that Abraham as a child fished in the tank; hence the fish were considered sacred. No single one has been caught or killed to this day. Indeed, death would overtake the man who transgressed this law."

CHRISTMAS APPEAL

for The Hospital for Sick Children

COLLEGE ST. TORONTO

Dear Mr. Editor:—

Thanks for your kindness in allowing me the privilege of appealing at this Christmas time on behalf of the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto.

It would take more space than you can spare to tell of the good work done for the sick and deformed children of this Province. Let me, however, in a few words, tell you of the progress of the work of the Hospital.

One nurse, six little white beds, a few dollars, a few friends—this was the beginning. The beds have grown to 250, the dollars to thousands, the friends to hundreds. 1875, the first year, 44 in-patients, 67 out-patients; 1913, last year, 1,648 in-patients, 26,507 out-patients; 1875, 1 nurse; 1913, 70 nurses.

Since 1875, thirty-eight years ago, the Hospital has admitted within its walls 21,018 children as in-patients, and 150,231 as out-patients, a total of 156,249, or an average of 4,743 per year. Of the 21,018 in-patients 15,[illegible] were from Toronto, and 5,618 from other parts of the Province; 16,150 of the total in-patients were cured, and 4,367 were improved.

In the Orthopedic Department last year, of the 1,648 in-patients, 278 were treated for deformities, 23 hip disease, 37 Pott's disease, 2 knock-knees, [illegible] bow-legs, 62 club feet, 3 lateral curvature of the spine, 44 infantile paralysis, 6 wry neck, and 75 tubercular disease of knee, hip and ankle. In 1912, the Surgical Apparatus Shop manufactured 427 appliances for in-patients and out-patients, including ankle braces, spinal braces, hip splints, bow-leg splints, club-foot splints, plaster jackets, etc.

In this Department in 25 years nearly 900 boys and girls have been treated for Club Feet and 650 corrected. Half of these came from places outside of Toronto. Surely we have a fair claim for help from the people of this Province.

Will you, the reader of this letter, help to give crippled children a fair start in life?

Busy dollars are better than idle tears. The sympathy that helps is good, but the Hospital has to have the sympathy that works.

While Christmas Bells are ringing to the glory of Him "Who made the lame to walk and the blind to see," give, give, give, and help the Hospital to help God's little ones, upon whom the heavy hand of affliction has been laid.

Will you please send a dollar, or more, if you can spare it, to Douglas Davidson, the Secretary-Treasurer of the Hospital, or

J. ROSS ROBERTSON,
Chairman of the Trustees, Toronto.

Prof. Mulveney Known All Over the World
Proprietor of World's Famous Tape Worm Exterminator
Tape worm is bred from a parasite. It is of star shape, having two, four and six suckers. It lays the eggs, which are connected together. They develop and form a body, which is the worm. Each section is an individual, having a sucker or mouth. The worm grows much longer than the bowels where it is located, and sometimes a whole colony of them are found, enough to fill a quart of small worms, and when put in a basin of water would apparently fill it. It is the hardest thing in the world to destroy this parasite, without doing injury to the individual who may be so unfortunate as to have it, as the parasite clings to the bowels, freeing itself from the body of the worm, and remains there to breed another. It is an internal demon, and causes its victim to suffer all the symptoms of disease imaginable. The attending physicians are led to believe the patient is suffering from some other disease, as nearly every person has different symptoms. Some have been treated for cancer of the bowels, consumption of the bowels, consumption of the lungs, chronic dyspepsia, nervous prostration, melancholia, hypochondria, hysteria, inflammation of the bowels, appendicitis, and other complaints, when one or more of these worms were eating their lives away.
Prof. Mulveney has made the discovery to free the victim without injury to the system, destroying the parasite as well as expelling the worm with one dose of medicine without any previous starvation. [illegible]

Our Point of View

As man was originally made out of dust, is it any wonder that he is still out for all the dust he can get?

—o—

You never hear the girl who wears silk stockings kick about the muddiness of the crossings or the height of the car steps.

—o—

The only distinction that some men achieve in this world is that they can stand under more whiskey than anybody else in town.

—o—

Our notion of a real mean man is one who will buy his young hopeful drums, horns, and other noise making toys just to gratify his grudge against the neighbors.

—o—

It is announced that John D. Rockefeller will spend Xmas in Cleveland. Well, so will a great many other people, but unlike John, Christmas will be the only thing they will have to spend.

—o—

Andrew Carnegie, after having made many millions in the manufacture of war material, now wants all wars to cease. He reminds us of several wholesale whiskey dealers who fought the business, tooth and toenail, after they had amassed large fortunes.

—o—

The following is enthusiastically dedicated to any of our young friends who are lucky enough to have a "new arrival" at their homes:

Ring out wild bells, and tame ones, too!
Ring out the lover's moon!
Ring in the little worsted sock!
Ring in the bib and spoon!

PREPARING THE GUILLOTINE

With the parliamentary session about to open it might be well to look over the Liberal policy as enunciated by Laurier and by his party organs. The Liberal programme for the session is this:

Repudiation of the debt owed by Canada to the Mother Country for naval defence. A separatist navy if Canada is to have any navy at all. This is to be achieved by the partisan majority in the Senate.

The blocking of any legislation designed for the expenditure of federal subsidies by the Dominion and by the provinces in the building up of good roads. This to be done by the Liberal majority in the Senate.

A refusal to provide means for the acquisition of branch lines for the Intercolonial Railway in the Maritime Provinces as feeders for the Trunk line. This to be accomplished by the Senate.

The condemnation of the Government's programme of expenditure on great national undertakings including the construction of the new Welland Canal and the extensive harbor works planned for ports on both oceans and on the Great Lakes.

A demand for a reduction in the cost of living by means which experience has shown will not reduce it.

An appeal for tariff reduction except in regard to the manufacturing industries of Canada.

The killing of a redistribution bill whose adoption is required by the constitution. This is to be accomplished by the Senate.

Anything else that will hamper and impede the government of the country, the object being to prevent the fulfilment of the Government's promises before the next general election.

Men Who Don't Exercise

Suffer From Indigestion, Headache, Poor Appetite, Sleeplessness.

Nothing So Sure to "Set up" a Man, Make Him Feel Brisk and Vigorous, as Dr. Hamilton's Pills

Lack of exercise and overwork were the causes that combined to almost kill Samuel S. Stephens, Jr., one of the best known citizens in Woodstock.

In his convincing letter Mr. Stephens says:

"A year ago I returned home after a long trip, completely worn out. I was so badly affected by chronic biliousness, so much overcome by constant headaches, dizziness, that I despaired of ever getting well.

"It was a blessing that I used Dr. Hamilton's Pills. In one week I felt like a new man. The feeling of weight and nausea in my stomach disappeared. My eyes looked brighter, color grew better, and, best of all, I began to enjoy my meals. The dizziness, languor and feeling of depression passed away, and I fast regained my old time vigor and spirits. To-day I am well—thanks to Dr. Hamilton's Pills."

For health, strength, comfort and good spirits, there is no medicine like Dr. Hamilton's Pills. 25c. per box, five boxes for $1.00, at all druggists and storekeepers, or by mail from The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

PUPLIC OPINION

The Times does not hold itself responsible for the opinions of its correspondents.

OUR CITY COUNCIL

Editor Morning Times

Sir,—Instead of throwing away $75,000 for a bridge at Dalhousie St., that would only be used by about six per cent of our citizens would it not be better to spend say $4.50 on protecting the lives and limbs of those being soaked 25 mills on the dollar. I refer to the dangerous condition of some of our pavements. On Saturday evening whilst coming down Hunter St. hill near the Conservatory of Music I slipped and fell on the pavement, badly spraining a wrist. As I stood at Bethune st. nursing the injured limb I saw a lady fall near where I had looped the loop. Had it not been for the [illegible] growth or purchase of back hair she would undoubtedly have cracked her skull. I would recommend that the street commissioner or city engineer bump the bumps at this and other spots. The result would be $4.50 spent for sand or ashes on the iced sidewalks. If this is not done there will be fewer citizens alive to subscribe towards a brass tablet on that bridge, bearing the Councillor's names.

THE POWER QUESTION

Editor Morning Times

Sir,—I see by the Peterborough papers that it may take $[illegible] to expropriate and the purchase the present local plant required for Hydro requirements. Mr. Editor, whilst I think, although I do not write as an expert, that the sum mentioned is excessive, it seems to my mind that the Council in the interests of our citizens could do better. Why not let this deal drop and have the city buy the Seymour Company's rights at Burleigh? I am informed by a local electical expert that there would not be a loss of more than 10 p.c. in bringing the power from Burleigh to the City. Whilst I have no idea what the Burleigh power privileges would cost, I think such a deal would result to the better interests of our people. Should such a deal go through the Peterborough Light & Power Co. could remain in existence and thus, by fair competition, give Peterborough cheaper light and power.

The End of His Rope

A Story of a Fortune Hunter in the Swiss Alps

By F. A. MITCHEL

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Interlaken, in the Swiss Alps, is a central point for tourists for making excursions either into the neighboring valleys or on to the mountains. The town, which is simply a cluster of hotels with a casino, is built on a plain between two lakes, deriving its name from its location, each lake about ten or a dozen miles long and about a mile wide. To the south of these lakes rise the peaks of the Bernese Alps—the Eiger, Jungfrau, Monch and others. From Interlaken a cog railway carries tourists up steep inclines to Grindelwald, Scheidig, and thence down to Lauterbrunnen. From Lauterbrunnen one may be swung up by cable several thousand feet to Murren, where a near view can be obtained of the surrounding group of mountains.

One summer some tourists started on the cog railway for Scheidig, from whence the men of the party intended to attempt to climb the Jungfrau. The cog railway now extends farther up the mountain, but at that time one could travel by rail no farther than Scheidig. In this party were Miss Della Denton of New York and Mr. Archie Pendleton of Chicago. Miss Denton was an heiress, while Mr. Pendleton was a young lawyer of moderate means who had but recently been admitted to the bar.

Touring in Europe affords every facility for lovemaking, and Pendleton had availed himself of the opportunity to woo Miss Denton. He seemed about to secure the prize when a young Britisher, heir to an earldom, came upon the scene, and it became a tie between him and the American. Pendleton had the mortification and disappointment to see his suit held up by nothing more or less than a title. Worse than this, from the time Lord Boyingham entered the contest for Miss Denton's hand he treated the Chicagoan with that towering superiority which has made John Bull unpopular with all other races.

There are hotels at Scheidig, and it had been arranged that the ladies of the party should put up at one of them while the men made the attempt upon the mountain. There were three men intending to go up, but one of them, becoming fearful of his heart's action in the thin air even at Scheidig, decided not to risk a higher altitude. This left Boyingham and Pendleton the only ones to go except the guides. There were two guides, armed with axes and alpenstocks, one for each end of the little procession.

When the party left their friends standing on the porch of the hotel both Boyingham and Pendleton looked back at Miss Denton, each for a goodby. Boyingham was elated, Pendleton depressed, for the smile she bestowed on the former had an evident meaning in it, while the one she gave Pendleton conveyed nothing more than good will. The men moved off, encouraged by a cheer from those who remained, and were soon lost by a turn in their path taking them around the side of the first mountain.

It was 10 o'clock when the climbers started, and the day was fine. Through a telescope on the porch they were watched, being occasionally seen like a dotted line far up on the mountain side. About noon the weather began to thicken, with frequent snow flurries, and they were visible no longer.

It was nearly night when two of the party, Lord Boyingham and one of the guides, Hans Dyckman, returned, their blanched faces and agitation denoting there had been an accident.

"Where are the others?" asked a chorus of voices in tones of dread.

"Lost, I think," said Boyingham.

At that moment Della Denton joined them. [illegible] Boyingham's words, [illegible].

"What has happened?" asked all at once.

"Tell them, Hans," said Boyingham.

"We [illegible]," said Hans, "and [illegible] was a [illegible]. [illegible] was in advance, with [illegible] Pendleton next, his lordship third and I bringing up the rear. [illegible] Brouwer and Mr. Pendleton had crossed and were cutting steps in the ice on the other side. Something, we know not what, gave way on the other side, and we felt a jerk on the rope. It had broken between Brouwer and Mr. Pendleton. His lordship was on the edge of the divide. Presently there was another jerk. Mr. Pendleton went down, and his lordship fell back, I catching him in my arms."

"But the others!" exclaimed the excited listeners. "How far did they fall? Were they killed?"

"That we don't know," replied the guide. "It was snowing, and we could not see a dozen yards. We concluded to return for ropes, go back and as soon as it is light tomorrow make an investigation. They have provisions and flasks of liquor, and if they are not killed we may save them."

A moment the landlord took up the end of the rope that had been severed between Boyingham and Pendleton and scrutinized it. Presently he dropped it and went away.

"Why did you examine that rope?" asked a guest.

"To see if it had been broken."

"Well?"

"It was broken. The end was frayed."

About midnight a party, provided with such paraphernalia as were necessary to their purpose, made ready to start in quest of the missing guide and Pendleton. Lord Boyingham declared that there was no use in attempting to reach them; that he had looked down into a crevasse several hundred feet deep, into which he was sure they had fallen. He declined to go back with the party, making an excuse that he had been so "cut up" by the accident and the loss of the two men that he would be of no use in the rescue. Since no one was wanted in the party who could not assist it was deemed best for him to remain in the hotel.

The party started about 1 o'clock. They could travel over a known path till nearly dawn, which would bring them near the scene of the accident as soon as it was light enough to see to what depths the men had fallen. Fortunately the weather had changed, and shortly after 2 o'clock a gray streak appeared in the cloudless east. The party consisted of a Mr. Bowers, an American stopping at the hotel where the excursionists had put up, two porters and Dyckman leading the way.

About half past 2 they reached the ridge where the accident had occurred, and Bowers, taking the advance, climbed it, sitting on it with a leg on either side. Looking down, he saw that the tourists must have fallen into a gap, but how deep it was he could not tell. The rest of the party, being informed of what he was about to do, all advanced, he descending to an icy ledge not far below. The men in falling must have struck this ledge and, unable to stop themselves, had slid into the gap.

When all had crossed the last man threw the coils of rope over to them, and Bowers volunteered to be lowered to discover whether the men could be found and whether they were dead or alive. A rope was placed around his body, and, a code of signals having been arranged, he was let down. When he had gone some forty feet, the rope slackening, it was evident that he had struck bottom. He was then heard to call, and a faint response came up. He signaled to be raised and, reaching the party, said that the gap was filled with soft snow; that he had called and received an answer. When being raised he looked for the owner of the voice and saw him some fifty feet away. The point from which he had been lowered being altered to meet the new conditions, he went down again with another rope. Presently a signal was given on each of these ropes, and Bowers and Brouwer were both hauled up. Brouwer was well nigh gone, but was able to point out where Pendleton would be found, the two having conversed after their fall.

Bowers again went down with an extra rope and struck Pendleton lying apparently unconscious, though if Bowers had not been immediately over him he would not have seen him, so deeply buried was he in the snow. Then Bowers and Pendleton were both drawn up, Pendleton showing no sign of life. But glass being placed over his mouth showed moisture, and the party, going to work on him with a will, pouring down liquor at the same time, finally revived him.

Neither of the men had been injured by their fall into the snow. They were on the eve of perishing by cold. As soon as they were able to proceed the party descended to Scheidig.

Great was the rejoicing at the hotel when the two men who had been considered lost appeared walking with their rescuers down the mountain. When they came up to the porch it was crowded with people cheering and waving to them. Then some one asked, "Where's Lord Boyingham?" An attendant replied: "His lordship went down to Interlaken an hour ago. He received a telegram calling him away."

The meeting between Pendleton and Della Denton was far different from their parting. The title that had tempted her had shriveled since it must be taken with a man who was at once dishonorable and a coward. Not only that, but the accident had revealed to her her own heart. The belief that Pendleton had been killed gave her a shock that surprised her. One glance from Pendleton at the woman he loved told him that he had won.

When something of the excitement had subsided the landlord asked Pendleton to come into a private room. The rope with which the climber had started the day before was still about him. The landlord took up the end and, looking at it, threw it from him.

"What is it?" asked Pendleton.

"It was cut," was the reply in a scathing tone. "The dog hoped you would drag him over and cut you off. Before his return he frayed the edge by rubbing it between stones."

Pendleton was thunderstruck. The landlord continued:

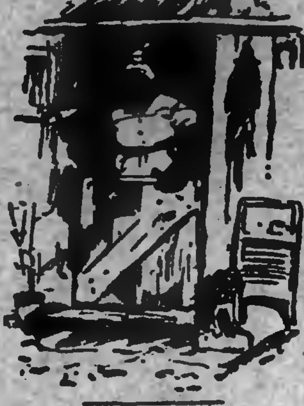
"His lordship wrote a telegram to himself stating that his mother was dying. He did it for an excuse to get away and left before your return. He dared not face your end of the rope."

"Keep it to yourself," said Pendleton after a moment's thought.

Pendleton kept the secret till a few years later he heard the Britisher was trying again to marry an American fortune, when he sent his lordship an order to keep off, an order that was speedily obeyed.

Della Denton did not know the secret till she had been Mrs. Pendleton several years.

A Popular Bell.



Punctured.

He had been boasting proudly about the quality of his machine, and pretty nearly everybody within earshot had grown excessively weary.

"For speed it's a dandy," he concluded, "but it costs like the dickens to keep it in repair."

"Well," said a stranger who had come into the smoker a trifle late to hear the beginning of the talk, "perhaps you haven't got the best. Now, I've got a machine that's a corker for speed, too, and I don't believe I've spent more than—well, not more than 85 cents in repairs in two years."

"Eighty-five cents!" cried the boastful one. "Nonsense! Why, the mere idea of speed alone involves a greater wear and tear, to say nothing of breakages, than that. Maybe our ideas of speed differ," he added condescendingly. "Just how high can you run?"

"Three hundred words a minute," said the stranger.

"Words?" demanded the boastful one scornfully.

"Why, yes," said the stranger. "You were talking about typewriting machines, weren't you?"

Whereupon the boastful one exploded with a loud report and a sibilant hiss.—Harper's Weekly.

Too Marvelous.

"Dug 'em out of th' ground?" exclaimed the old gentleman from up state, looking at the case of vases from Herculaneum.

"Yes, sir," answered the attendant.

"What, jist as they be?"

"Perhaps some little pains have been taken in cleaning them, but in other respects they are the same."

"Pshaw!" muttered the old man, turning away. "He can say what he likes, but, by gum, he can't fool me into believin' reddy made vases were ever dug up out of th' ground!"—Metropolitan Magazine.

A Prosaic Interpretation.

Professor Brander Matthews of Columbia in one of his brilliant addresses on the drama said of an unimaginative and prosaic dramatist:

"He it was, I am sure, who in his youth on being asked in examination what Shakespeare meant by the phrase 'sermons in stones' wrote in reply:

"'When passing by a tombstone you may learn the name and the dates of birth and death of the departed one and also from the inscription a valuable moral lesson from his or her life. Walking along a road you may see from the milestones the number of miles to the nearest towns and thus acquire geographical information. Heaps of stones by the roadside indicate that repairs are to take place and so indicate a lesson in neatness.'"—Detroit Free Press.

An Author's Insight.

There is no surer mark of genius than the intuitive insight into character and social conditions of which the author has no personal experience. "What does Ben know of dukes?" asked homely old Isaac Disraeli when he heard the title of his son's latest novel. Trollope wrote inimitably of bishops and deans when he had never been in a cathedral close in his life. Young Disraeli wrote so well about the great ones of the earth whom he had never seen that the critics busied themselves in finding "keys" to "Vivian Grey" and "The Young Duke."—London Saturday Review.

A Touch of Family Life.

When the country youth proposed to the city girl he received the conventional assurance that she would be his sister. It happened that this youth had sisters at home and knew exactly his privileges. So he kissed her. At this juncture she availed herself of the sisterly right to call out to father that brother was teasing her. Father responded in good, muscular fashion. Then the new brother and sister relation was dissolved by mutual consent. —Judge.

Only Then.

"I don't know whether I ought to recognize him here in the city or not. Our acquaintance at the seashore was very slight."

"You promised to marry him, didn't you?"

"Yes, but that was all."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

TO THE ELECTORS OF WEST WARD

Gentlemen:

I respectfully solicit your vote and influence to return me as Alderman for your Ward for 1914. As a business man with a successful business experience, I feel that our motto should be "Business methods in all departments of the Council." Efficiency linked with economy should be our guiding principle.

I trust you will favor me with your support and I promise should I be returned that I will do my best to merit your approval.

Jos. Wm. WORTH

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY

Ladies and Gentlemen:

The retirement of Mr. W. H. Hill has decided me to acquiesce with the desire of a number of ratepayers who wish me to be a candidate for a seat on the Utilities Commissioners' Board for 1914.

We all realize that the Board of Water Commissioners is, and needs to be, an efficient, business like organization. For the coming year, the management of the local Hydro-Electric will be an important addition to the duties of the Commissioners.

It will be my aim, if honored with a seat at the board, to co-operate with the present members of that commission, and to assist in continuing the success achieved by the Waterworks department.

I shall also endeavor to help, so far as is in my power, with the organization of the local Hydro-Electric system. Having from the beginning felt the advantages of this system, I shall do my utmost to make his public utility of the greatest possible service to the citizens of the municipality.

The qualification which I present to you in support of my candidature is service in your interest for five years on your board of Aldermen. On this record I ask your support at the polls.

Respectfully,

ROBERT HICKS.

ODD STUNTS WITH A WHIP.

Wonderful Feats by a European Master of the Lash.

"I saw a downright novelty on the bill of a European music hall," said a man who spends a bit of his time on the other side. "It was furnished by an Austro-Hungarian, who accomplished some wonderful things with a whip.

"One of his stunts was to take a long lashed, stout handled whip in each hand and, with orchestral accompaniment, proceed to crack or snap them at a terrific rate. The sound made by his whips in this manner is graduated from a noise like a rifle report to the soft click of a billiard ball. It makes a curious sort of music and serves to show how he can regulate the force of each stroke.

"Another feature of his performance is achieved with a vicious looking whip with an abnormally long lash. It is provided with a heavy handle of medium length. This is his favorite toy, and what he can do with it is really wonderful. He first gives an idea of what fearful force may lie in a whiplash in the hands of an expert. There is a large frame shown, over which is stretched a calf or sheep skin. This is marked with dots of red paint. The man with the whip steps up and, swinging the lash round his head, lets fly at the calfskin. With every blow he actually pulls a piece out of the leather, leaving a clean cut hole. These pieces are distributed among the audience to show that there is no trickery about the performance.

"After this he takes a frame with three shelves. On these there are a dozen or more of medium sized apples lying very close together and provided with large numbers. Any one in the audience may designate which apple he wishes struck, and the unerring lash snatches it out like a flash. A still more difficult feat is the snapping of coins from a narrow necked bottle. A piece of silver about the size of a half crown is put over the cork of the bottle, which stands on the edge of a table. The whip artist, without appearing to take any sort of aim, sends the long lash whizzing through the air and picks off the coin without jarring the bottle, much less breaking it."—New York Press.

Spiders and Whooping Cough.

"Will you please give mother a nut to put a spider in, as baby's got the whooping cough?" This extraordinary request was made to a Tiverton shopkeeper the other day by a little girl whose mother believes that if she imprisons a live spider in a nutshell and ties it round her infant's neck the whooping cough will disappear when the spider dies.—London Mail.

TO THE ELECTORS OF PETERBOROUGH:

Ladies and Gentlemen:—

Last year a large number of ratepayers requested me to be a candidate for Water Commissioner in opposition to Mr. Moore. I not only declined to be a candidate but did what I could to prevent opposition. The Commissioners at that time had law suits on with the contractors where about thirty thousand dollars of the people's money was at stake. Mr. Moore being a lawyer I considered he should be the best posted man on the Commission to fight the contractors and in the interest of the City it would be a mistake to remove him.

This year I have again been waited upon by a large representation of the ratepayers who believe that with my thorough knowledge of all the waters in this district and my many years experience as alderman I should be a capable man for the position. I have consented to be a candidate and my past record in the Council think is proof that if elected will give you faithful and honest service.

The taking over of the Hydro-Electric system will require a great deal of time—more than any man who has a large business to attend to can spare. Not being in business I can give all the time required, and if necessary will make a personal inspection of every house in the city and see that rich and poor are treated alike.

I can see no reason, with the large body of ready made reservoirs of the Otonabee River there should be any shortage of water for either household or lawn service, or why there should not be a reduction in the water rates. A good supply of good water is a necessity in every house and should be available for the people at low rate.

To the ratepayers who are now residents of the City and not personally acquainted with me, would say that for a number of years I occupied the position of alderman, and always stood at the head of the poll both as a representative of No. 3 Ward and also after the Ward system was abolished.

General street railway extension and cheap transportation like cheap light and water, should be the goal of our municipal government. When a worker can have his home and garden anywhere, and is not tied to a locality his prospects are greatly improved.

Trusting that the ratepayers who want good service in the future as have given the past will give me their hearty support.

I am, yours very truly,

J. B. McWILLIAMS

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,—

A number of ratepayers request me to offer myself as a candidate for the representation of the above Ward in the coming Aldermanic election. I have consented to stand, and ask for your vote and influence.

If elected, I will seek to the utmost of my power, to promote the [illegible] of the city.

Yours respectfully,

City of Three Kings.

Do you know what city has been given the name of the City of Three Kings? It is Cologne, in Germany, and the reason is that it is in Cologne that the three "kings," or "magi," or "wise men," who went to Bethlehem to offer gifts to the infant Jesus are supposed to be buried. According to an ancient legend, their bones were brought from Milan to Cologne by the Emperor Frederick Barbarossa in 1162 and presented to the archbishop of Cologne. Visitors to the cathedral are shown the supposed souls of the magi, studded with diamonds and inscribed with the wise men's names in rubies.—St. James' Gazette.

Federal Homestead Laws.

The federal homestead laws begin with the act of 1862, now a part of the United States revised statutes. Their policy is to give portions of the public lands to those who will settle, cultivate and/make permanent homes upon them. Any person who is the head of a family or who is twenty-one years of age and is a citizen of the United States or who has filed his declaration of intention to become such may acquire a tract of unappropriated public land, not exceeding 160 acres, on condition of settlement, cultivation and continuous occupancy as a home by him for the period of five years and the payment of certain moderate fees. It is expressly declared that no lands acquired under this statute shall in any event become liable to any debt contracted prior to the issuing of the patent therefor by the government to the settler.—New York American.

A Cumulative Persian Story.

A hunter finds some honey in the fissure of a rock, fills a jar with it and takes it to a grocer. While it is being weighed a drop falls to the ground and is swallowed up by the grocer's weasel. Thereupon the huntsman's dog rushes upon the weasel and kills it. The grocer throws a stone at the dog and kills him. The huntsman draws his sword and cuts off the grocer's arm, after which he is cut down by the infuriated mob of the bazaar. The governor of the town, informed of the fact, sends messengers to arrest the murderer. When the crowd resisted troops were dispatched to the scene of the conflict, whereupon the townspeople mixed themselves up in the riot, which lasted three days and three nights, with the result that 70,000 men were slain. All this through a drop of honey.

To The Ratepayers of CENTRE WARD

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

I spoke with a merchant at his store door, and he said he supposed the people would go ahead and elect a [illegible] of dead heads to the Council. In fact he said more dead heads. That merchant is a pessimist, and has a grouch.

But he may have reasons. His view of things comes from seeing men go into the Council, and who have made [illegible] [illegible] too much, [illegible] [illegible] to do things, they really didn't believe they could or would do. It is the popular thing.

I am [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] promises. I don't just know what I can do until I get there, if I get there. But I can assure the ratepayers that I will try and be useful, helpful and diligent in doing such good service as I can be. That covers it.

I shall be very glad to receive your vote, and trust to be so favored.

Respectfully,

FRANK H. DOBBIN.

J. J. HARTLEY

The Workingman's Candidate For

MAYOR

Unanimously Endorsed by the Trades of Labor Council

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY OF PETERBOROUGH:

Ladies and Gentlemen:—At the earnest request of a large number of the ratepayers I have consented to be a candidate for the position of Mayor for the year 1914.

Being born and having lived all my life in Peterborough, and my whole life's savings being invested in Peterborough, I naturally have a deep interest in the welfare and prosperity of the City.

Should I be elected I promise you that I will guard to the very best of my ability, the interests of the ratepayers and will oppose all unnecessary expenditure. I will do my utmost to keep down the ever increasing rate of taxation consistent with needs of a growing City.

I may say that I am in favor of Municipal Ownership, and am in favor of having all city work done by our own people instead of bringing in outsiders to do it.

I will endeavour to see that the ratepayers get value for every dollar that is expended.

I have had considerable experience in municipal matters, having served ten years in the Council and fourteen years on the Board of Education, being Chairman of that Board for two years, I was also Chairman of the Board of Health for several years, so that you will see that I am not without a fair share of experience.

Should you do me the honor to elect me as Mayor of our City I will do my best to serve you to the extent of my ability.

Yours respectfully,

J. J. HARTLEY

A nice old lady recently called at the cutlery department of a large Market street store and told a salesman that she wished to buy a good razor for her husband. "What kind of razor do you wish, madam?" courteously inquired the salesman as he prepared to show her his wares. "I really don't know," replied the woman. "I suppose I'll have to ask your advice. Tell me what kinds you have." The salesman forthwith told his prospective customer that he had razors suited to every shaver, whether his beard was downy or strong, and also that the blades were of various widths and weights. On receiving this information the old lady pondered the matter and then said: "Suppose you give me something for a man sixty-two years old, who weighs 210 pounds."—Philadelphia Record.

Christmas Announcement

WE take pleasure in once more presenting to your our Annual Announcement in connection with the Holiday Trade, and would respectfully call your attention to the fact that we have secured from the leading markets of the world an up-to-date stock of holiday goods, suitable for Christmas and New Year presents, which we are selling at a bargain. This year we are better prepared than ever to cater to the wants of the public.

In both quality and prices, we defy competition. Our expenses are comparatively insignificant as compared with the other larger stores in the city, and the fact that we have not got to look to the profits from our bookstore trade to carry us through, but have a large printing and book manufacturing business as well, in addition to our rapidly expanding newspaper business.

We have made expensive preparations for the Holiday Trade, and invite the public to call and inspect our stock and get our prices before purchasing elsewhere.

Calendars, Handy Booklets, Christmas and Text Cards

We have in Calendars, Booklets, Christmas and Text Cards a stock of the latest designs, and a very large assortment to choose from. Special discounts to parties taking a number.

Fancy Goods

In Fancy Goods, as in every other line, our stock is up-to-date. We can supply you with presents for young and old, rich and poor, wives, husbands and sweethearts. We only give a mere hint here of the articles with which our shelves are loaded:—Brush and Comb Sets, Manicure Setts, Writing Desks, Collar and Cuff Boxes, Glove and Handkerchief Boxes, Ladies' and Gentlemen's Travelling Companions, Jewel Cases, Photo Boxes, Albums, etc., etc. These goods are all new, and made in designs and of material not shown before.

Books for All

We ask an inspection of our stock and prices. We aim to give our customers the best possible value for the money. Dainty Gift Books, Padded Poems, and an endless variety of Cloth and Leather Bound Works. Also Bibles, Hymnals, Children's Illustrated Books, etc.

Games for Young and Old

Our stock in Games is very complete, including Fishpond, Flips, Game of India, Halma, The Century Ride, Lost Heir, Authors, Checkers, Dominoes, Nations, Lotto and all the popular 10 cent games.

New Souvenir Novelties and Small Wares

The following are but a few of the many very desirable articles suitable for Yuletide remembrances: Purses, Card Cases, Burnt Leather Blotters, Pen Wipers and Book Markers: Tin, Crumb, Pin and Ash Trays, Ink Wells, Bon-bon Dishes, Japanese Cups and Saucers, Bread and Butter Plates, Rose Bowls, Vases, Biscuit Jars, all kinds of bric-a-brac, etc.

For Dolls We Lead—Others Follow

We propose to lead this season in the Doll Trade, and are showing Dolls at prices that defy competition. Handsome Kid Dolls, Dressed Dolls in all sizes, Bisque and Composition Dolls, Wax and China Dolls, Rubber Dolls and Dolls that may be used for Fancy Pin [illegible] etc. Dolls from 15c up.

Please Remember

1.—That The Times Bookstore has everything marked close to cost;

2.—We can sell cheaper than any other house. The reason we can afford to do so is, because our expenses are practically all compared with other concerns.

3.—We are large manufacturers of stationery supplies and books, employing about 40 persons, so that in these lines we have goods at first cost.

4.—We sell to the wholesale trade, who again sell to the bookstores and stationers throughout the country, so that by purchasing direct from us you save, in many cases, the profits of two "middle men."

5.—The Times Bookstore is confident that it can give you satisfaction, and would urge an early inspection of our stock before the rush begins. You only have to select what you want and have the goods put aside for delivery when required.

Soliciting the favor of your esteemed patronage, and wishing you the compliments of the season, we remain,

Very respectfully yours,

Times Bookstore

THE TIMES BUILDING, 141 HUNTER ST.

P. S.—If you have any books to bind at any time, kindly let us hear from you, and we will quote prices and show samples of our work. We make a specialty of printing Wedding, At Home and Calling Cards. A trial order is all we ask. We leave the rest to you.

A ROMAN COMEDY

An American Girl In the Running, but There Is No Race

By F. A. MITCHEL

Copyright by American Press Association, 1913.

Two Italian noblemen were sitting at a sidewalk in the Piazza Colonna in Rome, smoking cigarettes and drinking the wine of the country. They were both descended from families that had been prominent several centuries ago, but [illegible] the [illegible] from the [illegible]. Count Leo Barbarini was speaking to Prince Sforza.

"So the last [illegible] has refused you too?"

"She has," [illegible] the prince.

"[illegible] with your failure."

"[illegible] you [illegible]?"

[illegible]

"And I can raise a thousand more. We can place his estate in some inaccessible country."

"Good!" laughed the prince. "Your suggestions are admirable. Shall we really try it?"

"By all means."

Soon after this interview it was intimated to Miss Evaline Henderson of Idaho, U. S. A., that Prince Gregorio Colonna desired to be presented to her. The Colonna family was already known to Miss Henderson as one of the two great families—the Colonna and the Orsini—that dominated Rome during the middle ages. She had not come to the Eternal City without preparing herself by historical reading to enjoy its antiquities and was anxious to see a direct descendant of a family that had taken so great a part in past struggles between the Holy Roman empire and the papacy. She therefore received Prince Colonna graciously.

Prince Gregorio had been selected to play the part more from his personal appearance than his [illegible] or abilities, [illegible] [illegible]

3,000 lira furnished by Count Barbarini and Prince Sforza, the reading of a brief history of his ancestors and those Siberian mines, which were not likely to be hunted up by Miss Henderson. But his chief attraction was his pedigree. No American can visit Italy without being impressed with the solemn grandeur of some of the knights of the empire whose battle-ground is the restaurant and whose defiance consists of American tips. Prince Colonna was one of the most magnificent of these.

Now, the American girl is regarded all over Europe as a wonder. Europeans are used to their own girls, who are guarded till after their marriage and must then endeavor to throw off that want of familiarity with the world to which they had been theretofore doomed. The American girl begins to use her wings almost from the crib. Miss Henderson was as well able to take care of herself as a corps of guardians and duennas could have taken care of her.

his family glory unless compelled to do so. When Blackwelder and Colonna and Miss Henderson were together the latter expatiated to the American on the marvelous deeds of the Colonnas of old, showing a remarkable familiarity with them—indeed, a familiarity which at times would startle the prince himself, especially when she gave the names of five Colonnas he had not met with in his historical studies, who had been hanged before the castle of St. Angelo.

Nothing will so fret a man, especially a man in love, as uncertainty. If Miss Henderson had announced her intention to buy her way in among the Colonnas or if she had openly made fun of the prince Blackwelder would have settled down to his fate, whatever it was. Unfortunately she seemed to be wavering between the two. The only persons who seemed to have been made happy by the introduction of the prince were the conspirators, Barbarini and Sforza. One day Miss Henderson, driving along the Corso in an open carriage with Blackwelder and the spurious prince, saw them sitting together in the Piazza Colonna drinking and smoking. They both rose and took off their hats to her, while she seemed to be very proud of the Italian portion of her company. After this she continued on driving by the Piazza Colonna frequently at an hour when she knew her two discarded suitors would be there. If Prince Colonna on these occasions felt embarrassed he concealed his embarrassment under that stolid grandeur of mien which was born in him.

"Upon my word," remarked Count Leo Barbarini to Prince Sforza, "I believe our scheme will be a success. Our waiter will marry the American."

"You see, it required these Siberian mines to make it so. Though Americans spend money like water, they value it all the same."

"Who is the other fellow in the carriage, I wonder?"

"An American. But whether he is a waiter, too, cannot matter much to us—that is, provided we can keep up the sham. It is the Colonna name and the right to write princess after it that will win."

"In any event we have had the satisfaction of passing a waiter off upon her as a prince. Did you notice how proud she seemed to be of him as she passed?"

"And the smile she gave us."

And so the comedy went on, much to the satisfaction of the conspirators. Prince Colonna's capital was nearing an end, and one day he mentioned before Miss Henderson that a dividend from his mines had been delayed. She promptly asked him how much he required for his present expenses, and while he was refusing to be supplied by a lady she sat down at a desk and, writing a check for 5,000 lira, handed it to him.

"But my remittance will soon be here," he protested.

"Take it and pay when your remittance comes," she replied.

The same afternoon Miss Henderson telephoned to her bankers to know if Prince Colonna had drawn the check and learned that he had done so. Then she telephoned to the prince asking him to call during the evening. When he did so, magnificent in a fresh accession of jewelry, she asked him to be seated and said:

"Giovanni!"

The prince started.

"You are not Gregorio Colonna. You are Giovanni Something-or-other, and you have this afternoon committed a fraud. Some one has been putting you up to this playing prince, and I wish to know all about the scheme. You are welcome to the 5,000 lira, but hereafter I own you, for the moment you refuse to obey my orders or try to deceive me you go to jail. Do as I direct and you are safe from the results of your crime."

Giovanni confessed that he had been a waiter at a hotel at Frascati and that Barbarini and Sforza had hired him to play the part of Prince Colonna and marry Miss Henderson if possible. He further stated that he had agreed to pay each of them so much after his marriage.

"Indeed!" she said, with much surprise. "I did not suppose that Barbarini and Sforza had sunk so low. However, since it was murder in the [illegible] [illegible]

the receiver. The waiter knew the situation of this, and Miss Henderson knew that with the transmitter near her lips she had little to fear. Giovanni opened a pocketbook, drew out a paper and handed it to her. She took it, read it and said:

"Now go to Frascati and tell the keeper of the hotel at which you were employed that I desire dinner for four persons to be ready at 8 o'clock this evening. Any failure to do so I direct will result in your arrest at once."

With 5,000 lira in his pocket and a jail as an alternative there was not much expectation that he would disobey.

The next morning Count Barbarini and Prince Sforza received an invitation to drive with Miss Henderson to the hills near Rome for dinner. She said she had an important announcement to make to them. They accepted, feeling assured that they would learn of her engagement to Prince Colonna. They called at her hotel and were introduced to Mr. Blackwelder. Seeing that they were surprised at not meeting Prince Colonna, she told them that he would be of the party at dinner, but would go in his own conveyance.

The four entered a carriage waiting at the door and, driving across the Campagna, ascended the hill to Frascati and stopped before the —— hotel. Dinner was served, but the prince did not appear.

"He will be late," Miss Henderson explained.

It was not till the coffee was brought on that he appeared, and then it was in the dress of a waiter, with a napkin on his arm. The guests stared at him astonished, but he avoided the gaze of all, serving the coffee with lowered eyes. The two conspirators paled.

"Gentlemen," said Miss Henderson, "I told you I would make an announcement. It is this—I am betrothed to Mr. Blackwelder."

Then the party broke up, the two noblemen retiring in confusion.

OUT OF THE POORHOUSE.

A Pathetic Incident of Life in an English Village.

"Opposite my home," writes a correspondent of the Westminster Gazette from an English village, "are two cottages which for some time stood empty. A few weeks ago two old people from whom the pauper disqualification had been removed came slowly up the long hill and with trembling fingers unlocked the door and entered. A piece of paper very soon appeared to act as a screen across the window. We saw very little of the old people, but there were signs of what was happening inside. Before long a little white curtain replaced the paper. After dark no light appeared in the cottage. It takes time to furnish with an old age pension. One night as I drew down my blind a gleam of light caught my attention from over the way, and the picture I saw will remain with me for long. There, in the middle of the room was a lighted lamp, and the two old people, with clasped hands, stood gazing up at it in silent delight. They must have had more creature comforts in the workhouse, but there was no pride of possession there and they could not be together either. But the pathos of it—beginning life at seventy!"

Odd Test of Naval Vessel.

It is not often that a deliberate attempt is made to break a ship in two, but that is what the British admiralty department did when it suspended the torpedo boat destroyer Wolf by the middle without support at the ends and then at the ends without support in the middle in order to discover whether the boat was so weak that it would break amidships because of the unevenly distributed support of heavy waves at sea. The Wolf stood the strain not only of this but of subsequent tests. The experiments were made because it had been charged that the boats of this class were structurally weak.

WEST POINT UNIFORMS.

Cadets Must Sacrifice Comfort For the Sake of Looks.

"It is true," said a retired army officer in a discussion of West Pointers with the Washington Herald, "that many West Pointers acquire a figure of perfection of symmetry and a carriage the acme of manly grace, but these are due not to any ingenious appliances, but to the systematic drills and exercises that make the cadet, to a certain extent, an athlete. At the outset these young fellows are put through what are called the 'setting up' exercises, their object being to straighten the body and develop the chest. One might suppose that it would require a great amount of such exercise to make any marked showing, but three long hours of such exercise daily will soon produce beneficial results in the most stooped forms.

"The cadet uniform is also a great help in this direction. The dress coat is tight, very tight. The shoulders are heavily padded in order to give them a square effect. The chest is made thick, so that there will be no danger of wrinkling. And in size a new dress coat seems always to be designed for a boy several times smaller than the one who is to wear it. A new dress coat, in fact, is always a source of suffering to its owner. When he first puts it on it buttons readily about the neck, but seems to lack about six inches at the waist. The owner may squirm and wriggle and attempt to reduce his waist to a minimum circumference, but his maiden efforts are never sufficient to button the new dress coat. Experience is a great teacher, though, and the young fellow laughingly requests one or two of his friends to lend their assistance, and he finally succeeds in buttoning the coat. All this for the sake of looks. Comfort has no place in the makeup of a West Pointer; it's discipline and looks."

WATCHED OVER BY SATAN.

Superstitions That Twine About the Mandrake Plant.

The little plant the mandrake has a wealth of tradition centering round it such as is seldom found in floral lore. Quite an insignificant little plant with a spindle shaped root often divided into two or three forks and rudely simulating the human form, it is doubtless from this latter fact that it has derived its name. Langhorne in the latter part of the eighteenth century tells us to

> Mark how the rooted mandrake wears
> His human feet, his human hands,

while it was once believed that a person pulling up a mandrake would instantly fall dead. This was said to be because the mandrake had a human heart at its root and when pulled it would scream in such a fearsome manner as to terrify the hearer to death or else induce madness. Shakespeare alludes to this where he says:

> And shrieks like mandrakes torn out of the earth,
> That living mortals, hearing them, run mad.

And again in "King Henry VI," where Suffolk, asked by Queen Margaret whether he has not spirit to curse his enemies, replies:

> Would curses kill, as doth the mandrake's groan,
> I would invent as bitter, searching terms
> As curst, as harsh, as horrible to hear.

From time immemorial the mandrake has been associated with enchantments and has ever been believed to be one of the most powerful charms of witches. Mr. Conway in a paper on "Mystic Trees and Flowers" states that "by popular superstitions in some places it is said to be perpetually watched over by Satan, and if it be pulled up at certain holy times and with certain invocations the evil spirit will appear to do the bidding of the practitioner."—Westminster Review.

The Holland Primrose.

There is a plant in Holland known as the evening primrose, which grows to a height of five or six feet and bears a profusion of large yellow flowers so brilliant that they attract immediate attention, even at a great distance, but the chief peculiarity about the plant is the fact that the flowers, which open just before sunset, burst into bloom so suddenly that they give one the impression of some magical agency. A man who has seen this sudden blooming says it is just as if some one had touched the land with a wand that then clothed it all at once with a golden sheet.

The Tenderhearted Maiden.

A young man and a maiden were betrothed.

"Dearest one," said the young man, "I love thee. So great is my devotion that if another should but cast loving glances at thee a fearsome thing would happen."

"What might it be?" [illegible]

"Even that I would kill him. Dost believe me?"

"Nay," quoth the maiden.

"Nay? But I protest to thee, I vow I swear, that if another should make love to thee his life should pay forfeit [illegible], I swear. Dost believe me now?"

"Nay," quoth the maiden.

"Nay, what meanest thou? Why believest thou not that I would kill the [illegible] villain?"

"Because," quoth the maiden, "thou knowest not [illegible] about it."—[illegible]

the captain and all hands subdued by one who had never studied navigation and couldn't make an observation was another. The first would be in the line of a sailor's life; the second there was no precedent for. Something must be done. One proposition after another was made, discussed and discarded. Finally Dick Smalls, one of the younger members of the crew, spoke up:

"It's plain that Mrs. Stoughton has mutinied and took the ship. I don't see that there is anything for us to do but mutiny agin the new master and take the ship ourselves."

"That's all werry well, mates," put in Tom Billings, "providin' you can get rid o' the 'ooman. But after ye got the ship what ye goin' to do with her? Hain't she still in command? That's my experience."

This was a poser, especially as the crew, nearly all of whom were single men, had great respect for Tom Billings' opinion on anything concerning the opposite sex.

"It seems to me, mates," continued Billings, "that ye're up agin a want o' knowledge o' navigatin' the female craft. All ye got to do is to put 'em afore the wind and let 'em scud. Ye can't steer 'em, and if ye try ye'll sure come to grief. But I knows there hain't no use o' talkin' to you. You're bound to run this here business yer own way, so ye can count me out."

With that he went on deck.

The next day the mutiny plan was carried out. The men, except Stoughton, who was not consulted, marched aft in a body and demanded the person of the "'ooman as had took this ship." The captain made a pretense of resistance, confining himself to words instead of acts, then told them that, being powerless in face of a united crew, they could do what they liked with the woman.

A round robin of four men was appointed to take Mrs. Stoughton down into the hold and turn her adrift, where she would have plenty of room to walk back and forth like a caged lioness. They put bedding down with her, and it was understood that her meals should be let down to her regularly.

"Did ye observe the look on her face, mates?" remarked Billings after the woman had been safely put away. "When they looks that way it means the weather glass is a-goin' down like lead."

Three days passed without any trouble so far as the prisoner was concerned. From the moment she was put below the accustomed cheerfulness came back to the crew, enhanced by contrast with their late condition. But on the fourth day when the captain was standing on the poop deck and a large sea rolled under the vessel he noticed that she didn't rise with her accustomed buoyancy. Billings was standing by at the time.

"What's the matter with her?" growled the captain to himself.

"It's my opinion, sir," said Billings, putting his knuckles to his cap, "that there's somepin in the cargo as don't belong there."

"What do you mean?" asked the captain anxiously.

"The 'ooman."

"Well?"

"When she was put in the hold I was wonderin' what she'd do, so I've kept my binnacle open. The ship's drawin' more water, sir, than she did three days ago."

"You mean"—

"She scuttled."

The captain made a dive for the companionway, calling on Billings to follow. Entering the hold, they found four feet of water. The point of leakage was covered so that they could not see it, but they found some of the carpenter's tools of which Mrs. Stoughton had possessed herself. All hands were called to man the pumps, and when the water had been removed a large auger hole was discovered a few feet above the keel.

The hole having been plugged, the captain ordered Mrs. Stoughton locked in her own cabin, then called the crew aft and asked for suggestions as to what to do with her. Every man jack of them looked at Billings, so the captain asked for his advice.

"There's just two ways o' managin' 'oomen, sir," said the old salt. "The first is to git away from 'em, the second to let 'em have their own way. I can only judge by my own experience. After I was married I observed that to keep the family peace I'd got to knuckle under. There is 'nobody as is 'ead o' the 'ome, but this is where the 'ooman hasn't the usual female grit. Them as lets their wives command the family ship gits on just as well as any of 'em. Some un's got to be boss, and if the 'ooman has the dominatin' faculty in her why not?"

The captain decided that Mrs. Stoughton should have the free run of the ship for that voyage, after which no woman was to be permitted aboard. So he issued orders to that effect, and Mrs. Stoughton was not again interfered with from that moment until the vessel reached port.

Strange to say, having conquered, the lady made herself quite agreeable, and when she left the ship half the crew felt a heartsickness they had never felt before.

A Reflection on the Horse.

"My husband," bragged Mrs. Jones, "was a famous long distance runner in his day. He once outran a horse in a twenty mile race."

"Isn't that funny?" answered Mrs. Smith. "We once had a horse like that."

Old Folks' Coughs Permanently Cured

The Public is Loud in Its Praise of the Modern Direct Breathing Cure.

Elderly people take cold easily. Unlike young folks, they recover slowly, if ever. That is why so many people past middle life die of pneumonia. Even though pneumonia does not develop and kill, coughs certainly weaken all elderly people.

Cough syrups seldom do much good because they upset digestion. Any druggist or doctor knows that a much more effective treatment is "CATARRHOZONE," which heals and soothes the irritated surfaces of the throat.

In using Catarrhozone you do not take medicine into the stomach—you simply breathe into the throat, nose and lungs rich piney balsamic vapor, so full of healing power that colds, catarrh and bronchitis disappear almost instantly.

"At sixty-eight years of age I can testify that I am never troubled with coughs or colds," writes J. E. Pilgrim, of Kingston. "They used to be the bain of my life, and that was before I used Catarrhozone, which was recommended to me by C. L. Prouse, druggist. To use Catarrhozone is just like being in an immense pine woods. The balsamic vapor of Catarrhozone is like a tonic, it is so stimulating to the breathing organs, so soothing to sore spots, so full of power to drive out colds and congestion. I will always use and recommend Catarrhozone as a preventive and cure for coughs, colds, bronchitis, throat irritation and catarrh.

(Signed) "J. E. PILGRIM."

A Catarrhozone Inhaler in your pocket or purse enables you to stop a cold with the first sneeze. Large size costs $1.00 and supplies treatment for two months; small size, 50c.; trial size 25c.; all storekeepers and druggists, or the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Turkeys sold in Belleville yesterday at 30 cents a pound.

There will be only one mail delivery to-day, during the morning.

Thirty years ago a marble quarry found in Belmont attracted much attention.

A WELL THAT ENDED WELL.

Hard Luck, However, by Leaps Preceded the Discovery.

"When I was a boy," said the story teller, "I lived in the Pennsylvania oil country and my grandfather owned a big farm down there. They had never found oil within five or six miles of grandfather's place, but they were gradually edging along in his direction, and we all expected that sooner or later somebody would uncover a gusher there. That would mean a fortune for grandfather, and as I was his only heir I naturally took considerable interest in the matter. Well, one day a rich oil man came along and made an offer for grandfather's farm. They had struck a good well near by, and everybody had come to the conclusion that grandfather's farm was in the middle of the oil belt. Our friends advised against the acceptance of the first offer, which would have been twenty times as much as the farm would have been worth if no oil had been there, but if was certain that if oil were discovered on the farm we could get $50,000 and perhaps $100,000 more than the price mentioned by the first bidder.

"Seeing that grandfather wouldn't sell, the man leased a couple of acres from him and started to put down a test well. It was expected that they would have to drill about a thousand feet to reach the sand in which the oil was located, and when they got down that far not a sign of oil had been found, so they decided to torpedo the thing.

"The scheme was to put a lot of nitroglycerin into the well and blow it up. That often made gushers of what at first seemed to be dry holes. They brought a large quantity of the explosive stuff to the farm and stored it in a little shed, expecting to blow up the well the next day. Here's where the hard luck comes in.

"It happened that I had a goat, and this goat got into the shed where the explosive was stored. Boylike, I rushed in to get the goat out, and grandfather and a crowd of the well drillers saw me. They were horror stricken. For a moment nobody could move or even speak. Then grandfather offered his farm to any one who would rescue me. One of the drillers accepted the offer and entered the shed, where he succeeded in getting the goat by the horns just before he had butted into the can of nitroglycerin.

"He flung the goat out through the open door of the shed, and then, catching me in his arms, carried me out in safety to grandfather. The old gentleman insisted on deeding the place over to him then and there. The next day they attempted to torpedo the well and then it was discovered that the can which was supposed to be full of nitroglycerin contained nothing but lard, and the goat died of the shock it had sustained when it was thrown from the shed. Eventually the well turned out to be a gusher."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Quite Definite.

Some people find it difficult to determine just what constitutes a man's income for the purpose of taxation, but a justice of the peace in a New Jersey village was intent upon there being no mistake in his case.

He made his return to the tax assessor in the words: "For the last two years my income has been a little under $800 a year, but in the future it will be more precarious, as the man from whom I borrowed that money (my father-in-law) is now dead."—Brooklyn Life.

Looked Suspicious.

"Milk will quench a fire caused by an exploding lamp, water only spreading the oil," said the professor.

"Well, I tried to quench a fire by putting milk on it once," said the milkman, "but it didn't put the fire out."

"Well, next time you try it be sure you haven't put any water in the milk."—Yonkers Statesman.

SYNOPSIS OF PROPOSED BY-LAW

—ENTITLED—

"A By-Law to authorize borrowing $78,000, by the issue of debentures, to construct a bridge over the Otonabee River from, at or near Dalhousie Street to, at or near Maria Street."

The purpose of the proposed By-law is to enable the Council to construct a bridge over the River Otonabee for vehicular and foot traffic between the Hunter Street bridge and the bridge of the Canadian Pacific Railway from, from at or near Dalhousie Street to, at or near Maria Street.

The amount required and authorized to be raised by the proposed By-law, is the sum of $78,000.

The Debentures to be issued to raise the said sum are to be payable within 30 years from the date of their issue.

The amount to be raised annually for the payment of the debt is the sum of $6,519.40, of which $3,900.00 is for the interest and $2,619.40 is to form a sinking fund for payment of the Debentures at their maturity.

NOTICE

TAKE NOTICE that the foregoing is a synopsis of a proposed By-Law of the Corporation of the City of Peterborough to be submitted to the votes of the electors at the same time and at the same places as the annual election for the Municipal Council and the Deputy Returning Officers appointed to hold the said election shall take the vote and that the third day of January, 1914, at ten o'clock in the forenoon at the City Clerk's Office in the said municipality has been fixed for the appointment of persons to attend at the polling places and at the final summing up of the votes by the Clerk and that if the assent of the electors is obtained to said proposed By-Law, it will be taken into consideration by the Municipal Council of the said Corporation at a meeting thereof to be held after the expiration of one month from the date of the first publication of this notice and that such first publication was made on the 11th day of December, 1913.

TAKE FURTHER NOTICE that a tenant who desires to vote upon said proposed By-law must deliver to the Clerk not later than the tenth day before the day appointed for taking the vote a declaration under the Canada Evidence Act, that he is a tenant whose lease extends for the time for which the debt or liability is to be created, or in which the money to be raised by the proposed By-law is payable, or for at least twenty-one years, and that he has by the lease covenanted to pay all municipal taxes in respect of the property, of which he is tenant other than local improvement rates.

S. R. ARMSTRONG,
Clerk.

A Fire at Kinmount

Kinmount, Dec. 24.—A house owned by Mr. Coffee, and occupied by Mr. F. Gayler, was burned to the ground early this morning. Cause of fire as yet unknown. Not much of contents were saved, as the family were not in at the time. Mr. Gayler had his breakfast there and went to his work at the mills.

To The Electors of The North Ward

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,—

In making an appeal to you for your support in the coming municipal elections, I fully realize the handicap I am under in being a stranger to quite a number of you, even though I have been practising my profession here for seven years. My policy briefly is this:

An honest endeavor to show a dollar's value for every dollar expended, and the most economical and efficient government of the city's affairs. To attain this I have acceded to the wishes of a large number of the ratepayers to offer myself as a candidate for Alderman in the North Ward. Should I find it impossible to see you all personally before election day, I wish to make a most earnest appeal for your vote and influence, and can assure you that I will do my best to fully merit your confidence.

SAID SHE WAS WIDOW—WASN'T AND MARRIAGE IS ANNULLED

John Thomas Baker Regains Single State Again at Hands of Mr. Justice Charbonneau—Today's Judgment in Montreal West by Default

Montreal, Dec. 24.—Justice Charbonneau handed down judgment this afternoon in the long drawn out annulment of marriage case, in which John Thomas Baker sued to have his wedding with Rose Evelina Emily McClay Adams set aside.

The judge ordered the marriage to be annulled, judgment going by default in the absence of the defendant.

The plaintiff claimed that he married defendant January last year, she representing herself to be a widow, but that in April he discovered that she had been married in 1909 to John Adams, who was still alive in the United States.

WATER FAMINE IN MONTREAL, BOILED SNOW AS A BEVERAGE

Two Hundred Thousand People Affected--Bread Supply is Taken From Toronto--Danger From Fire

Montreal, Dec. 26.—The manufacturing and down town sections of the city were without water to-day, owing to a break in the main leading from the intake pipe from the St. Lawrence at Verdun. While the water department of the city has made every effort to repair the break, it is known that a water famine will exist for several days in certain portions of the city.

The average consumption of water in the affected districts is sixty million gallons a day, and the city has only been able to make arrangements for 25,000,000 gallons a day.

The department early issued notice to people to use boiled snow for drinking purposes.

The hospitals and the factories were compelled to buy Laurentian water by the ton from companies handling it.

Most of the Bakers are without water, and prepared this morning to get a supply of bread from Toronto and other cities.

The reserve of two million gallons is being held in a reservoir in case of fire, though it is recognized that a big conflagration would easily account for this supply and leave the city in bad shape to cope with it.

The district affected has a population of 200,000.

Prison for Man Who Would Not Attend Mass

Cadiz, Dec. 26.—Col. Juan Labrador, a Protestant, was sentenced to six months' imprisonment yesterday by a court martial, which heard the charge of refusing to attend mass which was brought against him. Col. Labrador, who belongs to the naval artillery, was tried by the court of which by virtue of his rank he is himself president.

Before taking his seat Col. Labrador protested that it was repellant to his conscience and his dignity as a man to attend the Catholic service. King Alfonso, who ordered the trial, was in a quandary when the case came before him as he desired to satisfy his own conscience, the church and the bench.

BRITISH SAILORS FEAR MASSACRE

Steamer Ludgate Ashore on the African Coast Near Gibraltar

Gibraltar, Dec. 26.—The British steamer Ludgate is ashore at Bolnar Point, opposite Tarifa Point. The Moors opened fire on the tugs which were sent from here to the assistance of the steamer and one sailor was wounded.

The tugs are unable to reach the Ludgate, and the crew of the latter dare not venture on deck. Warships will be sent to shell the Moorish positions, as it is feared that the natives may get aboard the steamer and kill the crew before help can arrive.

THE UNION BANK HAS RECORD YEAR

The Union Bank of Canada, with Head Office in Winnipeg, is the first bank with its head office west of the Great Lakes to report on the year's business. The 49th Annual Statement, just issued, shows that the year which has just closed is the best in the history of the Bank. The net profits amounting to $750,000 or $44,000 more than in 1912. Altogether, the bank has $825,000 available for distribution made up of $75,000 brought forward and the net earnings of $750,000. The was disbursed as follows: Regular dividends and a bonus took $450,000, the rest account absorbed $100,000. Bank premises account and officers pension fund took $60,000, while the sum of $125,000 was set aside to offset the depreciation of securities, leaving $90,000 to be carried forward. Further examination of the report shows that there have been gains in the deposits, these now standing at nearly $64,600,000, or $9,000,000 more than the account of the previous year. The rest account was increased by $100,000, the current loans gained by nearly $3,-500,000, while total assets increased by over $11,000,000, now standing at $80,770,000. Immediately available assets amount to over 34 per cent. of the liabilities. In every respect the report just issued makes a better showing than any other issued in the history of the Bank.

NOW QUARRELING OVER THE BURIAL OF CALUMET DEAD

Striking Miners Resent Offer to Aid in the Burial of Their Children

Calumet, Mich., Dec. 26.—While four separate investigations of Calumet's Christmas tree disaster in which 72 persons, most of them children, were killed, were being made to-day and a dispute was being waged as to who should bury the dead, peaceworkers were at work in a supreme effort to bring about an end to the copper mine strike in this region. Over the bodies of the little ones, the leaders of the peace movement hoped to seek an end to the labor strife which has torn the Calumet copper district for several months.

United in their grief over the snuffing out of so many young lives, the warring factions—mine operators, guards and strike-breakers, and the stricken union miners and their friends—gave no thought to the big labor battle that indirectly is blamed for the most gruesome horror in the history of Calumet. There was still a dispute over whether the offer of the Citizens' Alliance, an organization that has been considered hostile to the strikers, to defray all the burial expenses would be permitted.

Strikers Don't Want Aid.

Officials of the Western Federation of Miners declared that the offer would be spurned.

"We will care for our own dead," was the response of the offer.

The feeling of hostility was not so marked to-day, when it was seen that the citizens of Calumet and other cities in the mine district were in earnest in their efforts to raise funds for the stricken families.

Almost unlimited amounts of money were pledged by mine owners and merchants, who have been opposing the strikers. The committees representing the operators went from house to house to-day confronting the surviving members of families whose dear ones were taken from them in the panic.

THE MEXICAN REBELS HAVE DESTROYED A WHOLE CONVOY

Huerta is Handing Out Free Grain to Prevent Bread Riots in the Capital

Washington, Dec. 26.—Constitutionalist forces destroyed a Federal convoy train 60 miles from San Luis Potosi on December 23, according to State Department advices to-day. Thirty-four Federals were killed and traffic is totally suspended.

Philip McLaughlin and his mother, Americans for whose safety anxiety has been felt, were reported safe in Chihuahua.

The Constitutionalists to-day were believed to be scattering their fire. Rebel movements were reported to be in progress on seven important Mexican cities, including Monterey, Tampico, Mazatlan and Saltillo.

A PUBLIC MEETING.

To Be Held in the Grand Opera House in a Few Days.

In accordance with the suggestion of The Times a public meeting is to be held in the Grand Opera House in a few days. A petition to this effect is now being circulated and will be presented to his worship Mayor Bradburn to-day.

The object of the meeting is for the discussion of public questions that are now before the ratepayers of the city. It will give municipal candidates an opportunity of explaining their views, and will be the means of creating greater public interest in municipal matters.

Sir MacKenzie Bowell.

Belleville, Ont., Dec. 27.—Sir Mackenzie Bowell, former Dominion Premier and for many years a leader in Canadian public life, attains the age of four-score and ten to-day, having been born Dec. 27, 1823. Sir Mackenzie became a member of parliament at the time of the Confederation and in 1878 joined the Cabinet of Sir John Macdonald. During his long career he held numerous cabinet positions and for a period of about one year he was prime minister.

His Seventy-Fifth Birthday.

Fredericton, N.B., Dec. 27.—Sir Frederick E. Barker, Chief Justice of New Brunswick, will receive congratulations to-day on the occasion of his seventy-fifth birthday anniversary. Sir Frederick was born in Sheffield, N.B., in 1838. He became a judge of the supreme court of the Province in 1893 and has been chief justice since 1908.

VIEWED GIFTS; FELL DEAD

Let Out for Four Days to Go Home for Christmas.

Ogden, Utah, Dec. 26.—With their promise to return the fifty pledge, 45 boys and young men serving terms at the Utah State Industrial School were released by Supt. E. G. Gowans after a special ruling by the Board of Trustees. They were all able to reach their homes in time to eat their Christmas dinner. They will not return to the school until December 29th.

SUGGESTION TO HONOR FRANCE AT PANAMA

Move on Foot to Have Memorial to Ferdinand de Lesseps Erected.

Paris, Dec. 26.—The American Ambassador, Myron T. Herrick, has submitted to the State Department at Washington, on the initiative of Perry Belmont, of New York, a proposal that a memorial to Ferdinand de Lesseps be erected on the Isthmus of Panama, on a site selected by the United States Government, as a befitting recognition of France's share in the building of the canal.

EX-CONGRESSMAN DEAD

Accumulated a Fortune in Manufacture of Cigars.

Kingston, N.Y., Dec. 26.—Word has been received here that former Congressman George J. Smith died last night at Atlantic City, where he had gone for his health. He was about 55 years old.

Mr. Smith accumulated a fortune in the manufacture of cigars. He served as chairman of the Republican Committee of Ulster County and as treasurer of the Republican State Committee. In 1903-4 he was representative of the 24th Congressional district.

St. John Woman Had Just Admired Present, When She Collapsed.

St. John, N.B., Dec. 26.—While examining a Christmas gift from her daughter in New York, Mrs. Wm. Terris, of this city, a widow, fell dead Christmas Eve. She had just expressed great pleasure in receiving the remembrance when she fell backwards. Mrs. Terris had seemed in the best of health. Two sons and a daughter survive.

POLICE HAVE FOUND THE BOX THAT CONTAINED CARDINAL'S WILL

But the Will With a Large Sum of Money, Are Alleged to Have Been Stolen

Rome, Dec. 26.—The mysterious ebony box, which was said to have contained the will of the late Cardinal Rampolla and a large sum of money, was found to-day. It is empty. The will and the money presumably were stolen.

The police are making a secret investigation of the affair with the tacit consent of the Vatican. This, taken in conjunction with the fact that the Pope instructed Mgr. de Bisogno, treasurer of the Basilica of St. Peter's, to use the notary's seal on the apartments occupied by the late Cardinal in the Vatican, gives rise to the belief that litigation cannot be avoided.

The Princess Altieri, wife of the Duke of Campobello, nephew of the late Cardinal, who is suspected of having had something to do with the disappearance of the will, has not yet formally accused her husband, from whom she has been separated for several years owing to his dissolute habits. A warrant for his arrest has not been issued, but it is expected that this will be done shortly.

FORTY FOUR PERSONS LYNCHED IN THE UNITED STATES IN 1913

Terrible Record for One Brief Year of Mob Violence and Reign of Murder

Chicago, Ill., Dec. 27.—Only forty-four lynchings, known to be such beyond doubt, have occurred in the United States during the year 1913. The town of Harrisburg, Miss., furnished the nearest approach to a "reign of murder," when two deranged mulatto boys, on September 29, ran amuck and started a riot in the course of which three white men, four negro men and one negro woman met death. The two boys were killed by the citizens, but as they met death while resisting capture the case cannot be strictly classed as one of lynching.

In the forty-four lynchings the victims of all but one were negroes, and all but two of the cases occurred in Southern States. No woman was included among the year's victims.

North Dakota and Montana were the two Northern States in which lynchings occurred. At Ray, N.D., [illegible] Culbertson, a white man, accused of the murder of three persons, was taken from the jail by a mob and hanged. The only other case in a Northern State occurred at [illegible], Mont., in April, when J. C. Collins, a negro, who shot and killed the sheriff and deputy sheriff of the county, was hanged by a mob.

Double lynchings occurred at Blanchard, La., Cornelia, Ga., and Pauls Valley, Okla. At Houston, Miss., two negroes were lynched a day apart, both being accused of complicity in the same crime. At Drew, Miss., a negro was lynched by members of his own race after he had shot and killed two negro women and two negro men.

As in previous years, murders of white persons and crimes or alleged crimes against white women caused most of the summary executions. The murders were in the big majority, however, and the number of cases in which attacks on women were charged showed gratifying decrease over the figures of previous years.

Nineteen of the victims of the forty-four lynchings were accused of the murder of white men. Four were charged with murdering white girls or women. Attempted criminal assault is on record as responsible for nine of the lynchings. Two negroes were lynched for frightening white women, and another for being found concealed under the bed in a woman's room. Two negroes were lynched for shooting or assaulting white men, one for robbery and shooting, one for assisting a negro murderer to escape and another for horse stealing. In one case the crime charged against the victim was not stated.

LOST—24 SHOES OF ASSORTED SIZES.

That being an English Company has some disadvantages, especially during the first week in Canada, was rather forcibly, and a bit painfully, brought to the notice of twelve members of F. Stuart-Whyte's all star English musical comedy company on their first night out of Vancouver.

As is the custom in the old country, the twelve new members, including both sexes, put their shoes outside of their doors before retiring, expecting to find them nicely polished upon their awakening. Five minutes after the time which all the company were called in the morning there was a roar like the coming of cyclone issuing from the various rooms along the hall. Each occupant had discovered the loss of their respective shoes, and after a hurry up call to the office found that the proprietor knew nothing about them. Some fellow boarder, who undoubtedly kept late hours, had noticed the wholesale supply of "boots," and with an eye to business had annexed the entire lot, and was by that time probably on his way to some distant "camp" to claim remuneration for the same.

To make matters worse the train was due in a short time and their trunks had all been taken from the theatre to the depot, and in their stocking feet [illegible] had to make a dash to the depot and get out their stage shoes, old slippers, or [illegible] other foot covering of which they were possessed.

The event has so thoroughly alarmed the thespians that when they have recourse to a hotel [illegible] the male portion of the company [illegible] their hands [illegible] ly gripping [illegible] of their locomotion [illegible] should try [illegible] "boots."

The "Versatiles," which is the name of the company, are billed to appear at the Grand Opera House, New Year's Day, afternoon and evening.

DRUGGED NEEDLE CAUSES NO ALARM NOT IN USE HERE

Federal White Slave Agents Inclined to Theory That Reports From Other Cities Have Been Exaggerated--Giving Little Attention

Buffalo, Dec. 26.—Federal white slave agents and department of justice operatives in Buffalo are paying little or no attention to the poison needle methods of entrapping girls into white slavery, which is being investigated by state and federal authorities and social workers in New York city and Newark, N.J.

Several Buffalo physicians and chemists are interested, however, in the drugs used by the men who have been accused. Samples of drugs are being tested and dogs are being subjected to experiments in an effort to learn the exact effect certain of the drugs produce.

LIST OF POISONS.

Despatches from New York state the drugs used are hyoscine, cocaine and curare. The former, which has recently come into general use as a substitute for morphine in the treatment of acute mania and delirium, is comparatively easy to obtain.

It takes effect much more rapidly than morphine or chloral. One plunge of the needle would be followed by immediate faintness and loss of speech. Unconsciousness would follow quickly. [illegible] is, however, [illegible] A [illegible] one [illegible] would [illegible] death. The dose is [illegible] grain. [illegible] It is a [illegible] drug and comes from South America. It is used by the Indians to poison the heads of arrows so as to conquer their game. A drop of this placed on the end of a needle and jabbed in the skin would cause the victim to become unconscious within two or three minutes, and the effect is over within an hour. There are no after-effects."

This drug is a concoction made in South America by the Indians from the bark of trees boiled down and mixed with the venom of certain poisonous reptiles. It usually excites convulsions. It is this drug that is believed to have been used in the case of Mrs. Marjorie Graff of Brooklyn.

"Every girl reported missing from home will now be a victim of the so-called 'poisonous needle,'" laughed one of the federal inspectors yesterday afternoon. "While it is true that several agents have been made and the drugs used are dangerous, these things always tend to put ideas into the heads of others."

City Chemist Hill further stated he has experimented with curare on dogs in his chemical laboratory in West Eagle street. He said he has jabbed a needle infected with the drug into the skin of a dog. Within ten minutes, the dog became unconscious and remained so for almost an hour, and in some instances for a longer period, according to the amount of the drug on the needle.

Dr. Hill said he believed a human being would experience the same sensation after being stabbed by such a needle.

TAX MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.

Berne, Switzerland, Dec. 26.—All musical instruments are to be subjected to an annual tax in future in the Swiss Canton of Ticino, on the Italian side of the Alps, according to a decision reached to-day by the Cantonal authorities, who are searching for new sources of revenue.

MISHAP TO CZAREVITCH.

Berlin, Dec. 26.—A telegram from St. Petersburg published here states that the Czarevitch has met with another mishap. He collided with a door and seriously injured his maimed leg. The boy's mother swooned. Professor Fedoroff was summoned. These reports have not been confirmed.

The Double Tragedy

Of President Lincoln and the Man Who Had Saved His Life

By MILLARD MALTBIE

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

There are many stories in the life of Abraham Lincoln. Probably no man ever lived who was connected with more romances. But in them all there is something sad. It was a period of war in which these events of which he was the central figure occurred, and only a very few of the romances extracted from war have happy terminations. No one can look upon the portrait of Abraham Lincoln without seeing there the solemnity of those four years when the boys of '61 to '65 were being mowed down like wheat, when every family in the north and in the south were mourners.

There is one event in the life of President Lincoln which, if certain efforts that were made had been unsuccessful, would have left nonexistent his leadership in the great struggle and he would have gone down in history simply as the man whose election brought it on. True, it would have been adorned with the crown of martyrdom, but at the beginning instead of the end of his career.

This is the story of his escape from that earlier attempt to assassinate him which was a failure:

It was in the spring of 1861, when secession sympathizers were plotting against the lines of communication leading from the national capital, that a man, middle aged, muscular and with a determined though tranquil face, appeared in Perrymansville, Md. He was a Pinkerton detective and had been sent there to discover plots to damage railroad property.

When Mr. Lincoln went to Washington for his first inauguration, having passed through New York, he went southward on the Pennsylvania and Baltimore and Ohio railroads. Allan Pinkerton, chief of a Chicago detective bureau, learned through a master machinist of the latter road that a number of secessionists had bound themselves by an oath to assassinate Mr. Lincoln while journeying to the capital. There was but little time to act, for the president elect was about to leave his home. When the assassination plan was conceived it was not known by the conspirators by what route Mr. Lincoln would go to the capital. They were therefore obliged to arrange for an attack upon him at several different points. The Perrymansville branch of the organization pretended to be a cavalry company. Webster, who, though of a quiet exterior, knew how to sham very deep feeling against the Yankee government, at once enrolled himself in this cavalry company.

But getting into the company was far from getting its plans, and unfortunately there was very little time to discover them. Webster relied on his pretended hatred of the government to secure his initiation into the inner circle. His ruse succeeded. He was invited to go to the house of the captain of the company, but not to say a word about the invitation. In a room every window of which was protected against hearing and seeing from the outside he met men from the central point of the conspiracy, Baltimore, and was received as one of the planners of the work to be done.

Seated about a table, the party discussed different methods of assassinating the president elect. Webster, being a new man and of a reserved disposition, listened to the others, only occasionally pointing out some weak spot in a proposition or suggesting a way to obviate it. Before the conference broke up it had been decided to shoot Mr. Lincoln at the depot as he was passing through Baltimore on the 23d of March.

Webster now had the plans in his possession. Taking himself away from the so called cavalry company, he went where he could safely communicate with his chief, Allan Pinkerton. On the night of the 21st of February Pinkerton met Mr. Lincoln at the Continental hotel at Philadelphia and revealed the plot.

The question now arose—how, having the plan, to defeat it. A ruse was adopted. Instead of going on to Washington direct, Mr. Lincoln was taken northwest to Harrisburg. But it was no easy job to turn the gaze of millions of people from the most prominent figure in the land with hosts of newspaper correspondents watching his every movement. The telegraph wires leading out of Harrisburg were secretly grounded, thus cutting off that city from the rest of the world.

Mr. Lincoln now being able to travel without news of his passage being telegraphed from every station, a private train was made up at Harrisburg, and the president elect—it is said that he was disguised—was taken back to Philadelphia and at midnight of the 22d instead of the 23d, as had been arranged, was rushed through Baltimore and early the next morning arrived safe in Washington.

This brief statement of the plan to assassinate the president elect and its defeat is essential to the story—a story of Abraham Lincoln as the central figure and Timothy Webster, whose quick work was instrumental in saving him for the great work he was to accomplish. It would have been well had the president kept Webster by him until his task having been finished, he should return to the [illegible] of private life. But Webster could not have [illegible] of [illegible]. [illegible] there was a continued need for his services. The only railroad thoroughfare between the northern Atlantic states and the capital was continually threatened. Indeed, there was no safety on any line connecting the capital with the rest of the country. Even [illegible] were not safe in [illegible]. The first work done by Webster after foiling the intention of the Baltimore conspirators was to carry some important papers through to the president. Webster found the railroad bridges burned by the secessionists. [illegible]

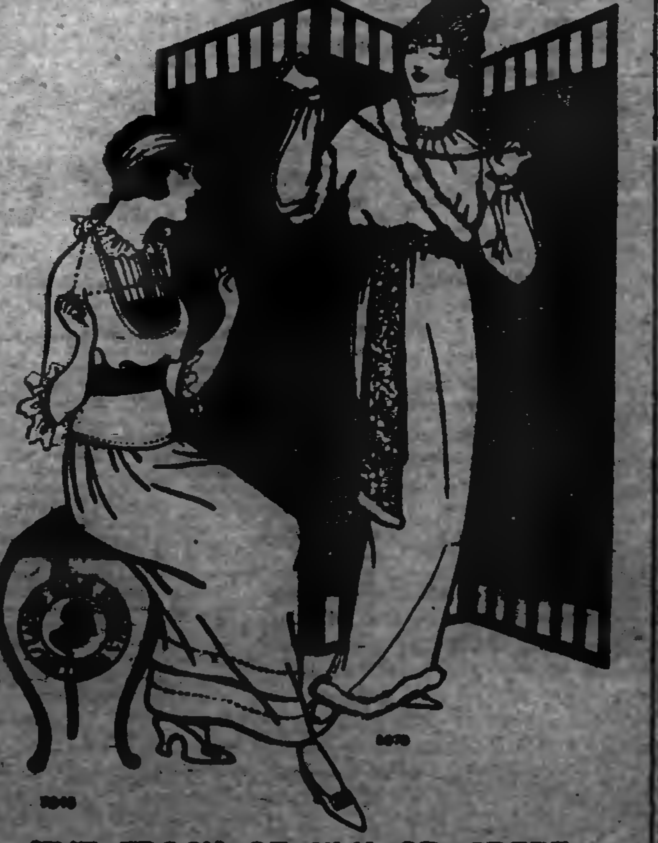
When Lawyers Are Quiet.

One George Wilson, a lawyer, who had much litigation, in some of which he was personally interested as a party or as a trustee, finally passed away, and a short funeral sermon was delivered by a member of the bar in the presence of a few old personal friends. The lawyer told how the old man had been abused and maligned, but that, in fact, he had helped the poor and unfortunate often and was not a bad man.

On returning from the services an old lawyer was asked by another lawyer about the services and what was said. The old lawyer replied, "For once old George could not file a demurrer or motion to any of the proceedings which had taken place."

The lawyer who made the inquiry replied, "Well, this must be the first time George did not move for arrest of judgment."—Green Bag.



THE FROCK OF SILK OR CREPE FOR AFTERNOON AFFAIRS

The wardrobe of the young girl is not complete without at least one afternoon gown. This is equally simple and is fashioned of a supple silk or one of the new silk crepes.

[illegible] crepe is perhaps one of the most effective materials for this purpose and requires very little trimming, as it is decorative in itself. [illegible]

The [illegible] is developed in a dark blue [illegible] crepe with a tiny vest of brightly colored silk and a [illegible] collar of lace. The frock closes in front [illegible] a short [illegible] skirt, which is slightly draped into a deep yoke. This design may be made in size 16 with 4½ yards of 36 inch material.

A rather quaint one sided effect is brought out in No. 5070. The underbodice is of net, and the overdress is of crepe de Chine with a soft blue ground and a contrasting figure, in which there are [illegible] of [illegible] brown and green. The sash is of [illegible] satin. A velvet band of fur outlines the one-sided overblouse.

This dress may be copied in size [illegible] with 3 yards of 42 inch material and 1½ yards of net or lace for the underblouse.

CHRISTMAS APPEAL FOR The Hospital for Sick Children
COLLEGE ST., TORONTO

Dear Mr. Editor:—

Thanks for your kindness in allowing me the privilege of appealing at this Christmas time on behalf of the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto.

It would take more space than you can spare to tell of the good work done for the sick and deformed children of this Province. Let me, however, in a few words, tell you of the progress of the work of the Hospital.

One nurse, six little white beds, a few dollars, a few friends—this was the beginning. The beds have grown to 250, the dollars to thousands, the friends to hundreds. 1875, the first year, 44 in-patients, 67 out-patients; 1912, last year, 1,068 in-patients, 25,537 out-patients; 1875, 1 nurse; 1912, 78 nurses.

Since 1875, thirty-eight years ago, the Hospital has admitted within its walls 21,018 children as in-patients, and 159,231 as out-patients, a total of 180,249, or an average of 4,743 per year. Of the 21,018 in-patients, 15,[illegible] were from Toronto, and 5,[illegible] from other parts of the Province; 10,150 of the total in-patients were cured, and 6,967 were improved.

In the Orthopedic Department last year, of the 1,068 in-patients, 275 were treated for deformities, 25 hip disease, 27 Pott's disease, 2 knock-knees, [illegible] bow-legs, 63 club feet, 3 lateral curvature of the spine, 44 infantile paralysis, 6 wry neck, and 76 tubercular disease of knee, hip and ankle. In 1912, the Surgical Apparatus Shop manufactured 427 appliances for in-patients and out-patients, including ankle braces, spinal braces, hip splints, bow-leg splints, club-foot splints, plaster jackets, etc.

In this Department in 22 years nearly 900 boys and girls have been treated for Club Foot and 850 corrected. Half of these came from places outside of Toronto. Surely we have a fair claim for help from the people of this Province.

Will you, the reader of this letter, help to give crippled children a fair start in life?

Busy dollars are better than idle tears. The sympathy that helps is good, but the Hospital has to have the sympathy that works.

While Christmas Bells are ringing to the glory of Him "Who made the lame to walk and the blind to see," give, give, give, and help the Hospital to help God's little ones, upon whom the heavy hand of affliction has been laid.

Will you please send a dollar, or more, if you can spare it, to Douglas Davidson, the Secretary-Treasurer of the Hospital, or

J. ROSS ROBERTSON,
Chairman of the Trustees, Toronto.

Prof. Mulveney Known All Over the World
Proprietor of World's Famous Tape Worm Exterminator
Tape worm is bred from a parasite. It is of pine shape, having two, four and six suckers. It lays the eggs which are [illegible] together. They develop and form a body, which is the worm. Each section is an individual, having a [illegible] of [illegible]. The worm grows much longer than the bowels where it is located, and sometimes a whole colony of them are found, enough to fill a quart of solid worm, and when put in a bottle of water would apparently fill it. It is the hardest task in the world to destroy this parasite, without doing injury to the individual who may be so unfortunate as to have it, as the parasite clings to the bowels, [illegible] itself from the body of the worm, and remains there to breed another. It is an internal [illegible] and causes its victim to suffer all the symptoms of [illegible] [illegible]. Its [illegible] symptoms are [illegible] [illegible] that it is suffering from some other disease, as nearly every person has different symptoms. Some have been treated for cancer of the bowels, consumption of the bowels, [illegible] of the lungs, chronic dyspepsia, nervous prostration, melancholia, hypochondria, hysteria, inflammation of the bowels, appendicitis, and other complaints, when one or more of these worms were eating their lives away.
Prof. Mulveney has made the discovery to free the victim without injury to the system, destroying the parasite as well as expelling the worm with one dose of medicine without any previous starvation. Visit his office, where he has in his possession the most wonderful collection of these parasites which have been expelled from hundreds of people by his famous remedy, some bottles containing colonies of worms, and anyone seeing them cannot imagine how a person could possibly live with them in his bowels. It is surprising the number of people that have them. Thousands have them and are not aware of the fact. The letters and testimonials the professor has in his possession are enough to convince you of this alarming fact. Some of the most prominent symptoms are ravenous appetite, dizzy spells, headaches, cramps in the bowels, a feeling of something moving in the bowels. Segments may be in evidence at any time, and this is complete proof of the presence of tape worm. There are many other [illegible] of [illegible] which take too long to enumerate. Strange to say some people of strong constitution have very little [illegible].
Prof. Mulveney's world famous Tape Worm Exterminator is safe, sure and harmless, [illegible] starvation, no danger, is not [illegible] to take. One dose nearly always effects a cure. Information free. Phone Park 4858. 167 Dundas street, Toronto.

Our Point of View

The record for high jumping was recently broken by a Peterborough girl. There was a mouse in the room.

—o—

The longer a man lives the more he learns, and this is especially true of municipal campaigns.

—o—

The country editor who receives eggs as pay for subscriptions now feels that he is putting something over on his city brother.

—o—

The handsomest girl in Peterborough, is a reader of this paper, we are proud to state, and she is now reading this item.

—o—

The telegraphic despatches tell of the damage of $250 to a millinery store by fire. Two or three up-to-date hats must have been slightly singed.

—o—

Last Sunday the preachers of Denver impressed the men of their congregations into service shovelling snow off the streets. In a short time the same preachers will be asking for reasons why men do not go to church.

COST OF LIVING HIGHER IN THE STATES.

The Montreal Star asked some of its correspondents in the States to wire concisely "a fair report of the cost of living conditions" in their localities since the Wilson tariff removing the duties on certain produce, went into effect.

Here are extracts from some of the answers:

"New York: Here in New York the high cost of living, generally speaking, has not been reduced a sou marque by the new tariff law. But the money to pay the cost of high living has materially decreased.

"It does not make the difference of a tinkler's ladle what politicians or tariff theorists tell you about this thing. The practical tests count when the dear public has to pay the bills."

The Star's correspondent knows of no better way to tell whether the high cost of living has gone down or not since the enactment of the Wilson tariff than to compare his own bills. He is paying to-day, generally speaking, just the same as he paid six months ago for roast beef, lamb, mutton, beef, tenderloin and sweetbreads. He is paying more for pork, ham and bacon, and more for chickens and fowls.

He is paying a little less for fish, a little less for pickles and vinegar. But since pickles and vinegar are not a steady diet three times a day, the ultimate exchequer is not seriously benefitted.

"Detroit: The high cost of living has not been reduced one iota by the new American tariff. On the contrary, it has risen a little. In isolated instances there have been reductions in the prices of a few articles of food, but these have been more than offset by the high prices of other articles.

"When the new tariff first went into effect Detroit women went to Windsor in large numbers to shop. At first they found a saving worth while. But within a few weeks the unwonted demands made upon the Windsor merchants caused such a shortage of goods upon which the tariff had been lowered or removed that prices automatically rose to the American level, or so nearly to it that it did not pay the Detroiters to go to Windsor for purchases. So the practice has been largely discontinued."

"New Orleans: Based upon the opinion of experts, living costs, locally, have not been affected at all by the tariff, other than through the scarcity of money. Prices of food stuffs have remained about normal, except as a result of the slight inflation recently due to the holiday season, and it was a notable fact that New Orleans club women formally voted against the request from similar bodies in other cities that they form an egg boycott. On the other hand producers and middlemen say their margins of profits are smaller than ever before."

Once more. The corrective to apply in this matter of dear produce, an expense felt keenly in all civilised countries, is for the producer and consumer to co-operate in getting closer together, to have transportation rates made right and to eliminate the too large rake-off of the middlemen.

Headache Over the Eyes? Look for Nasal Catarrh

Catarrh Never Stops in One Place—Often Ruins Health Completely

In this changeable climate it is the little colds that drift into Catarrh. Unless the inflammation is checked it passes rapidly from the throat or nose to the bronchial tubes and then to the lungs. You can't make new lungs any more than you can make new fingers or toes, but you can cure Catarrh.

The surest cure consists of breathing in the healing balsamic essences of CATARRHOZONE, which is simply a medicated vapor, so full of rich curative properties that every trace of Catarrh vanishes before it.

"The soothing piney vapor of Catarrhozone is the most powerful medicine I ever used," writes Mrs. Edmond J. Christine, of Saskatoon. "Every breath drawn through the Inhaler sends a grateful healing through the air passages of the nose and throat. Catarrhozone cured me of frightful headaches over the eyes, relieved me of a stuffy feeling in the nose, and an irritable hacking cough that had been the bane of my life for a year. My general health is greatly improved, my appetite and digestion are considerably better than before. Catarrhozone has been the means of giving me such health as I always desired, but never possessed."

Even though catarrh has a firm hold on you, and affects your throat, nose or ears, you can thoroughly cure it with Catarrhozone. Large size guaranteed, costs $1.00; smaller size 50c.; sample size 25c. All storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

TO THE ELECTORS OF PETERBOROUGH:

Ladies and Gentlemen:—

Last year a large number of ratepayers requested me to be a candidate for Water Commissioner in opposition to Mr. Moore. I not only declined to be a candidate but did what I could to prevent opposition. The Commissioners at that time had law suits on with the contractors where about thirty thousand dollars of the people's money was at stake. Mr. Moore being a lawyer I considered he should be the best posted man on the Commission to fight the contractors and in the interest of the City it would be a mistake to remove him.

This year I have again been waited upon by a large representation of the ratepayers who believe that with my thorough knowledge of all the waters in this district and my many years experience as alderman I should be a capable man for the position. I have consented to be a candidate and my past record in the Council I think is proof that if elected will giv you faithful and honest service.

The taking over of the Hydro-Electric system will require a great deal of time—more than any man who has a large business to attend to can spare. Not being in business I can give all the time required, and if necessary will make a personal inspection of every house in the city and see that rich and poor are treated alike.

I can see no reason, with the large body of ready made reservoirs of the Otonabee River there should be any shortage of water for either household or lawn service, or why there should not be a reduction in the water rates. A good supply of good water is a necessity in every home and should be available for the people at low rate.

To the ratepayers who are now residents of the City and not personally acquainted with me, would say that for a number of years I occupied the position of alderman, and always stood at the head of the poll both as a representative of No. 3 Ward and also after the Ward system was abolished.

General street railway extension and cheap transportation like cheap light and water, should be the goal of our municipal government. When a worker can have his home and garden anywhere, and is not tied to a locality his prospects are greatly improved.

Trusting that the ratepayers wh want good service in the future as have given the past will give me their hearty support.

I am, yours very truly,

J. B. McWILLIAMS

To The Electors of The North Ward

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,—

In making an appeal to you for your support in the coming municipal elections, I fully realize the handicap I am under in being a stranger to quite a number of you, even though I have been practising my profession here for seven years. My policy briefly is this:

An honest endeavor to show a dollar's value for every dollar expended, and the most economical and efficient government of the city's affairs. To attain this I have acceded to the wishes of a large number of the ratepayers in offering myself as a candidate for Alderman in the North Ward. Should I find it impossible to see you all personally before election day, I wish to make a most earnest appeal for your vote and influence, and can assure you that I will deem it my duty to fully merit your confidence.

W. T. HOLLOWAY

To The Electors of Ward One

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,—

A number of ratepayers request me to offer myself as a candidate for the representation of the above Ward in the coming Aldermanic election. I have consented to stand, and ask for your vote and influence.

If elected, I will seek to the utmost of my power, to promote the highest interests of the city.

Yours respectfully,

JOSEPH [illegible]

TEN [illegible]

PUPLIC OPINION

The Times does not hold itself responsible for the opinions of its correspondents.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—An attempt is being made by some parties to saddle our present electric troubles on Mr. Beck. That gentleman said at the first and has continued to say that he will see that Peterborough gets the offer of cheap power. Peterborough can get unlimited power at a price already approved of by the City any day but CAN PETERBOROGH ACCEPT THE OFFER? That's the point. If we cannot accept it except by a huge capital investment that would cripple our borrowing power for all time to come then who is to blame for the mess we are in? This is the point that has been overlooked. And don't you forget it.

Municipal.

THE HIGH COST OF LIVING.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—The Liberal party of Canada has discovered that the cost of living is high. Confronted with an economic condition which they do not understand, they are seeking to use it as a political issue. At the Montreal banquet, when Sir Wilfrid Laurier publicly patched up his peace with Hon. W. S. Fielding, the cost of living was much discussed. Mr. Fielding, denied a place in the House of Commons, is permitted to become an apologist for the Opposition as editor of the Liberal organ in Montreal. As such he will have much to say about the cost of living.

Let Mr. Fielding choose as his circle of readers those hundreds of Ontario farmers whose savings of a lifetime were stolen from them in the wrecking of the Farmers' Bank. Those men feel the pinch of the high cost of living. They were men of means and were ruined by the crooked work which has begun before Mr. Fielding issued the certificate under which the bank was authorized to do business, crooked work of which he as Minister of Finance was warned not once or twice but four and five times. The Farmers Bank scandal lies at the door of the ex-Minister of Finance who now writes about the high cost of living.

The shareholders and depositors in the Farmers' Bank, primarily through the action of Mr. Fielding in the issue of the certificate before the terms of the Bank Act had been complied with, were brought face to face, not with the high cost of living, but with the problem of living at all. A million dollars and more, vanished from the individually slender resources of these men. The increased cost of living finds them that much poorer. To them the cost of living is that much higher than it is to others. Here is a fine field for editor Fielding's efforts. He will advise them that what they need is food free from customs duties. The Borden Government is going to recoup them in part at least for what they lost through the indifference of the Laurier Government.

One of the Victims.

Toronto, Dec. 24th.

SON MAKES SACRIFICE.

New York, Dec. 26.—Elmer E. Tolman, son and business successor of Daniel H. Tolman, a money-lender now serving a term of six months is ready to surrender $500,000 and go out of business to secure a pardon for his father.

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY

Ladies and Gentlemen:

The retirement of Mr. W. H. Hill has decided me to acquiesce with the desire of a number of ratepayers who wish me to be a candidate for a seat on the Utilities Commissioners' Board for 1914:

We all realize that the Board of Water Commissioners is, and needs to be, an efficient, business like organization. For the coming year, the management of the local Hydro-Electric will be an important addition to the duties of the Commissioners.

It will be my aim, if honored with a seat at the board, to co-operate with the present members of that commission, and to assist in continuing the success achieved by the Waterworks department.

I shall also endeavor to help, as far as is in my power, with the organization of the local Hydro-Electric system. Having from the beginning felt the advantages of this system, I shall do my utmost to make this public utility of the greatest possible service to the citizens of the municipality.

The qualification which I present to you in support of my candidature is service in your interest for five years on your board of Aldermen.

On this record I ask your support at the polls.

Respectfully,

ROBERT HICKS.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for Addition to Refinery, Royal Mint, Ottawa, Ont.," will be received at this office until 4.00 P.M., on Wednesday, January 14, 1914, for the above mentioned addition.

Plans, specification and form of contract can be seen and forms of tender obtained at this Department.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made on the printed forms supplied, and signed with their actual signatures, stating their occupations and places of residence. In the case of firms, the actual signature, the nature of the occupation, and place of residence of each member of the firm must be given.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank, payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of Public Works, equal to ten per cent. (10 p.c.) of the amount of the tender, which will be forfeited if the person tendering decline to enter into a contract when called upon to do so, or fail to complete the work contracted for. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By order,
R. C. DESROCHERS,
Secretary.

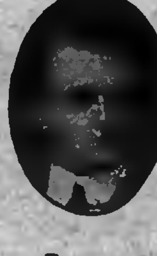
To the Electors of the WEST WARD

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:



Having been requested by a large number of citizens to stand for re-election as Alderman, I again respectfully tender you my services.

I have now represented you for four years, during which time I have made myself thoroughly conversant with the streets, sidewalks, sewers, and other interests in the Ward.

By my services in the past, together with the past four years' experience, I ask you to judge my actions in the future, and confidently solicit your support and influence.

If elected, I again promise to conscientiously look after the interests of the Ward and the City in general, and to give all matters coming before your Council the necessary time and careful consideration, endeavouring to consider all questions in a fair and business-like manner, consistent with economy and general progressiveness.

With season's best wishes, I am,

Your obedient servant,

JOS. J. DUFFUS.

TO THE ELECTORS OF WEST WARD

Gentlemen:

I respectfully solicit your vote and influence to return me as Alderman for your Ward for 1914. As a business man with a successful business experience, I feel that my motto should be "Business methods in all departments of the Council." Efficiency [illegible] should be our guiding principle.

I trust you will favor me with your support and I promise should I be returned that I will do my best to merit your approval.

J. J. HARTLEY

The Workingman's Candidate For

MAYOR

Unanimously Endorsed by the Trades of Labor Council

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY OF PETERBOROUGH:

Ladies and Gentlemen:—At the earnest request of a large number of the ratepayers I have consented to be a candidate for the position of Mayor for the year 1914.

Being born and having lived all my life in Peterborough, and my whole life's savings being invested in Peterborough, I naturally have a deep interest in the welfare and prosperity of the City.

Should I be elected I promise you that I will guard to the very best of my ability, the interests of the ratepayers and will oppose all unnecessary expenditure. I will do my utmost to keep down the ever increasing rate of taxation consistent with needs of a growing City.

I may say that I am in favor of Municipal Ownership, and am in favor of having all city work done by our own people instead of bringing in outsiders to do it.

I will endeavor to see that the ratepayers get value for every dollar that is expended.

I have had considerable experience in municipal matters, having served ten years in the Council and fourteen years on the Board of Education, being Chairman of that Board for two years, I was also Chairman of the Board of Health for several years, so that you will see that I am not without a fair share of experience.

Should you do me the honor to elect me as Mayor of our City I will do my best to serve you to the extent of my ability.

Yours respectfully,

J. J. HARTLEY

Christmas Announcement

WE take pleasure in once more presenting to you our Annual Announcement in connection with the Holiday Trade, and would respectfully call your attention to the fact that we have secured from the leading markets of the world an up-to-date stock of holiday goods, suitable for Christmas and New Year presents, which we are selling at a bargain. This year we are better prepared than ever to cater to the wants of the public.

In both quality and prices, we defy competition. Our expenses are comparatively insignificant as compared with the other larger stores in the city, and the fact that we have not got to look to the profits from our bookstore trade to carry us through, but have a large printing and book manufacturing business as well, in addition to our rapidly expanding newspaper business.

We have made expensive preparations for the Holiday Trade, and invite the public to call and inspect our stock and get our prices before purchasing elsewhere.

Calendars, Handy Booklets, Christmas and Text Cards

We have in Calendars, Booklets, Christmas and Text Cards a stock of the latest designs, and a very large assortment to choose from. Special discounts to parties taking a number.

Fancy Goods

In Fancy Goods, as in every other line, our stock is up-to-date. We can supply you with presents for young and old, rich and poor, wives, husbands and sweethearts. We only give a mere hint here of the articles with which our shelves are loaded:—Brush and Comb Sets, Manicure Sets, Writing Desks, Collar and Cuff Boxes, Glove and Handkerchief Boxes, Ladies' and Gentlemen's Travelling Companions, Jewel Cases, Photo Boxes, Albums, etc., etc. These goods are all new, and made in designs and of material not shown before.

Books for All

We ask an inspection of our stock and prices. We aim to give our customers the best possible value for the money. Dainty Gift Books, Padded Poems, and an endless variety of Cloth and Leather Bound Works. Also Bibles, Hymnals, Children's Illustrated Books, etc.

Games for Young and Old

Our stock in Games is very complete, including Fishpond, Flips, Game of India, Halma, The Century Ride, Lost Heir, Authors, Checkers, Dominoes, Nations, Lotto and all the popular 10 cent games.

New Souvenir Novelties and Small Wares

The following are but a few of the many very desirable articles suitable for Yuletide remembrances: Purses, Card Cases, Burnt Leather Blotters, Pen Wipers and Book Markers; Tea, Crumb, Pin and Ash Trays, Ink Wells, Bon-bon Dishes, Japanese Cups and Saucers, Bread and Butter Plates, Rose Bowls, Vases, Biscuit Jars, all kinds of bric-a-brac, etc.

For Dolls We Lead—Others Follow

We propose to lead this season in the Doll Trade, and are showing Dolls at prices that defy competition. Handsome Kid Dolls, Dressed Dolls in all sizes, Bisque and Composition Dolls, Wax and China Dolls, Rubber Dolls and Dolls that may be used for Fancy Pin [illegible], etc. Dolls from 15c up.

Please Remember

1.—That The Times Bookstore has everything marked close to cost.
2.—We can sell cheaper than any other house. The reason we can afford to do so is, because our expenses are practically nil compared with other concerns.
3.—We are large manufacturers of stationery supplies and books, employing about 40 persons, so that in these lines we have goods at first cost.
4.—We sell to the wholesale trade, who again sell to the bookstores and stationers throughout the country, so that by purchasing direct from us you save, in many cases, the profits of two "middle men."
5.—The Times Bookstore is confident that it can give you satisfaction, and would urge an early inspection of our stock before the rush begins. You only have to select what you want and have the goods put aside for delivery when required.

Soliciting the favor of your esteemed patronage, and wishing you the compliments of the season, we remain,

Very respectfully yours,

Times Bookstore

THE TIMES BUILDING, 141 HUNTER ST.

P. S.—If you have any books to bind at any time, kindly let us hear from you, and we will quote prices and show samples of our work. We make a specialty of printing Wedding, At Home and Calling Cards. A trial order is all we ask. We leave the rest to you.

A MEETING ON SHIPBOARD

It Brought Pain at First and Then Happiness.

By [illegible]

The great steamer [illegible]

[illegible]

Plymouth; he was going on to Cherbourg. The man was the first to speak.

"And am I never to see you again?" he asked.

She shook her head.

"It is very unlikely."

"You mean"—he demanded.

"I mean that it is best not," was the quiet answer, but he bent relentlessly closer.

"Listen," he said desperately. "I know that it is far too soon to speak, that you have known me barely a week, yet, when you talk this way—say that we shall not meet again"—

"You know nothing of me either," broke in the woman wistfully—"who I am or whence I come."

"I know you are the loveliest and sweetest woman in the world," he said, with a stubborn frown. "And that I"—

"No, no," cried she sharply. Then she lifted her head. "I have not told you the whole truth," she said, a quiet dignity in her bearing. "I am indeed Mrs. Haywood, and my husband is dead, but—I am also Russell Bancroft's sister."

"Bancroft's—sister!" He repeated the words incredulously. "Bancroft's sister!" His voice betrayed only an amazed bewilderment, but the woman, sensitively alive to every intonation, heard or fancied a certain [illegible] doorway. The next moment she was gone. The man turned to the rail.

[illegible]

"Bancroft's sister," he said again, his eyes resting vaguely, unseeingly, upon the tumbling waters—"Bancroft's sister."

Below in the narrow little cabin Mrs. Haywood threw herself upon the bunk. The heavy tears lying upon her lashes. She hated him then. She wondered at it in a dull sort of way. Yet who really could wonder that the very name of Russell should be distasteful in his ears? She knew the whole wretched story. The two men had been chums at school, roommates at college. She recollected the tall lad whom Russell had brought home for an occasional visit. Then had come Cortwright's engagement. The cards were out, the wedding dress finished, Russell was to be best man. And then two days before the day set Russell, the trusted, the beloved friend, had fled with his chum's bride, leaving a wild incoherent note in which they pleaded their unconquerable affection.

knowledge of his identity had been a shock. She felt that in honesty she must reveal herself. Yet every day she let pass made the task more difficult. And now what she had most feared had come to pass—he shrank from the sister of his faithless friend.

The woman on the bunk started up in sudden fierceness. It was not fair. What part had she in that old deed? She must see him again—explain. She did not know exactly what to say, but the impulse carried her out into the corridor. It was not late. Perhaps he would join her again on deck.

But as she turned into the passageway which led to his door and lifted her hand to knock a swift realization of what she was about to do swept over her with an intolerable rush of shame. What! Appeal to the pity of any man? For had he truly loved her he would not have let her go.

Dominated by this reasoning, she turned and fairly ran back to her cabin. There, with bowed head, motionless save for soft, catching breaths, she waited until the steward came to call her.

It looked very cheerless in the big room. A few persons were clustered about one end of a long table. She cast a quick glance about her, hardly knowing for what she hoped, but he was not there. The steward brought eggs and coffee, and she managed a cup. Then she went on deck.

The rain was dripping dismally. Here and there a light glimmered faintly through the thick mist. So that was Plymouth. The gangplank leading to the tender was steep and slippery. People moved through the fog like disembodied spirits. It was all very gloomy and very forlorn.

The gangplank was pulled in. The band, huddled into a damp group on the steamer's deck, broke forth with a lively air. A man standing near by laughed.

"If one has to be awake at such an hour it is a comfort to know that no one else can sleep either," he observed grimly.

"It would be hard to sleep through that racket," assented his companion.

At the voice she started violently. Was it—could it be—Cortwright? For a moment she scarcely breathed, thrilled between ecstasy and fear. Then a dark figure detached itself from the fog and came to her.

"It is you," said the voice, and this time unmistakably it was Cortwright's. "I wasn't sure at first."

"But you!" gasped the woman. "Your ship—Cherbourg?"

"Hang Cherbourg!" said he cheerfully. Then his voice dropped.

"Do you think that you were very kind to me awhile back?" he asked gravely. "Wasn't it rather mean to spring a surprise of that sort on a man and then run before he could recover?"

"Oh!" expostulated she weakly. This was a new view of the matter.

"I thought it was because you didn't care," he went on. "You know, you wouldn't wait, wouldn't give me a chance to speak. I thought—perhaps—anyway, I felt mighty blue when I went below. Then I found—this." She could just glimpse the tiny square of lawn that he showed her. "It lay on the carpet near my door, and it told me—it told me— Ah, sweetheart," he added, a sudden subdued exultation ringing through his tone, "that gave me the courage to come. It told me that perhaps you felt sorry for me; that perhaps you, too, cared—just a little bit—that you might listen to me. Was I wrong, dear? Will you marry me?"

The mist was drifting out to sea. The clouds had broken, and in the east appeared a glow of crimson and gold. The sun was rising in all its splendor and majesty. The rain was over. For a moment the woman stood with wide, glad eyes at the newborn day; then she turned to meet the man's eager entreaty.

"I will marry you whenever you like," she said.

The Churchwarden Pipe.

Of the development of the clay pipe the London Chronicle remarks: "In their various shapes and sizes the clay pipes of different centuries curiously illustrate the changes in custom and thought. [illegible] William III., but also of the way smoking was increasing among men of higher social status. The yard long clay would be used only by men of position whose ease and smoke were not to be suddenly and rudely disturbed. The laborer had his short "cutty," which he could carry in his waistcoat pocket, but the long clay was meet only for such dignitaries as churchwardens, so that the pipe took the name of its user."

How Mussels Move.

The general impression is that mussels do not move; they fasten themselves to certain objects or they lie in the mud and sand at the bottom of the water and there they pass their existence. In proof of this the fact is adduced that mussels are at times buried under the sandy deposit when a rush of water carries a lot of soil with it. A naturalist who has devoted much time to the study of these creatures says that mussels do move slowly and the movement is accomplished in the following manner: The mussel opens its shell and projects its body to a certain extent from its projecting case. Then it exerts some force whereby it keeps the shell above the soil and uses its body to propel itself along the bottom just in the same way as a land snail glides over the ground. If the sand is examined after the mussel has taken one of these strolls it will be easy to see two parallel lines caused by the edges of the shell touching the ground.

Romance of a Shadow.

It is hard to believe that a shadow is probably the origin of all astronomical, geometrical and geographical science. The first man who fixed his staff perpendicularly in the ground and measured its shadow was the earliest computer of time, and the Arab of today who plants his spear in the sand and marks where the shadow falls is his direct descendant. It is from the shadow of a gnomon that the early Egyptians told the length of the year. It is from the shadow of a gnomon that the inhabitants of upper Egypt still measure the hours of work for a water wheel. In this case the gnomon is a durra stalk supported on forked uprights and points north and south. East and west are pegs in the ground evenly marking the space of earth between sunrise and sunset. In a land of constant sunshine a shadow was the primitive chronometer. It was also the primitive footrule.—London T. P.'s Weekly.

Man With Green Hair.

"Copper is scarce," said a broker, "but there is still enough of it left to turn the copper worker's hair green."

"His hair green?"

"Precisely. In those copper districts where the ore is of a low grade it is roasted in open furnaces to refine it and make it more marketable. A gas emanates from the furnaces that turns the fireman's hair a bright green, this arsenic green that the fireman's hair takes on.

"So if you ever see a man with green hair you can say, à la Sherlock Holmes:

"'There, my dear Watson, is a copper furnace tender.'"

"Clipping Sunday."

At Painswick, in Gloucestershire, the Sunday following Sept. 8 is called by the curious name of "Clipping Sunday" and connected with a quaint custom. In the churchyard are ninety-nine yew trees, and tradition says that all attempts to complete the hundred by planting another yew have failed because the newcomer invariably dies. Every year [illegible] the feast of the Nativity of Our Lady—Sept. 8—these mystic yews are clipped, and the Sunday "in the octave" thus becomes "Clipping Sunday." After service there is a procession of parishioners around the churchyard, and then all join hands and form a ring round the church. Finally they gather at the foot of a flight of steps leading to the chancel door, from which a sermon is preached.—London Chronicle.

Diamonds.

Diamonds were first brought to Europe from the east, where the mines of Golconda were the first known. Golconda, now in ruins, was once a celebrated diamond mart. The mines of Brazil were discovered in [illegible] and for a long time furnished most of the diamonds of commerce. [illegible] Most of the diamonds of the world are now furnished by the South African fields.—[illegible]

DARING WORK IN A FOG.

Clever Seamanship of a Captain in a Landlocked Harbor.

"The greatest piece of seamanship I ever saw," said a traveler, "was on a trip to Halifax. It was a marvel, and this is how it happened.

"We were steaming along about twelve hours out from our destination one summer afternoon. It had been clear all day, and the sea was beautifully blue, but about 4 o'clock the fog began to shut down—one of those swift, dense fogs that come on that coast and shroud a boat from sight in less time than it takes to tell of it. Of course the fog whistles began to blow, and many of the passengers got nervous under the strain of its continued bellowing.

"After dinner I went up on the bridge and was permitted to stay. The captain would not enter into any conversation—that is, I could not talk to him, but in his restless pacing up and down the bridge he would frequently make a remark to me. It went on that way for hours, the fog as thick as steam and the whistle reiterating its mournful warning.

"At length the captain gave a sharp order. 'Two points northwest by north,' he said. 'No, a little more—that's right,' he finished as his command was executed. I was bewildered, and my face must have shown it as he passed me, for he vouchsafed the explanation that he wanted to pass within a few hundred feet of a certain whistling buoy near the harbor. I said nothing, but I did not understand. Why, the night was so thick that it was hard work to see from the bridge to the rail, and what could he mean by making a buoy?

"On and on we went, and always the fog seemed to me thicker. I could not sleep, and most of the night I was on the bridge. When it must have been nearly morning a new whistling began to sound on our starboard bow, as nearly as I could judge. It was a fearful fog siren, and kept getting nearer and nearer. We had stopped whistling, and the passengers were terribly frightened. I looked at one naval officer who stood with me on the bridge, and his face was like a dead man's. Mine must have been also.

"Then, just as it seemed that some giant steamship must strike us, so close was the whistling, the fog lifted like a veil, and there, not 150 feet away, was the buoy that the captain had mentioned.

"Almost at once the fog closed down again; but, do you know, he took us past two warships, into the landlocked harbor and up to the dock in it. It was magnificent, and, though we really could not put our admiration in tangible form, we got together and gave him a gold watch on the return voyage as a little souvenir."—New York Post.

Learn to Obey.

Learn to obey! By obedience I do not mean a merely outward submission to outward force and authority, but the voluntary subordination of one's own will under the will of a better and higher intelligence. He who has not learned to do this in childhood will have great difficulty in learning it in later life; he will rarely get beyond the deplorable and unhappy state that vacillates between outward submission and uproarious rebellion. No greater wrong can be done to childhood than the one caused by our desire to spare it the necessity of obeying. Whoever conceives the duty of the educator to consist in giving in to all desires of the child, in gratifying all its wishes, makes himself guilty of the gravest sin toward his child. He denies it what, in view of its future mission, it cannot afford to lose—namely, the exercise in voluntarily subordinating its own will under necessity, be it a natural or a social one.—Professor F. Paulsen, University of Berlin, in Educational Review.

Danced in Court.

An unusual scene was once witnessed in a French law court, the civil tribunal at Nantes. The proprietor of a local theater had engaged a young lady dancer, whose performances at rehearsals did not come up to his expectations. He therefore would not let her appear, and the fair dancer took action against him for breach of contract. The defendant alleged that she had not even learned the first steps of her art, and, [illegible] a piano [illegible], the judge determined to decide for himself. A space was accordingly forthwith cleared on the floor of the court, and to the piano's accompaniment the young lady duly went through her steps and pirouettings. In the result the judge felt justified in certifying that she was quite an expert dancer and decided the case in her favor. Henceforth she advertised herself as the only dancer in the country with a legal certificate of proficiency.—London Tit-Bits.

No Feeling.

the route through Havre de Grace, where a long bridge was destroyed, he was rowed across the river and hired a wagon to take him onward. He was obliged to pass through Perrymansville, and the wagon was stopped by the cavalry company in which Webster had enlisted for a spy. He was recognized, but fortunately for him the fact that he had revealed their plot to the government was not known to them.

Webster traveled on in company with an Englishman whose confidence he won, and the man revealed to him that he was bearing dispatches to southern sympathizers in Washington. When the two reached the environs of the capital, Webster, meeting one whom he knew to be a Union man, sent word by him to the picket guard that he wished them to arrest both him and his companion. This was done, but as soon as they were separated Webster was released and went to the White House. There he was at once admitted to Mr. Lincoln and, taking off his coat and vest, ripped open the lining and produced the dispatches. They and those found on the Englishman were of vital importance. Possibly the latter were the more important, since they revealed that the president was living in a city where numbers of the enemy's sympathizers were plotting for the capture of the capital.

Webster, though he did not serve Mr. Lincoln personally, accomplished a great work for him as president. The spy played a double game. He would go south as a southern man and enter the service of the government for the purpose of giving them information of the designs of the Federal government. There he pretended to be a Federal spy when he was really a Confederate spy. He was from the first a Pinkerton detective, and when Pinkerton organized the military secret service bureau of the United States government Webster entered that service and worked for the pay he received in it. Ordinarily it is hard to tell which side a spy playing this double game is really working for. But Webster in the beginning saved the life of the president elect and continued to take him important information, while he had only to give the Confederacy information that was untrue or would not avail it.

This being a story of Mr. Lincoln rather than Webster, the many remarkable romances in the life of the latter during his term of service must be passed over without even a catalogue of them. Finally, though suffering from rheumatism, he started south in company with a Miss Lewis, who was in his confidence. The trip was to be his last incursion into the south. Unfortunately he was laid up a long while in Richmond with rheumatism. Miss Lewis nursed him. During this time nothing was heard from him at Washington, and the president and others who knew of his mission became anxious about him. It was determined to send two members of the secret service force south to look for him.

The two men went to Richmond. They learned that Webster was lying ill at a hotel and blundered by going directly to see him without communicating with him. In his room they found a Confederate and were rash enough to hand him a letter from Allan Pinkerton which, they said, came from a friend of his in Baltimore. They came again and unfortunately met an officer from the provost marshal's office. This meeting led to their examination. They were identified by a person who knew them, and all was lost.

When the news came to General McClellan's headquarters that the two men had been arrested as spies and had implicated Webster, Allan Pinkerton hurried to Washington to see Mr. Lincoln and discover if anything could be done to save them. Singularly enough, Webster had saved Lincoln's life, and now Lincoln was called upon to save Webster's life.

Mr. Lincoln called a special meeting of the cabinet to devise means to save the spies' lives. Nothing could be done except to communicate through the secretary of war calling the attention of the authorities at Richmond to the fact that the United States government had always been lenient to Confederate spies and had never tried or sentenced to death any one caught carrying information. The message closed with a threat of inaugurating a different code in future if the spies were executed.

Neither the fact pointed out nor the threat availed. Webster was hanged, Miss Lewis was imprisoned for a year, and the two men who caused the tragedy were imprisoned for twenty-two months. It is not probable that they would have escaped had they not implicated Webster. But it must be remembered that they had only indirectly been spies.

The last event of similarity between Mr. Lincoln and Webster occurred three years later, when Mr. Lincoln was again the object of the assassin's bullet. The double tragedy contains two singular coincidences. Both died for the cause, though neither of them as a soldier, and both died tragic deaths, one being hanged for a spy, the other murdered.

Her Correction.

Two young women were talking over their restaurant luncheon the other day about the quality of a certain prima donna's voice.

"Oh, she can sing," cried one of them enthusiastically. "She certainly can sing. Music like that would coax Apollo from his lyre."

The other girl frowned and looked troubled. After a slight pause she spoke in gentle reproof.

"I don't want to correct you, dear," she said. "But don't you think that word is usually pronounced 'lah'? It is spelled l-y-r-e, [illegible]."—Philadelphia Ledger.

When Appetite Fails And Digestion is Bad

THERE IS DANGER AHEAD FOR THE MAN THAT NEGLECTS NATURE'S WARNING.

Dyspepsia Tendencies are Serious and Should be Treated Accordingly.

There is a strong moral in the statement of James Behrum of Pleasant street, Dartmouth, N.S. Like thousands of people, he was failing in health because his stomach and digestive organs were out of repair. His vitality was slipping away; he was losing ground every day.

"I could not have held on much long. I was wasting away simply because no remedy I used gave tone and strength to my stomach. The vital forces of my system seemed fixed. I was advised to try Dr. Hamilton's Pills. What hidden weakness they searched out I don't know but in a miraculous way they have made a new man of me. My stomach troubles are cured, rich blood now runs through my veins—clear skin and unmistakable evidences of health and vigor I feel every day. Dr. Hamilton's Pills have certainly mastered the secret of curing the sickly emaciated man and I strongly urge everyone in failing or lost health to use this grand remedy."

Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut, are purely vegetable—25c. per box, five for $1.00, all druggists and storekeepers, or postpaid from the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Ont.

Sergt. Adams Convalescent

Enquiries made by The Times yesterday at the residence of Sergt. R. Adams, elicited the gratifying intelligence that this popular policeman is convalescent after an operation in the Toronto Hospital. Sergt. Adams has left the hospital and is now the guest of his brother-in-law in Toronto. He is expected home in a few days.

Peterborough Was Asleep.

Last night the city of Peterborough seemed to be as fast in the grip of the arms of Morpheus as are Lindsay and Port Hope. For hours not a street car wheel turned. The trouble was anchor ice at the dam.

It was learned last night that all the juice which was used in the city last night came from Healey Falls, the power house here all being shut down.

Collector Phelan Home.

Collector of Inland Revenue H. Phelan returned home from a business trip to Chicago Christmas morning. While in the Windy City he stopped at the Great Northern Hotel. He was somewhat surprised, on his return, to hear the merry tinkle of the sleigh bells as Chicago was a mass of mud. He was accompanied home by his brother, Mr. Walter Phelan, of Pittsburgh, Pa.

An Intoxicated Indian.

Richard Cornelius, an Indian, was yesterday charged with having been drunk. When asked by the magistrate "How much liquor does it take to make an Indian drunk?" replied "I don't know, but it took a good deal to get me drunk." Richard was also charged with having smashed the steel bunk in the police court. He was fined $5 for being drunk and assessed $10 for damages to the cell.

Thought He Was on th Blacklist

Joseph Reynolds, at yesterday's police court was greeted with the words, "It's a long time since you've been here and I'm sorry to see you back." He was arrested whilst in company with a young lady by P.C. Mills, who thought Reynolds was on the black list and under the influence of drink. He was found, however, to have been off the list for a month. Reynolds said he had only had four or five lagers. He was discharged.

A Happy Family Gathering.

A pretty function was held at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. H. Greene, 262 Perry street, when a reception of their sons and daughters, with their respective families were present. Some thirty persons were present, among them being Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Braund and family; Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Greene and family; Mrs. C. S. Greene and son, Carlos; Mr. Roy Bacon of Toronto, Miss M. Bacon, city, Mr. and Mrs. A. Wilde, of Havelock, and Miss Hattie Gamble.

Improvements to Steamer Manita.

The good ship Manita is undergoing a radical improvement at McDonald's Point, near the Wolfe street wharf. This fine steamer whose boilers and engines are practically as good as new is having a new hull added. Messrs. J. W. Bisley & Sons, the local shipwrights, with a staff of employes, is doing the renovation work. White oak sturdy ribs are now in place, somewhat resembling the massive ribs of a whale, over which, later, will be placed the sheathing oak planks.

Fate's Cynical Destiny.

By a cynical destiny of fate, the old saying that "men must work and women must weep" was perpetuated and displayed in a moving picture house here yesterday. The picture in question was a motion photo of the obsequies of a recent suffragette in England who lost her life whilst committing an outrage. On each side of a street were shown women weeping. On the hearse was the undertaker engaged in his work. On his face was plainly shown a broad grin.

DEATHS AND FUNERALS

Mrs. Winch Breaks a Leg.

We regret to say that on Wednesday evening as Mrs. H. C. Winch, 81 Crescent street, was trying to get a car on Lock street, she slipped and fell, breaking her right leg. She was removed to her home and medical aid was summoned and she has since been removed to Nicholls Hospital, where the fracture which proved to be a trifle below the hip joint was reduced. Mrs. Winch's many friends will hope for her speedy recovery.

Mrs. Hugh Robertson.

Alma Cox, wife of Mr. Hugh Robertson, 207 Reid street, passed away on Christmas night at the age of 49 years. Mrs. Robertson had not been well for some time.

She is survived by her husband and her father and mother.

The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon to [illegible] cemetery, Lakefield. Service will be held at the late residence at 1.30.

JOHN GALT, President.
G. H. BALFOUR, General Manager.

The Directors have pleasure in presenting the Report showing the result of the Bank's business for the year ended 29th November, 1913.

The new Bank Act, as revised, went into force on July 1st. You will notice several changes in the form of our statement. Under Sec. 56 of the new Act, you are required at this meeting to appoint Auditors for the Bank, and to [illegible] the amount of their remuneration.

A new set of By-laws will be submitted to you for approval and adoption if thought advisable. It will be necessary to change the date of our Annual Meeting from December to January in order that the Auditors may have sufficient time in which to complete their work.

Your Directors wish to place on record their appreciation of the excellent service, helpful guidance and valuable work by the Bank's Committee in London, England.

It is with the deepest regret the Directors have to record the death of the Honorary President, the Honorable John Sharples. Mr. Sharples was for many years a Director, and for ten years the honored and esteemed President of this Bank. [illegible]

Mr. Wm. Price, of Quebec, was elected Honorary President, and Mr. Geo. H. Thomson [illegible] as Vice-President.

The vacancy on the Board has been filled by the election of Mr. [illegible] [illegible]

The President, Mr. John Galt, moved that the Report be adopted and printed for distribution among the Shareholders and addressed the Meeting as follows:

THE PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

In moving the adoption of the Directors' Report, I have an opportunity of placing before our Shareholders a review of general conditions in Canada as they present themselves to us. The financial statement will be dealt with later by the General Manager. I shall only say that this statement is satisfactory as it shows steady progress and also indicates the conservative policy, which, in my judgment, is characteristic of the management of the Bank.

The year 1913 has been a trying one both for borrower and lender. There has been a general feeling of uneasiness which has caused financiers to carry an unusually large proportion of their funds in a liquid form. This has curtailed the loaning power of all the Banks and has checked the encouragement of new business, but we have been careful to see that our customers have had the money necessary to carry on their legitimate trade, and I do not think we have given any of them reason to complain.

The capital available for investment in new fixed forms such as railways, canals, city and farm buildings, etc., is, of course, limited. Of late years it has been pretty well absorbed. It is clear that when the supply is exhausted natural causes operate to check it, expenditure in fixed forms must be curtailed. This point seems to have been reached, and Canada will have to mark time until confidence is restored and until the older countries, from whom we draw much of our capital, are in a position to again invest their savings and profits. The natural resources of Canada are so vast and so attractive that the capital necessary for their development will undoubtedly be forthcoming when financial conditions become more settled.

The causes underlying the feeling of anxiety to which I have referred were world-wide, and, whilst some of them are now removed, we still feel that caution is advisable and that strictest economy in both public and private affairs is necessary.

Speculation in real estate is over for the present, but the demand for building sites must continue in a country where the population is steadily increasing, and holders of such property should not be apprehensive of this class of investment. That the inability of speculators to turn over their property has had so little effect on the general business of the country is largely due to the conservative and prudent action of Canadian Banks, for they have consistently discouraged and refused to finance speculative land operations.

CROP OF 1913.

The statistics which are at our command will be furnished by the Superintendents in their reports on the several Provinces. I may say, speaking generally, that the crop results have been satisfactory. In the three great wheat growing Provinces this has been a banner year. Not only has the yield been large, but the average quality has never been equalled, and the cost of harvesting has been unusually low owing to the magnificent weather we have enjoyed. This has, to some extent, offset the low prices which prevailed. Providence has indeed been kind to us, and that, too, at a time when we needed it most. The railways have done splendid work in handling the crop, and we have had few complaints of shortage of cars. We cannot, with our present facilities, expect much more wheat to be delivered at lake ports before the close of navigation than has been delivered this year, and the need of interior storage for our grain will be urgent for some time to come.

MIXED FARMING.

There is a marked increase in the number of livestock. Farmers are becoming more fully alive to the advantages they derive from this source and are realizing that their borrowing credit is greatly enhanced with their Bankers if they can show a good proportion of cattle in their assets, and Banks should look with favor on loans for the purchase and handling of livestock.

BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Trade conditions in British Columbia have not been as bright during the year as we could wish. Conditions in the lumber trade have been unsatisfactory, and coal strikes on Vancouver Island, which have lasted for months, have thrown a great many men out of employment.

The fishing industry has had a good year, and the recent revision of the United States tariff, by which fish now enter that country free, will be of advantage to the trade.

The mining industry has yielded satisfactory returns, a very large increase in the [illegible] having taken place over the preceding year.

The fruit crop for 1913 has been a [illegible] [illegible] of railroad work, will add to the number of unemployed during the coming winter.

Large harbor improvements have been undertaken at Victoria which have improved conditions to some extent.

In Eastern Canada, trade conditions have been good, and the crop results have been most gratifying.

PROVINCE OF ONTARIO.

Crops have been of a good average and we have again to report a prosperous year.

PROVINCE OF QUEBEC.

Along both shores of the St. Lawrence and in the Eastern Townships, conditions were favorable, and abundant crops were harvested in good order.

The lumber trade has experienced a good year, and the removal of the United States duty on lumber should stimulate trade.

MARITIME PROVINCES.

Weather conditions have been satisfactory with the result that all crops have been above the average. The fishing industry has also experienced another profitable year.

GENERAL.

GOOD ROADS.—The question of good roads is of paramount importance, and there yet remains a great deal to be done. We are glad to be able to report that the Legislatures of the various Provinces are giving their attention to this important question.

IMMIGRATION.—Reports continue to be of a satisfactory nature. Approximately 400,000 people have entered Canada during the year ending September, 1913. The immigration authorities report favorably on the class of these new settlers, and estimate them to be worth $1,000 per capita to Canada.

Whilst we believe trade conditions to be on a sound basis, and the financial position of Canada in a most gratifying condition, we still consider that it is the duty of this Bank to exercise caution and to discourage any attempts to undertake large commitments whilst conditions in Europe are readjusting themselves after the recent disturbance.

FINANCING OF MUNICIPALITIES.

From our point of view it is very desirable that the Provincial Governments should take action in regard to monies required for municipal expenditure. A commission should pass on all issues after expert examination of proposed expenditures. If these issues carried the guarantee of the Province and were sold under its auspices they would have a greatly enhanced value, and the saving to the community would be very large, both in the difference of value and in the supervision of expenditure exercised by the Government. Under the present system the initial financing falls upon the Banks because they have to await the sale of debentures, the disposition of which, in turn, often depends upon the ability and knowledge of men who have had little or no experience in financial operations, and who make their sales in a haphazard instead of a systematic manner. In this way sometimes, for indefinite periods, large sums are tied up which should be employed in the general financial operations of the community.

The proposed legislation by the Province of Saskatchewan along these lines is, in my judgment, likely to prove of benefit.

NEW UNITED STATES TARIFF.

The recent reduction in the United States tariff should result in obtaining a larger market for our products.

In conclusion, let me say that the figures which have been laid before you must be particularly gratifying to our Shareholders. We are now a large institution, and our growth and strength illustrate, to some extent, the general development of Canada. With your help we shall do our best to keep pace with this growth and to build up a great Bank, which will be in touch with the needs of the country, and a credit to the whole Dominion.

GENERAL MANAGER'S ADDRESS.

The General Manager, Mr. G. H. Balfour, addressed the meeting as follows:—

Gentlemen,—Owing largely to the unsettled financial conditions which have obtained throughout the whole world during the year under review, business has not been normal and has caused bankers much anxiety. Conservative administration and caution have been adhered to, and whilst supplying our customers with their legitimate requirements, we have aimed at maintaining, at all times, a strong financial position by so [illegible] liquid or immediately available funds [illegible].

The early marketing of the Western grain crops has had an important bearing upon [illegible] [illegible] slightly over 15 per cent. on the paid-up capital.

In the opinion of the Directors the result has been deemed sufficiently satisfactory to justify the declaration of a bonus of 1 per cent. in addition to the regular dividend of 8 per cent. (2 per cent. quarterly). This bonus will be paid on the 1st March next to Shareholders of record as on February 14th, 1914.

Owing to the prevailing monetary conditions, prices of securities generally have declined during the year and it has been considered advisable to set aside the sum of $125,000, out of Profits, to a Special Reserve Account, to meet the depreciation in market values of stocks, bonds and debentures owned by the Bank as an investment.

$100,000 has been added to Rest Account, which now stands at $3,400,000.

$50,000 has been written off Bank Premises.

The usual contribution of $10,000 has been made to the Officers' Pension Fund.

$90,579.03 is carried to the new Profit and Loss Account, as against $75,082.76 brought forward from 1912.

Some changes will be observed in the classification of figures in the Balance Sheet; these were necessary to comply with the provisions under the revised Bank Act.

Deposits have increased by $3,500,000, which, considering financial conditions, is looked upon as very satisfactory. They now amount to $64,563,285.14.

Our immediate available assets are $27,655,000, or 34.24% per cent. to liabilities to the public.

Current Loans in Canada have increased by $1,750,000 and now amount to $46,798,000.

Loans and discounts outside of Canada total $1,640,672 as against $779,000 last year.

Real Estate and other Bank Premises has been reduced by $103,000. Property and buildings acquired for the use of the Bank are now at once charged to Bank Premises.

Mortgages on Real Estate sold by the Bank are larger by $47,000 than a year ago, and overdue debts show an increase of $45,000.

In agricultural districts it is difficult to impress upon the farmer the necessity of attending promptly to his paper at its maturity, especially when weather conditions are favorable to plowing and other agricultural pursuits. Bank Premises have increased $300,000. It is found necessary to erect a number of buildings every year for our own occupation, where suitable premises cannot be leased, every effort being made to provide comfortable accommodation for members of the staff at country branches.

The total assets of the Bank are now over $80,000,000, as against $81,000,000 in 1912, showing a substantial expansion in the growth of the Institution during the year.

PROGRESS OF THE BANK.

During the year 8 Branches were closed in Ontario.

The total number of Branches and Agencies is now 313, as follows:—Alberta, 48; British Columbia, 29; Manitoba, 56; Saskatchewan, 96; Ontario, 60; Quebec, 13; Maritime Provinces, 8; London, Eng., 1.

Since closing of the year, we have also opened a West End Branch in London, Eng., in the Haymarket, corner of Panton street, and at Smithers, B.C.

In connection with the very satisfactory manner in which the railway companies have carried out the grain from the Western Provinces this year, it may be interesting for you to know that up to December 1st the following quantities of grain have passed Winnipeg for the head of the Great Lakes, namely, 90,000,000 bushels wheat, 33,100,000 bushels oats, 7,100,000 bushels barley, and 5,000,000 bushels flax.

Before sitting down, I desire to bear testimony to the efficiency and loyalty of the Staff, not only of the Executive Officers, but the whole Staff of the Bank, to whose energy and ability much of the success which has attended the operations of the past year, is due.

Mr. Geo. H. Thomson, the Vice-President, seconded the adoption of the Report, which was carried.

AUDITORS.

Messrs. T. Harry Webb, C.A., E. S. Read, C.A., and G. E. Hogan, C.A., were elected Auditors of the Bank. The ballot was unanimous and these gentlemen were declared elected.

It was moved by Hon. W. H. Montague, P.C., seconded by Mr. E. E. Riley, of Calgary, that the thanks of the Shareholders are hereby tendered to the Honorary President, President, Vice-Presidents and the Directors of the Bank for their valuable services during the year.—Carried.

Mr. G. H. Balfour, General Manager, Mr. H. B. Shaw, [illegible] [illegible], and Mr. H. J. Pugh, of [illegible], replied briefly on behalf of the Staff.

The Scrutineers reported the following gentlemen elected as Directors for the ensuing year: Messrs. Wm. Price, John Galt, R. T. Riley, Geo. H. Thomson, E. L. Drewry, F. E. Kenaston, W. R. Allan, [illegible] [illegible]

SIGNS POINT NOW TO AN ELECTION AFTER SESSION

Failure of Senate to Concur in Redistribution Will Not Delay a General Appeal to the People

Ottawa, Dec. 27.—Will the coming session of the twelfth parliament be its last?

A good many people are saying so. Much of course will depend upon the developments of the session, but several things can already be stated with considerable confidence. One is that the estimates for the coming year will present that dropsical appearance that the estimates always assume on the eve of a general election. Applications are pouring in for all kinds of expenditures and they are all of them being granted to the extent of being given a place in the estimates. This complacency will be explained in part by the financial stringency which prompts the government to distribute public money with a lavish hand in many parts of the Dominion.

Nevertheless, we know by experience that when the estimates are very large the time is at hand for an appeal to the people. Whether it really helps an M.P. to get or appear to get a public building for one part of his riding and a wharf for another, may be open to dispute, but he thinks that it does, and every government feels properly obliged to help its supporters to re-election. Sir Mackenzie Bowell once said that the construction of the Trent Valley Canal served one useful purpose, namely, that it advised the voters of Eastern Ontario when an election was to be held. Great progress was made on that waterway during half a century by working hard some three months every four years, or just before the general election.

Redistribution and Elections.

Another thing that can be said with confidence is that the failure of the senate to concur in the redistribution bill will not for a moment delay the election. The government will be quite as well pleased to have an election with the ridings as at present arranged.

CAN SUPPORTERS FURNISH RIGS TO CONVEY VOTERS TO POLLS

Wording of Municipal Act Leaves Room For Argument—A Case in Which Meaning of Sub-Section is Ambiguous

City Solicitor R. H. D. Hall has furnished us with the following Section 165 of the Municipal Act in regard to corrupt practices at elections:

(1) A candidate who himself, or by any other person on his behalf, and every other person who (a) hires or promises to pay or pays for a conveyance to carry a voter to or near or from or on the way to or from a polling place; or (b) pays the travelling or other expenses of a voter in going to or returning from a polling place; and every person who for a valuable consideration provides or furnishes a conveyance knowing that it is to be used to carry a voter other than the hirer to, or near, or from, or on the way to or from a polling place shall be guilty of a corrupt practice, and shall incur a penalty of [illegible], and, if a voter, shall be disqualified from voting at the election; but this subsection shall not apply to the carrying of voters to the poll in a conveyance used by the candidate personally on polling day.

(2) Every person who provides or furnishes transportation free of charge or at a diminished rate to a voter to, or near, or from, or on the way to or from a polling place, and whether passes or tickets or the like are or are not supplied, shall be guilty of a corrupt practice and shall incur a penalty of $100, and, if a voter, shall be disqualified from voting at the election.

(3) "Conveyance," for the purpose of this section, shall include a horse, team, carriage, cab, vehicle, boat or vessel.

What Does Sub-Section (2) of Above Act Mean?

Public opinion in Ontario differs as to the meaning of sub-section (2) of the foregoing Act, the prevailing interpretation seeming to be that a candidate for municipal honors can not permit his friends to take voters to the polls in vehicles, although he (the candidate) may himself convey his supporters to the polls.

While The Times agrees with legal opinion that the subsection in question was never intended to convey such an impression, still the most approved King's English is used when it says: "Every person who provides or furnishes transportation free of charge, or at a diminished rate, to a voter, etc." and judiciary courts are very prone to adhere to the strict letter of the law.

According to a contemporary, the whole matter hinges on the meaning of the word "transportation." If this word "transportation" in subsection (2) of the above act [illegible] to validate it would mean that the supporters of a candidate [illegible] not use their rigs in his [illegible] on election day. Well, what does transportation mean? Here is Webster's definition of the word: "Transportation, the act of carrying or conveying from one place to another, either on beasts or in vehicles, by land, or water, or in the air," and any court would be justified in adhering to the strict definition of the word. Still the general acceptance of the word transportation is in reference to carriage by means of public conveyances such as railways, boats, etc., from point to point in a country or from one country to another; and in all reason in that sense is the word transportation used in this subsection (2), as immediately following appears the proviso, whether "passes" or "tickets" are or are not supplied."

A peculiar feature of this section 165, as above, is that while our legislators went to some pains to explain in subsection (3) that "conveyance" shall include a horse, team, carriage, cab, vehicle, boat or vessel, they unfortunately neglected to clearly define their meaning as to "free transportation" in subsection (2), leaving it clothed in ambiguity and open to question, as evidenced in the space given to this matter in the press of Ontario.

Legal authorities seem to agree that the law as it stands should be interpreted that all supporters of a candidate who wish to aid him with outfits can do so without committing a breach of the act provided they receive no remuneration, or make any agreement for remuneration in connection with supplying the outfit. The candidate himself in this case does not need to accompany the voter. And no doubt this was the meaning of the act the Legislature intended to convey. Taking, however, the strict definition of the word "transportation," according to Webster, one would be justified in concluding prosecution possible, though perhaps not probable, under the corrupt practice act, for conveying in rigs, free of charge, voters to the poll in the interests of a candidate. The wording of this section of the act in question is one of those cases which offers scope for legal argument and employment.

TORONTO WOMAN GETS RENO DIVORCE

Wife of Harry R. Myers Successful in Suit Against Her Husband.

Reno, Nevada, Dec. 27.—Mrs. Myers, wife of Harry R. Myers, of 20 Victoria street, Toronto, was to-day granted a divorce from her husband at the courts here.

The grounds on which the divorce was secured were misconduct.

Mr. Myers is an accountant employed by the American Radiator Co. of Canada.

TORONTO MAN DIES ON WAY TO MEXICO

W. R. Davidson Stricken With Neuralgia of the Heart.

Toronto, Dec. 27.—En route to Mexico, when only a few hours' sail from his destination, 6 Linden street, Toronto, died suddenly of neuralgia of the heart on Christmas Day, on board the steamer "Mexico." He was the Toronto secretary of the Pearson interests.

Mr. Davidson was the eldest son of the late Canon Davidson of Colborne. About four years ago he married, Emily, the eldest daughter of Lady Moss. He leaves one child.

The remains will be brought back to Toronto for interment and will arrive about Jan. 10.

FORMER PETERBORO MAN BADLY HURT

Mr. Fred Goodfellow, of Edmonton, Injured in Auto Accident.

Word was received here on Saturday stating that Mr. Frank Goodfellow, son of Mr. A. A. Goodfellow, Water street, had been seriously injured in an automobile accident at Edmonton, on Friday last. It appears that while crossing the river at Fort Saskatchewan, the machine in which they were riding missed the bridge and plunged over the embankment which is from 40 to 60 feet high at this point, into the river. In the car was seated two others besides Mr. Goodfellow—a man named J. H. Collison and the chauffeur. The latter escaped serious injury by jumping clear of the machine. Both Mr. Goodfellow and Mr. Collison were badly hurt, and it is feared that their backs have been broken.

BRITISH ADMIRAL WILL AID ULSTER IF WAR IS FORCED

London, Dec. 28.—"Ulster will fight. If the British Government forces a civil and religious war on Ireland, I and many officers and men of the navy and army will aid Ulster," Admiral Lord Charles Beresford to-day told the United press. England's great sea fighter has taken up the cudgels for the Irish Unionists in the fight against Home Rule.

"Ulster asked no [illegible] for the rest of Ireland," Admiral Beresford declared, "and she is [illegible] about herself. Despite the royal proclamation against arms in Ireland, there are to-day [illegible] armed men in Ulster. [illegible] there will be [illegible]. Civil war will surely come if the British Government attempts to force Home Rule on the loyal people of Ulster."

JUDGEMENT RESERVED IN ELECTION CASE

Judge Charbonneau Unable to Reach Decision in Morris' Counter Petition.

Valleyfield, Que., Dec. 27.—Judge Charbonneau was unable to reach a decision this afternoon in the petition to dismiss the counter petition of James Morris, M.P., arising out of the Chateauguay election.

Mr. W. K. McKeown, lawyer for the Liberal petitioners for the setting aside of the election result, defied Mr. Morris to come into court and explain how he won his election. He moved that the counter petition be refused on the grounds that the election had been corruptly fought out and that Mr. Morris was thus deprived of all status in the matter.

Mr. Lanctot having argued on behalf of Mr. Morris that he could file a counter petition. Judge Charbonneau reserved judgment.

MINERS PRESIDENT BADLY BEATEN UP

Charles H. Moyer Found in Sleeping Berth on Chicago Train.

Green Bay, Wis., Dec. 27.—Charles H. Moyer, president of the Western Federation of Miners, who says he was deported from the Calumet copper range last night, passed through this city early to-day.

He declared he had been shot, beaten and dragged through the streets of Hancock, Mich.

Moyer talked with an Associated Press representative here when his train arrived. His head was swathed in a bloodstained bandage. He spoke bitterly of the treatment which he said was inflicted on him. The train stopped here 15 minutes and then proceeded to Chicago, where it is due this afternoon.

"I was assaulted in the Hotel Scott at Hancock by members of the citizens' alliance and a man named Waddell Mathon, gunman," said Moyer, as he drew the curtain aside and addressed the interviewer.

TUESDAY BEFORE MONTREAL CAN HOPE FOR SERVICE

City Faces Cold and Cheerless Sunday—Officials Working Nervously to Mend Break in Intake Pipe

Montreal, Dec. 27.—In the grip of a water famine such as was never known before, the city of Montreal faces a cold night. The fires in two hospitals, the Western and the Royal Victoria, are going out for there is no water for the boilers, and music in the churches will be vocal to-morrow, the organ will be dead, too, for lack of water. The city officials are working hard to fix the intake pipe, but it will be Tuesday before any great change is effected.

[illegible] S. Lesage, superintendent of city waterworks, said that the break in the conduit was due to causes which set in when workmen employed by the Cook Construction Company, at work on their power aqueduct, with their drag line excavation, approached the conduit too closely. A fissure was found to exist in the big concrete pipe, and the leak from this was washing out the sub soil. This weak spot in the main was first noticed last Saturday, December 20th, and materials were immediately ordered to be hauled to the spot and placed over the leaking fissure. Mr. George Janin, chief city engineer, [illegible] the contractor to stop all excavating on Monday.

Work was at once begun to protect the big conduit. Stone and sand filling was put in place and the outer sheeting or piling was placed in position. Day and night work was kept up as fast as the material used could be brought up. On Wednesday evening this job was finished and was pronounced satisfactory. On Xmas Day about 5 o'clock in the afternoon a whole section of the conduit broke away and the city was without its water supply.

DUKE STRIKES SNAG ATTEMPTING DIVORCE

Wife of Italian Nobleman To Fight Case—Says La. Courts Have No Jurisdiction.

New Orleans, Dec. 28.—Emanuela Notarbartolo, the Florentine beauty, who secured a partial divorce from her husband, the Duke of Messina, two years ago, Monday filed exceptions in the New Orleans Civil Court to the Duke's application for an absolute divorce.

She declares that inasmuch as the Italian court has already passed upon the case the local court cannot assume jurisdiction and reopen it.

The Duke of Messina is said to have come to New Orleans in order that he might secure his divorce and meet and marry here the Countess [illegible] of Florence, Italy. The Countess is here with her chaperones, Mr. and Mrs. [illegible].

She has taken a house at [illegible] Walnut street, where she has liberally entertained New Orleans' society folk whom she has met. The Duke of Messina, who knew the countess in Florence, is one of her most attentive callers.

DID NOT MEET BY CHANCE SAYS RUMOR

It is freely said that the Countess and the Duke did not meet in New Orleans by chance. Rumor favors the notion that they made arrangements in Florence before the Duke left, going one way, and the Countess going another, that they would meet in the Crescent City, and after the Duke's divorce was obtained would marry here.

Mrs. [illegible], the beautiful Countess' chaperone, denied emphatically that there was any truth in the reported engagement, but the rumor persists. It is said that the Countess is one of the most beautiful of the European nobility, and is almost matchless in any county.

TEMPERANCE WILL BE ISSUE IN NEXT SESSION PROMISED

Licensing Reform Act Similar to One Passed by Scotland Will be Asked For in House of Commons

London, Dec. 27.—An exciting temperance campaign is promised for the coming session of parliament. A demand for a licensing reform bill has been issued by the United Kingdom alliance through its president, Leif Jones, M.P. The manifesto declares that "the introduction next year of a comprehensive temperance measure into the house of commons would elicit such widespread response and backing from the most various and unexpected quarters as would astonish all who have not followed closely the solidifying of opinion on the subject during recent years." The alliance points out that Mr. Lloyd George has said that no reform, political or social, will avail in this country unless preceded by temperance reform. An act similar to the one demanded by the alliance for England and Wales was passed for Scotland at the last session of parliament.

BABY LOSES HAND

New York, Dec. 28.—While playing in his father's butcher shop, at [illegible] Second avenue, early last evening, 3-year-old John [illegible], son of James [illegible], had his hand cut off in an electric meat grinding machine.

The boy's mother had just placed some meat in the machine and turned on the current when the little fellow toddled over to his mother's side. He placed his hand in an opening of the machine and in an instant it was amputated. The boy was taken to the Harlem Hospital in a critical condition.

THE POWER TANGLE LIKELY TO BE EXPENSIVE IN UNRAVELLING

Mr. W. H. Collier Thinks That the City Has Magnificently Blundered in Hydro Electric Affairs

(To the Editor of The Morning Times)

Dear Sir:

Permit me, Mr. Editor, to express my appreciation for the frank and courteous reply of His Worship Mayor Bradburn, to my open letter of Dec. 22nd.

The tangle, or muddle, of the whole Hydro-Electric scheme, in which we find ourselves, is only emphasized by the Mayor's explanation. He is evidently a firm believer that Hon. Adam Beck is a great magician who, by means of the Ontario Legislature, can extricate the ratepayers from all snarls and difficulties in which the Council have or may put us. I am myself a great admirer of Hon. Adam Beck, and a firm believer in his policy of municipal ownership. But Mr. Beck is too busy a man to devote all his time to looking after the affairs of Peterborough. Over two years ago he came to our city and explained to us clearly all the necessary steps to take to acquire a municipal hydro-electric plant, but he flattered our Council by assuming they were all business men who would take ordinary precautions in carrying out the plans he outlined.

The Mayor says that at the time the Act of 1908 was passed the Peterborough Light and Power Company owned only a distributing plant worth about $94,000. By acquiring this property then the Company's 30 years' franchise would have been cancelled. Who drew up the bill that became the Act of 1912? Did not our own city solicitor, under the careful supervision of our Mayor and Council? Why then did not the Act expressly state that it was this property then owned by the Company, that could be expropriated by a by-law and thereupon the 30 years' franchise would be cancelled? It was this distributing plant only that the ratepayers had authorized the mayor and council to expropriate, but by a simple inexcusable blunder the mayor and council asked for more power than was at all necessary, and thereby they have themselves defeated the expressed mandate of the citizens.

The by-law is passed and the Company has been notified that all of their property in the city has been expropriated. Therefore the citizens of Peterborough at the present time are undoubtedly committed to a liability of approximately $800,000. The mayor may think that this blunder has placed the city in a position of being able to expropriate so valuable an asset as the Auburn dam and Power Plant. But it is more likely to turn out, Mr. Editor, that the owners (The Power Electric Co.) of the Peterborough Light and Power Co., have found a good opportunity to force the city to purchase a property from them that they do not want themselves. The Auburn dam, raceway and power house, cost the original company for construction more than they ever estimated, and if Peterborough takes it over we will have to pay a good figure above the construction costs. The mayor admits that the company is a strong one, and its officers are shrewd business men, so it is only sticking our heads in the sands if we allow ourselves to believe for a moment that the Company have placed themselves in any such position as the mayor is trying to persuade himself and the ratepayers.

Who are the members of the present Power Committee of the Council, Mr. Editor? Are they not equally to blame with the mayor for the blunder committed and the resulting present muddle? Each member of the committee owes an explanation to the ratepayers, and especially those members who are asking us to endorse them for office at the coming election.

Yours very truly,
W. H. Collier.

Peterborough, Dec. 27th, 1913.

NOW CERTAIN ALL THE BANKS WILL GIVE ACT FAIR TRIAL

None of the Large New York Bankers Will Hold Aloft From Federal System Established

New York, Dec. 27.—That the banking interests intend to give the new currency act a full and fair trial is evidenced by the great number of banks which have already notified the United States Treasury Department of their intention to join the reserve banks.

"The number is now near the 500 mark, every section of the country is represented, and the list includes some of the most important institutions. As soon as the regulations prepared by the organizing committee of the federal reserve system have been sent out, all the leading banks of the city have signified a willingness to go into the scheme.

The head of one large bank said: "These banks which have applications for membership have written letters and not filled out application blanks. We don't want to say we will do something when we do not know what will be required of us."

The present outlook appears to favor the view that very few of the large national banks of the country will remain outside the new federal system. Even Mr. James B. Forgan of Chicago, has, it is understood by bankers here, found sufficient improvement in the bill, as finally amended, to justify him in reversing his early decision to keep his bank out of the system. There is no present indication that any of the large New York banks will remain aloof. They have sixty days in which to make application and some of them may take the full limit of time before specifically announcing their decision.

CAP LYING ON ICE LEADS TO FINDING OF BODY IN BAY

Thomas C. Martin's Death Discovered Late Saturday Afternoon—Seen on Coal Company Dock

Toronto, Dec. 27.—Mystery surrounds the drowning of Thomas C. Martin, whose body was found in the slip at the foot of Church street at 5 p.m. Saturday afternoon. Martin who was a laborer employed by the Milnes Coal Co., had worked there for the past six weeks, and was regarded as a steady man, and one who had worked for the company all last winter.

He was at work last Saturday and was seen going down to the dock about an hour before his body was found. One of the employees went down to the dock shortly after and noticed a cap out on the ice, which is less than an inch thick. He immediately notified the police and dragging operations were commenced at once. After about 10 minutes' work with the grapples his body was brought to the surface, but life was extinct.

It is thought that Martin apparently went to close to the edge of the dock and missing his footing fell in, and probably injured himself so that he could not call for assistance.

He was a heavy set man, about 5 feet 10 inches in height, [illegible] and dressed in overalls and a [illegible] sweater. The police have so far been unable to get his address.

Coroner Johnson was notified and an inquest will be held.

THE GHOST OF A CHANCE

From It There Came a Double Wedding.

By MARTHA McC.-WILLIAMS.

"Everybody else is going," Selina said, with a sigh. "Oh dear! I wonder why we have to skip all the good times."

"It is in punishment for our uncommitted sins," Bess answered, with a toss of the head. "All our sins must be uncommitted. I'm sure we've been brought up more strictly than ever nuns were. Sometimes when I think over it all I get fairly afraid for us two. We've been so proper from our cradles—we must break out after awhile."

"Hush! Aunt Wilton would have a fit if she heard you," Selina said. "Do you think she was ever young, Bess? I can't fancy her less than sixty and severe, yet I do believe she means only to be kind and really wants us to be happy."

"Yes, in her way, which isn't mine nor anybody else's," Bess broke out passionately. "Her way is to have everything just so 365 days in the year. We have all sorts of material good things—we eat well, sleep well, dress well—but no liberty to get the good of them. How many times did we wear our best frocks last summer? Not once! And it's going to be the same this season. People never ask us to things any more because they know we won't come."

"I don't mind that so much as the flowers. Shouldn't you like, just once, to run riot in the garden, pulling whatever you liked?"

"You heretic! Aunt Wilton would have serious doubts as to your sanity if she heard that. I think she loves flowers, not because they are flowers and beautiful, but because they are her own"—

"The same as her nieces," a deeper voice said from an ambush of lilac hedge. Next minute the hedge shook violently. It was old and gnarly, being a party hedge and therefore beyond Wilton control. The end of the shakings was a young man, slim and merry eyed, who bowed very low to the two young women, then said deprecatingly: "Don't freeze me because I eavesdropped. I know how bad it is, but really this time the end justifies it. I'm a committee of one, self appointed, to find out just why the nicest girls in town stay out of everything."

"Will you listen?" Bess adjured Selina, whose eyes were dancing, though her face was preternaturally grave as she answered. "Everybody overlooks Joe Hartwell's fibs, he fibs so nicely."

Hartwell laughed. His father being Aunt Wilton's lawyer, he knew the Ford girls, Aunt Wilton's nieces, better than anybody in Caswell town. It was a knowledge that ran back to the mud pie period, although the Fords knew no more of mud pies and their making than could be gathered from watching him enviously through crannies of the hedge.

Now, for two years he had been wondering how they had escaped their bringing up. Selina, he was sure, was full of mad longings for life and freedom. About Bess he was not so sure. She sang and laughed like a human sunbeam—sang and laughed herself into the deepest depths of his heart. Therefore he resented bitterly her isolation. The sisters would some day inherit Aunt Wilton's more than comfortable fortune. It galled him to think that people would say Bess had married him through lack of other lovers; maybe also that his father had encouraged his client to keep her heiresses so secluded out of regard for the interests of his son. Beyond all that, though, was the rebellion against thus winning by default. How could Bess be sure she really loved him when she had had no chance of measuring him against other lovers?

It was with a hope of giving her that chance he had asked his chum, Dennison, for a month's visit. Dennison was handsome, witty and winning. His coming, duly advertised, had set social Caswell all a-flutter. There were already things planned for all the first fortnight. Selina and Bess had been discussing the most spectacular of them, the lawn party at the old Vernon place. It was to come off by moonlight, aided and abetted by Japanese lanterns. There would be dancing, of course, and supper in the big hall of the deserted mansion. Everybody was to go in costume and masked. Except for that, Selina and Bess might have had faint hopes. But Aunt Wilton's face was flint toward masking. It savored to her so much of acting and the theater.

If Hartwell had known that—but speculation is idle. He looked blank indeed when Selina let him see how the land lay. "And I got it up mostly so you might dance your fill," he said sorrowfully. "How I wish I could wash the slate clean and begin all over! Such a great lark I hoped we might have, and now to think"—

"Such a great lark we will have!" cried Bess, springing up and whirling about in front of the garden bench. Hartwell stared at her. Selina looked puzzled. Bess stopped short in her dancing to put her finger on her lip and say, nodding sagely between the words: "Promise not to faint when you see us, Joe. I think we're coming, though we have just the ghost of a chance."

• • • • • • •

The lawn party had to take its full moon on trust. So many clouds sailed in the sky the lantern lights shone all undimmed. The thick, [illegible] kept the crowd close about the house. It was big and substantial, and in the worst case, in the shape of rain dropping, could go on inside. True, a few nervous persons said that would hardly do. Of course it was all idle talk. [illegible] there had been talk of a Vernon ghost.

Two ghosts indeed—those of the Vernon twin sisters, who had loved the same sweetheart and had refused to marry him out of regard for the other. They had lived to a great age, fading and falling at last like withered roses there in the family mansion. They had been dead twenty years, [illegible]

RIGHT HAND RULE.

The Way It Is Applied in Driving and in Navigation.

London's drivers, sitting on the right side of the driver's seat, turn to the left. Why? In order that looking down at the right side of the vehicle they may gauge to a fraction of an inch the hubs of a vehicle meeting them. In the United States the driver still preserves the right side of the seat and in turning to the right of the roadway has the least knowledge of where his hubs may be in passing.

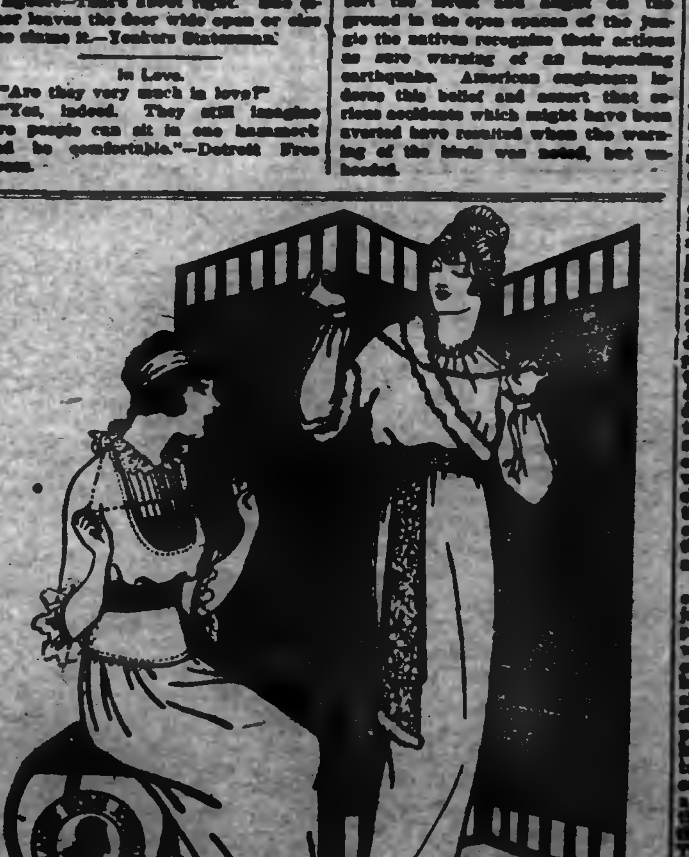
But in international navigation the right hand rules always obtain. It is the narrow channel winding into a port where the extremest of emphasis is laid upon the vessel keeping to starboard, no matter how many crooks and turns and loops the channel may make.

This was illustrated in a collision on the Whangpoo river, in China, when the Pekin and the Normandie collided. The Normandie was descending the stream, keeping to starboard. The Pekin was ascending the channel, keeping to its starboard. At a sharp turn in the channel the two boats collided. The Pekin's master declared that owing to the sharp bend in the river it was a "crossing" case, in which the Normandie was to blame.

In the house of lords, however, it was held that the right of any channel of any degree of sinuosity lay at the right of the channel's center; that, therefore, when the Pekin failed to observe the rule in the sharp bend and "cut across" it became an offender against the law and must pay damages.—Chicago Tribune.

The Parrots of Mexico.

What the wild pigeon once was in point of numbers in the United States the parrot, of varying shades of color and all sizes, is to old Mexico. Flights of these birds frequently darken the midday sun in the hot country, and they become so tame around the camps of engineers that the birds are given individual names and soon become regular pets. Whenever the parrots desert the forest and alight on the ground in the open spaces of the jungle the natives recognize their actions as sure warning of an impending earthquake. American engineers indorse this belief and assert that serious accidents which might have been averted have resulted when the warning of the birds was noted, but unheeded.



THE FROCK OF SILK OR CREPE FOR AFTERNOON AFFAIRS

The wardrobe of the young girl is not complete without at least one afternoon gown. This is usually simple and is fashioned of a supple silk or one of the new silk crepes.

Egyptian crepe is perhaps one of the most effective materials for this purpose and requires very little trimming as it is decorative in itself. It is something like the Canton crepe, but of a somewhat coarser weave.

No. 7040 is developed in a dark blue Egyptian crepe with a tiny vest of brightly colored silk and a chemisette of lace. The [illegible] closes in back, but an elbow sleeve and a [illegible] which is [illegible] into a deep yoke. This design may be made in size 16 with 4½ yards of 36 inch material.

A rather quaint one sided effect is brought out in No. 6070. The underbodice is of net, and the overdress is of crepe de Chine with a [illegible] ground and a contrasting figure, in which there are [illegible] of red, brown and green. The sash is of [illegible] satin. A narrow band of fur outlines the surplice overblouse.

This dress may be copied in size 16 with 3 yards of 42 inch material and 1½ yards of net or lace for the underblouse.

No. 7040—sizes 16, 17 and 18.
No. 6070—sizes [illegible].
Each pattern 15 cents.

CHRISTMAS APPEAL

FOR

The Hospital for Sick Children

COLLEGE ST., TORONTO

Dear Mr. Editor:—

Thanks for your kindness in allowing me the privilege of appealing at this Christmas time on behalf of the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto.

It would take more space than you can spare to tell of the good work done for the sick and deformed children of this Province. Let me, however, in a few words, tell you of the progress of the work of the Hospital.

One nurse, six little white beds, a few dollars, a few friends—this was the beginning. The beds have grown to 250, the dollars to thousands, the friends to hundreds. 1875, the first year, 44 in-patients, 67 out-patients; 1913, last year, 1,046 in-patients, 26,867 out-patients; 1875, 1 nurse; 1913, 70 nurses.

Since 1875, thirty-eight years ago, the Hospital has admitted within its walls 21,018 children as in-patients, and 159,231 as out-patients, a total of 180,249, or an average of 4,743 per year. Of the 21,018 in-patients, 15,[illegible] were from Toronto, and 5,818 from other parts of the Province; 14,150 of the total in-patients were cured, and 5,367 were improved.

In the Orthopedic Department last year, of the 1,046 in-patients, 278 were treated for deformities, 25 hip disease, 37 Pott's disease, 2 knock-knees, 10 bow-legs, 62 club feet, 8 lateral curvature of the spine, 44 infantile paralysis, 6 wry neck, and 75 tubercular disease of knee, hip and ankle. In 1913, the Surgical Apparatus Shop manufactured 427 appliances for in-patients and out-patients, including ankle braces, spinal braces, hip splints, bow-leg splints, club-feet splints, plaster jackets, etc.

In this Department in 38 years nearly 800 boys and girls have been treated for Club Feet and 650 corrected. Half of these came from places outside of Toronto. Surely we have a fair claim for help from the people of this Province.

Will you, the reader of this letter, help to give crippled children a fair start in life?

Busy dollars are better than idle tears. The sympathy that helps is good, but the Hospital has to have the sympathy that works.

While Christmas Bells are ringing to the glory of Him "Who made the lame to walk and the blind to see," give, give, give, and help the Hospital to help God's little ones, upon whom the heavy hand of affliction has been laid.

Will you please send a dollar, or more, if you can spare it, to Douglas Davidson, the Secretary-Treasurer of the Hospital, or

J. ROSS ROBERTSON,
Chairman of the Trustees, Toronto.

Prof. Mulveney Known All Over the World

Proprietor of World's Famous Tape Worm Exterminator

Tape worm is bred from a parasite. It is of pear shape, having two, four and six suckers. It lays the eggs, which are connected together. They develop and form a body, which is the worm. Each section is an individual, having a sucker or mouth. The worm grows much longer than the bowels where it is located, and sometimes a whole colony of them are found, enough to fill a quart of solid worm, and when put in a basin of water would apparently fill it. It is the hardest task in the world to destroy this parasite, without doing injury to the individual who may be so unfortunate as to have it, as the parasite clings to the bowels, feeding itself from the body of the worm, and remains there to breed another. It is an internal demon and causes its victim to suffer all the symptoms of disease imaginable. The [illegible] physicians are led to believe the patient is suffering from some other disease, as nearly every person has different symptoms. Some have been treated for cancer of the bowels, [illegible] of the bowels, consumption of the lungs, chronic dyspepsia, nervous prostration, [illegible], hypochondria, hysteria, inflammation of the bowels, appendicitis, and other complaints, when one or more of these worms were eating their lives away.

Prof. Mulveney has made the discovery to free the victim without injury to the system, destroying the parasite as well as expelling the worm with one dose of medicine without any previous starvation. [illegible] his office, where he has in his possession the most wonderful collection of these parasites which have been expelled from hundreds of people by his famous remedy, some bottles containing colonies of worms, and anyone seeing them cannot imagine how a person could possibly live with them in his bowels. It is surprising the number of people that have them. Thousands have them and are not aware of [illegible] [illegible]

Our Point of View

Municipal cold storage plants are proposed. Good idea. They will be great places in which to deposit defeated candidates pending the next election.

During the year just ended 6,300,000,000 nickels were spent in this country at the moving picture shows, or $315,000,000. This vast sum would have purchased 190,000 homes for people in ordinary circumstances, or nearly 80,000 good-sized farms.

THE IDEAL WINTER RESORT

While Algonquin Park is far from being a sanatarium, its discovery as the ideal winter resort has been as much as anything due to recent developments in medical science. Those who have found the dampness and the frequent slush of eastern cities unpleasant at the best but impossible in many cases, have been used to seek relief in the Southern States. It has seemed the simplest remedy both to physicians and patient to seek for heat where the cold proved unendurable, but more recently there has been a keen appreciation of the dry frigidity of the north and that is where the Park steps in. Two thousand feet above the level of the sea, it is always dry and cold and usually bright. Days spent in snowshoe tramps through primitive forests where every leaf and bough bears its weight of glistening crystals, in the breathless flight of toboggan or ski, and in the ring of steel against icebound waters of some lake; together with evenings spent in social converse around the cosy warmth of an old fashioned log fire; these slip away unnoticed but those who have once experienced their return to their avocations with renewed energies, with hardened muscles, and a grateful memory that forever blots out all thoughts of the relaxing South. Algonquin Park is 200 miles north of Toronto and 285 miles west of Montreal.

THAT NAVAL HOLIDAY

Mr. Churchill's proposal for a naval holiday, wherein for one year no new battleship shall be laid down, represented truly, we think, British sentiment. But Germany promptly turned down the proposal, although it seems probable that a considerable majority of her workingmen would gladly welcome it. But the matter is not yet disposed of. The United States House of Representatives has now endorsed the proposal, thus placing the two great English speaking nations side by side in the matter. It is hard to see just where any nation could lose much by such a holiday, even if it lasted five years instead of one, and the costliness of the present folly is shown by the launching of the British battle cruiser "Tiger" last week at Glasgow. The engines of this monster will provide 100,000 horse-power and she is expected to steam 31 knots an hour. Her cost in round figures is $11,000,000. This would mean [illegible] loaves of bread, or one loaf a day for a year for 600,000 of Britain's poor. And this is only one battleship! It is thus [illegible] no naval holiday. [illegible] we take the money which ought to educate, clothe and feed our people and spend it upon that which can do nothing but destroy?

Had Stomach Rumblings, Distress Before Meals

Was Seldom Free From That Weary, Droopy, Half-Dead Feeling

Now Cured and Gives Good Advice To Others With Dyspeptic Tendencies

If you have any stomach distress at all you will certainly be interested in the following experience which is told by Mr. Edward Dawkins.

"When I was working around the farm last winter I had an attack of inflammation," writes Mr. E. P. Dawkins, of Port Richmond. "I was weak for a long time, but well enough to work until spring. But something went wrong with my bowels for I had to use salts or physic all the time. My stomach kept sour, and always after eating there was pain and fulness and all the symptoms of intestinal indigestion. Nothing helped me until I used Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Instead of hurting, like other pills, they acted very mildly, and seemed to heal the bowels. I did not require large doses to get results with Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and feel so glad that I have found a mild yet certain remedy. To-day I am well—no pain, no sour stomach, a good appetite, able to digest anything. This is a whole lot of good for one medicine to do, and I can say Dr. Hamilton's Pills are the best pills, and my letter, I am sure, proves it."

Refuse a substitute for Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut. 25c. per box or five for $1.00, at all druggists and storekeepers, or post paid from the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

TO THE ELECTORS OF PETERBOROUGH:

Ladies and Gentlemen:—

Last year a large number of ratepayers requested me to be a candidate for Water Commissioner in opposition to Mr. Moore. I not only declined to be a candidate but did what I could to prevent opposition. The Commissioners at that time had law suits on with the contractors where about thirty thousand dollars of the people's money was at stake. Mr. Moore being a lawyer I considered he should be the best posted man on the Commission to fight the contractors and in the interest of the City it would be a mistake to remove him.

This year I have again been waited upon by a large representation of the ratepayers who believe that with my thorough knowledge of all the waters in this district and my many years experience as alderman I should be a capable man for the position. I have consented to be a candidate and my past record in the Council I think is proof that if elected will give you faithful and honest service.

The taking over of the Hydro-Electric system will require a great deal of time—more than any man who has a large business to attend to can spare. Not being in business I can give all the time required, and if necessary will make a personal inspection of every house in the city and see that rich and poor are treated alike.

I can see no reason, with the large body of ready made reservoirs of the Otonabee River there should be any shortage of water for either household or lawn service, or why there should not be a reduction in the water rates. A good supply of good water is a necessity in every house and should be available for the people at a low rate.

To the ratepayers who are now residents of the City and not personally acquainted with me, would say that for a number of years I occupied the position of alderman, and always stood at the head of the poll both as a representative of No. 3 Ward and also after the Ward system was abolished.

General street railway extension and cheap transportation [illegible], cheap light and water, should be the goal of our municipal government. When a worker can have his house and garden anywhere, and is not tied to a locality his prospects are greatly improved.

Trusting that the ratepayers who want good service in the future as I have given the past will give me their hearty support.

I am, yours very truly,

J. B. McWILLIAMS

To The Electors of The North Ward

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,—

In making an appeal to you for your support in the coming municipal elections, I fully realize the handicap I am under in being a stranger to quite a number of you, even though I have been practising my profession here for seven years. My policy briefly is this:

An honest endeavor to show a dollar's value for every dollar expended, and the most economical and efficient government of the city's affairs. To attain this I have acceded to the wishes of a large number of the ratepayers in offering myself as a candidate for Alderman in the North Ward. Should I find it impossible to see you all personally before election day, I wish to make a most earnest appeal for your vote and influence, and can assure you that I will deem it my duty to fully merit your confidence.

W. T. HOLLOWAY.

THE "FREE FOOD FOLLY."

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—"The policy I give you at this moment, the policy I believe every patriot in Canada ought to support, and the policy I believe it to be the duty of the Government to immediately inaugurate, is a policy of absolutely free food—food free from customs duties." — Sir Wilfrid Laurier's remedy for the high cost of living.

"Free food would not in any sense solve the problem of the cost of living."—E. C. Drury, farmer and former Master of the Dominion Grange, speaking as one of a farmers' deputation to Ottawa last week.

"Any attempt to make political capital out of the high cost of living would be false, false to facts."

Let my brother farmer ponder over above.

ERNEST W. WHEELER.

Norwood, Dec. 27th, 1913.

WHY FREE TRADE WILL DISAPPEAR.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—Just one more word with regard to modern tendencies and I have done. We have seen how an open or free trade competitive Labour market enslaved labour, or at least the largest portion of it. Slums and all their horrors are also the necessary product of it, and of all other forms of trade oppression. The cheap food of Free Trade appeared to be a move in the right direction but it was at the expense of the British farmer and agricultural labourer, who have, practically speaking, gone down and out. It is plain, therefore, that both the disease and the remedy were bad. What should have happened? you ask. Simply this. Universal control alone will adjust universal conditions. We are struggling up to the light. We have a [illegible] of struggles on here now. But the result will be some day, if we can hold the money-bags down, that a surplus of supply will no longer mean at the same time, as at the present, periods of starvation. This huge farce will soon be played out we may hope, and then the great curse of unemployment will be next in order for treatment. When the standard of the living wage is likewise more or less realized the absurdity of expecting people to be decent on a less than decent wage will also be no more. But none of these wrongs can be remedied by perpetuating free trade. Extremes of poverty are the natural consequence of extremes of wealth where that wealth is improperly acquired by free untrammelled power over the people. "Control" is the watchword of the future and protection, embargoes, dumping-clauses, public ownership, etc., are only phases of it. Free trade however is not a phase of it. Free trade is the deadly enemy of all forms of control and bars the way to it. Therefore it must go. Free trade is like a splendid chariot well and richly [illegible] that has bound to its wheels however, those whose sole asset is their labor.

Yours truly,
J. H. Burnham.

PRESIDENT WILSON IS 57 YEARS OLD

Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States, was born in Staunton, Va., Dec. 28, 1856. He began his academic studies at Davidson College. Later he studied at Princeton, the University of Virginia and Johns Hopkins University. For a time he practised law in Atlanta, but soon abandoned the legal profession to become an educator. For three years he was a professor at Bryn Mawr College and for a similar period he was a member of the faculty of Wesleyan University. In 1890 he became professor of jurisprudence and political economy at Princeton, and in 1902 he was made president of the university. He entered public life in 1910, when he was successful democratic candidate for governor of New Jersey. His success in the governorship led to his nomination and election to the Presidency a year ago.

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY

Ladies and Gentlemen:

The retirement of Mr. W. H. Hill has decided me to acquiesce with the desire of a number of ratepayers who wish me to be a candidate for a seat on the Utilities Commissioners' Board for 1914.

We all realize that the Board of Water Commissioners is, and needs to be, an efficient, business-like organization. For the coming year, the management of the local Hydro-Electric will be an important addition to the duties of the Commissioners.

It will be my aim, if honored with a seat at the board, to co-operate with the present members of that commission, and to assist in continuing the success achieved by the Waterworks department.

I shall also endeavor to help, so far as is in my power, with the organization of the local Hydro-Electric system. Having from the beginning felt the advantages of this system, I shall do my utmost to make this public utility of the greatest possible service to the citizens of the municipality.

The qualification which I present to you in support of my candidature is service in your interest for five years on your board of Aldermen. On this record I ask your support at the polls.

Respectfully,
ROBERT HICKS.

TENDERS.

TENDERS addressed to the undersigned at Ottawa, and endorsed on the envelope "Tender for Old Buildings at Oshawa," will be received up to noon of the

for the purchase of the TWO buildings contiguous to the breakwater in Oshawa Harbour, namely, the elevator standing at the shore end of the breakwater, and the smallest of the coal sheds standing directly behind the elevator in a line northward from the elevator. These buildings are offered for sale on the following conditions:

The purchaser is to take down the buildings and remove the material and fittings from the Government Reserve within a reasonable time after the offer is accepted. The time required for removal to be specified by the tenderers and accepted by the Department. The material and fittings to become the property of the successful tender when removed from the Government Reserve.

The buildings are to be taken down by the Contractors at their own risk and expense, and the Department is not to be held liable for any accident that may occur in connection with the removal of the buildings or material.

The ground occupied by each building is to be levelled off and left in good condition by the Contractor.

A separate price is to be made for each building and the Department reserves the right to accept the whole or any part of a tender. The Department further reserves the right to refuse the highest or any tender.

The purchase price to be paid in cash as soon as the successful tenderer is notified of the acceptance of his offer.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered Canadian Bank equal to 10 p.c. of the whole amount of the offer. Cheques accompanying tenders which are accepted will be forfeited if the successful tenderers decline to forward the purchase price when their offers are accepted or fail to remove the buildings in accordance with this notice. Cheques accompanying unsuccessful tenders will be returned.

Newspapers copying this advertisement without authority from the Department will not be paid for same.

To The Electors of Ward One

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,—

A number of ratepayers request me to offer myself as a candidate for the representation of the above Ward in the coming Aldermanic election. I have consented to stand, and ask for your vote and influence.

If elected, I will seek to the utmost of my power, to promote the highest interests of the city.

Yours respectfully,

JOSEPH SAUNDERS.

To the Electors of the WEST WARD

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

Having been requested by a large number of citizens to stand for re-election as Alderman, I again respectfully tender you my services.

I have now represented you for four years, during which time I have made myself thoroughly conversant with the streets, sidewalks, sewers, and other interests in the Ward.

By my services in the past, together with the past four years' experience, I ask you to judge my actions in the future, and confidently solicit your support and influence.

If elected, I again promise to conscientiously look after the interests of the Ward and the City in general, and to give all matters coming before your Council the necessary time and careful consideration, endeavouring to consider all questions in a fair and business-like manner, consistent with economy and general progressiveness.

With season's best wishes, I am,

Your obedient servant,

JOS. J. DUFFUS.

TO THE ELECTORS OF WEST WARD

Gentlemen:

I respectfully solicit your vote and influence to return me as Alderman for your Ward for 1914. As a business man with a successful business experience, I feel that our motto should be "Business methods in all departments of the Council." Efficiency linked with economy should be our guiding principle.

I trust you will favor me with your support and I promise should I be returned that I will do my best to merit your approval.

In voting for A. H. STRATTON for Alderman for Centre Ward you are voting for a live go-ahead man who has the interests of Peterborough at heart. He is a large taxpayer and will use his best efforts to keep your taxes down to the lowwater marks. At the same time he is sure to encourage existing manufacturers and endeavor to bring in a new industry. In regard to the important matter of Hydro Electric, while he favours it he is especially in favour of business-like management of the enterprise of seeing that the people, who voted so, almost unanimously for it, get the greatest benefit from it at the least possible cost consistent with efficiency. He is a good business man by the test of success in his own business and knows that to encourage the working men and find employment for them at good wages, helps the business man and thereby help to make a BIGGER AND BETTER CITY. Harriet Lake was indolent by nature. She knew it and admitted it. On warm mornings she preferred a rocking chair on the piazza to any outdoor sport. But Harriet at twenty-four was taking on flesh, and the specialist whom she consulted said, "Play golf, take long walks and eat no rich food." So Harriet went in for golf.

She had just driven her ball from the second tee, a very short and crooked drive, when a cry from the bushes reached her ears. She glanced at her caddie, and, as if having received a silent command, he started in the direction of the ball. Harriet's face wore a somewhat bored expression. Waits between drives were so long. The caddie returned breathless.

"You certainly did swat that gentleman one, Miss Lake," he announced. "Your ball hit him right on the back of the hand as he was pulling some bushes aside looking for his own ball."

"Lucky fellow!" replied Harriet. "I wish something would hit me on the back of the hand so I wouldn't have to trail around this green every day in the week!"

They had reached the fourth green when the skies suddenly clouded over. Glad of an excuse to stop, Harriet diverted the caddie to take her sticks back to her locker, while she would cut across lots home for luncheon.

She walked slowly through the old orchard that adjoined the links and was startled by the rumbling of thunder. Realizing that there was no protection in sight, she hurried on until she reached a broad lane that must lead to a house.

Large drops of rain had begun to descend. Another clap of terrific thunder, and Harriet began to run. While the lightning flashed her ambition and energy seemed heightened by it. At the end of the lane stood an old barn. With renewed efforts she started for its sheltering roof and, breathless, reached the door and dashed in.

Her hat had blown off. Her black hair was falling in tiny ringlets about her forehead. Her petticoats were held at ankle length to lend fleetness to her strides. She certainly made a stunning picture as she stood in the barn door.

"MAYBE YOU CAN SAY 'YES.'"

What was that queer noise? It might be a horrid rat. But before she had time to decide she was confronted by a tall chap clad in white flannels.

"Er—I beg pardon," he began. "Perhaps we are poaching?"

"We?" repeated Harriet. "Are there two of you?"

"Well, almost," said her companion. "That is, I am here intact, but my friend over there is a bit damaged by a blow he got on the links. Otherwise he's a very decent sort of chap. We ran in out of the rain, you know," he added.

Harriet glanced guiltily in the direction of the "friend," who seemed busy opening a basket.

"I ran in out of the wet, too," she announced finally. "You don't mind if I stay until the lightning stops, do you?"

"Mind? Well, I guess not!" assured the man, promptly turning host. "Come over and meet my friend, Mr. Burch, won't you? Billy, here's a lady come to our feast."

Billy rose and beamed on the unexpected guest. He was taking a most delicious looking lunch from a large automobile hamper.

"I wish I could shake hands with you, Miss—Miss"— he stammered.

"My name is Lake," supplied Harriet.

"Considering the day," said the chap in white flannels, "it's very appropriate."

"Shut up, Arthur, will you, and let me finish my speech?" Billy interposed. "What I was saying when my insulting friend, Mr. Ralston, interrupted"—considerable emphasis on the word insulted—"was that I cannot shake you by the hand owing to the fact that some clumsy gawk selected me as a target this morning. Really there should be a law preventing such persons running at large."

Harriet was getting up courage to confide when Ralston came to her rescue.

"Why talk about personalities, Billy?" he began. "Suppose you ask Miss Lake to share our repast?"

The three of them sat down, Turkish fashion, at the door of the old barn and made inroads on the luncheon. Nothing was wanting. Cold drink in patent bottles, sandwiches, salads, strawberries and a jar of cream. Such a [illegible] when they had finished they were old friends.

"I say, Billy, Violet certainly does put up a fine luncheon," said Ralston.

"She's the greatest girl a man ever [illegible]" agreed Billy.

Violet! Who was she? Harriet could not explain why she felt a touch of disappointment on finding that Billy was also a married man.

"I guess I'll be running along," said she, after thanking the men for their hospitality. "Oh, no; you need not drive me over in the machine. The fact is I just live in that big shingled house beyond this fence." With a wave of her hand she was gone, and the men watched her slip under the fence and disappear behind the tall hedge on the other side.

The storm did not clear away entirely, and Harriet realized that the lawn dance which the Williamses were holding in honor of their first anniversary must be given indoors instead of on the lawn, so she donned her prettiest frock. Harriet was never on time for anything, and when she arrived the dance was in full swing. Mrs. Williams greeted her at the door.

"You do look peachy, Harriet," said her hostess. "What have you been doing to yourself? You are more lovely than ever. Oh, the poor, poor men!" added Mrs. Williams mockingly.

They stood together for a moment, and the beaming face of Billy Burch confronted them.

"Mr. Burch, this is Miss Lake," said Mrs. Williams. "I know you two will get along immensely. Poor Billy was hit in the head today by some straggling lunatic who thinks she can play golf. But, barring his injured right hand, he's the dearest man in the world—except one."

At supper time Billy discovered a cozy corner in the conservatory, where they could "eat in peace without being interrupted by that married man, Ralston," as he expressed it. Harriet was eating salad and studying Billy with her big, dreamy black eyes.

"I wish Violet was here," Billy exclaimed as he tasted the salad.

"Really, Mr. Burch, I am sorry that I am not sufficient company."

Billy actually snickered, but Harriet was plainly in earnest, so Billy explained:

"You see, Violet is my colored cook that I brought up with me from the south, and if she were here she could taste this salad and then go home and make a better one. See?"

"But, Mr. Burch, I, too, have a confession to make."

"Spare me!" cried Billy. "I will run for Arthur if you wish a father confessor. He's listened to my sins for years and really borne with them very leniently."

But Harriet insisted.

"I want you to know that I am the 'clumsy gawk,' the 'straggling lunatic' who hit your hand today."

Billy beamed.

"That's not the only place you hit," he said. "That'll get well. But you gave my old heart such a blow that it is completely broken in two, Miss Harriet, and only you can mend it."

"But, Mr. Burch"— began Harriet.

"Oh, I know what you're going to say," interrupted Billy, "but don't say it yet. I'm in love, and I know it, though I don't expect you to fall in love with a cripple on sight; but some day, Harriet," he continued in softer and more earnest tones, "maybe you can say 'Yes.'"

Harriet looked once more into his clear, honest eyes. She, too, was in love, and she knew it. He had none the best of her there.

"I haven't said 'No,' have I?" she asked. And Billy felt that in time his heart would be mended.

EYE OF THE CAMERA

The Picture It Brought From Out a Dark Cavern.

Dr. Francis Clark told an interesting story of a youth living in Maine who was out in the woods one day taking photographs of attractive bits of scenery. He came upon the mouth of a little cavern between the rocks, and he said to himself, "I will see what sort of picture I can get out of that cave," and as it was a dark day he decided to take a "time exposure" instead of a "snapshot." Steadying the camera upon his knee as well as he could at the edge of the cave, he gave the sensitive plate a long, deliberate look at the semidarkness within. Then he continued his tramp through the woods and after a few hours returned to his camp.

Several weeks afterward, when developing his plates, you can imagine his astonishment to see in the picture, in the very center of the cavern, with arched back and bristling fur and within springing distance of the spot where he had balanced his camera, a huge Canada lynx that might easily have destroyed his life. And yet he came and went and saw no signs of danger.—Christian Herald.

A Moving Sermon.

"I once had a parishioner who was a miser," said an English clergyman. "For this man's benefit I preached one Sunday a strong sermon on the necessity of charity, of philanthropy—a sermon on the duty and the joy of giving. The miser, at whom I gazed often, seemed impressed.

"Next day I met him on the street.

"'Well, John,' I said, 'what do you think of yesterday's sermon?'

"'It moved me deeply, sir,' he answered. 'It brought home to me so strongly the necessity of giving alms that honestly, sir, I've a great mind to turn beggar.'"

SPOILED THE ACT

An Incident That Enraged the Actor and Amused the Audience.

Some years ago a melodrama was being performed in a country theater, the chief actor in which had made himself, from his haughty and overbearing conduct, disliked by all. In the last scene he was supposed to visit the tombs of his ancestors. In the center of the stage upon a marble pedestal stood the statue of his father. A heavy fold of drapery covered the figure. Enter Albert, who thus addressed the statue:

"I am here once again to gaze upon those features which in life so often looked on me with tenderest affection. Father, thy mourning son now comes to pay thee adoration. Let me remove the veil which from the vulgar gaze shields the beloved image of a once dear parent!"

Off went the drapery, and, behold, there was disclosed the statue of the father gracefully standing upon its head.

The effect cannot be described. It was electric. The shouts of laughter which followed the mistake of the super effectually put an end to the scene, which changed to the next as quickly as possible amid the jeers of the audience, the anger of the manager and the uncontrollable rage of the actor.—London Telegraph.

FREAK NOTES

But Because of the Way He Solved the Closet Space Problem.

I must tell all my brothers how my wife and I have solved the problem which so bothers those who dwell where there is but little closet room. With one dressing case between us, there was not room for all our things. As to the closets, they were crammed full, and even under the bed there were many hat boxes. So I purchased another dressing case.

I then took all my clothes, which had been crowding my wife's in her dressing case, and arranged them in my own. In the top drawer I put my handkerchiefs, collars and ties and all those other little articles of finery which every man loves so much. In the second drawer I placed my shirts and underwear and devoted the lower drawer to my trousers, neatly folded, and my hosiery. My wife was delighted, as it gave her her own dresser all to herself and relieved the closet somewhat.

But in a day or so the new plan proved to have a few defects, so at my wife's suggestion I emptied one of the upper drawers in my dresser, putting the contents into the other and allowed my wife to use the now vacant receptacle for a few of her jabots, scarfs, etc. The second day it was decided that my shirts and trousers could occupy the same drawer, the lowest one, so this was fixed, and into the second drawer my wife moved a few of her petticoats and such things.

Soon finding that I was still using too much space, I permitted her to put my collars and such effects into the lowest drawer with my trousers, etc., thus giving her both of the upper drawers and the next and still leaving me plenty of room in the one bottom drawer.

Since then, however, I have found that I do not require so much space for my few things, so have taken them out of the bottom drawer and packed them into a hat box, which I keep under the bed, thereby giving my wife all the drawers in my dressing case. I find the present arrangement very satisfactory, as all I have to do now is to empty the hat box on the bed when I want anything in it and then, when I have made my selection, sweep the other articles back into place.

In this way I have solved the dressing case problem, and everything is quite pleasant in our house.—Paul West in Delineator.

PARISIAN CABMAN

A Deadly Verbal Insult That Will Render Him Speechless.

A discreet knowledge of slang is a very useful accomplishment for the stranger or the foreign resident in Paris. Thus if a cabman is rude or more than usually extortionate or if he splashes you with mud from head to foot as he passes and then turns around to grin at the damage done, and cochers frequently do these things, an inadequate command of the niceties of the French language leaves all the advantages on his side.

You might call him "idiot" or "sauvage," but this would only tickle him. If, however, you were able to shout "Va donc, Collignon!" the result of the encounter would be at once wholly in your favor.

To say "Collignon" to a cocher is the supreme insult. It leaves him gasping and further speech on his side useless. It is easy to understand why.

Collignon was a coachman who as long ago as 1855 went to the house of a poor professor and murdered him because he had protested against an overcharge. It is satisfactory to know that Collignon was promptly tried, sentenced to death and guillotined. To this day, then, "Va Collignon!" remains the last word.—Paris Cor. New York Sun.

A Painful Situation.

"What's the use of going to night school at your age? Lots of rich men can't talk a mite better than you can. Let the family squirm."

"The family ain't kicking. But my stenographer's words were very embarrassing to the latter."—Washington Herald.

J. J. HARTLEY

The Workingman's Candidate For

MAYOR

Unanimously Endorsed by the Trades & Labor Council

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY OF PETERBOROUGH:

Ladies and Gentlemen:—At the earnest request of a large number of the ratepayers I have consented to be a candidate for the position of Mayor for the year 1914.

Being born and having lived all my life in Peterborough, and my whole life's savings being invested in Peterborough, I naturally have a deep interest in the welfare and prosperity of the City.

Should I be elected I promise you that I will guard to the very best of my ability, the interests of the ratepayers and will oppose all unnecessary expenditure. I will do my utmost to keep down the ever increasing rate of taxation consistent with needs of a growing City.

I may say that I am in favor of Municipal Ownership, and am in favor of having all city work done by our own people instead of bringing in outsiders to do it.

I will endeavour to see that the ratepayers get value for every dollar that is expended.

I have had considerable experience in municipal matters, having served ten years in the Council and fourteen years on the Board of Education, being Chairman of that Board for two years, I was also Chairman of the Board of Health for several years, so that you will see that I am not without a fair share of experience.

Should you do me the honor to elect me as Mayor of our City I will do my best to serve you to the extent of my ability.

Yours respectfully,

J.J. HARTLEY

WILLING TO LEND

The Asteria Brought Health and Fortune to Its Wearer.

Familiar to some of the ancient writers and credited with supernatural powers, the asteria, or star gem, was highly valued for the benefits supposed to be conferred on the wearer. Its bright six rayed star, ever changing and shifting with every play of light and especially showing out its flames in the direct sunlight, would seem to be something more than an ordinary crystal, and to the superstitious mind it could readily be believed to embody some tutelar spirit.

The particular virtue attributed to this gem was the conferring upon the wearer of "health and good fortune" when worn as an amulet, and to those fortunate to be born in the month of April, with which the stone was associated or represented, the wearer was guarded from all evil.

The star stone is found principally in Ceylon, invariably in soil peculiar to rubies and sapphires. Indeed, it is composed of the same constituent "corundum," its chatoyant, or star rays, being caused by the presence of what the natives call "silk." It is found in many different colors, from pale blue, pink and white to deep dark blue, ruby and purple. The blue are termed sapphire stars, the red ruby stars. It is always cut en cabochon, the star dividing into six rays at the apex. It is next in hardness to the diamond.

To the Electors of the
West Ward

Ladies and Gentlemen,

At the request of a number of the ratepayers of the above Ward, I have consented to offer myself as a candidate for the Council at the approaching Municipal Elections.

If elected I will do everything in my power to promote the best interests of the city.

Holiday Announcement

WE take pleasure in once more presenting to you our Annual Announcement in connection with the Holiday Trade, and would respectfully call your attention to the fact that we have secured from the leading markets of the world an up-to-date stock of holiday goods, suitable for Christmas and New Year presents, which we are selling at a bargain. This year we are better prepared than ever to cater to the wants of the public.

In both quality and prices, we defy competition. Our expenses are comparatively insignificant as compared with the other larger stores in the city, and the fact that we have not got to look to the profits from our bookstore trade to carry us through, but have a large printing and book manufacturing business as well, in addition to our rapidly expanding newspaper business.

We have made expensive preparations for the Holiday Trade, and invite the public to call and inspect our stock and get our prices before purchasing elsewhere.

Calendars, Handy Booklets, Christmas and Text Cards

We have in Calendars, Booklets, Christmas and Text Cards a stock of the latest designs, and a very large assortment to choose from. Special discounts to parties taking a number.

Fancy Goods

In Fancy Goods, as in every other line, our stock is up-to-date. We can supply you with presents for young and old, rich and poor, wives, husbands and sweethearts. We only give a mere hint here of the articles with which our shelves are indexed:—Brush and Comb Setts, Manicure Setts, Writing Desks, Collar and Cuff Boxes, Glove and Handkerchief Boxes, Ladies' and Gentlemen's Travelling Companions, Jewel Cases, Photo Boxes, Albums, etc., etc. These goods are all new, and made in designs and of material not shown before.

Books for All

We ask an inspection of our stock and prices. We aim to give our customers the best possible value for the money. Dainty Gift Books, Padded Poems, and an endless variety of Cloth and Leather Bound Works. Also Bibles, Hymnals, Children's Illustrated Books, etc.

Games for Young and Old

Our stock in Games is very complete, including Fishpond, Flips, Game of India, Halma, The Century Ride, Lost Heir, Authors, Checkers, Dominoes, Nations, Lotto and all the popular 10 cent games.

New Souvenir Novelties and Small Wares

The following are but a few of the many very desirable articles suitable for Yuletide remembrances: Purses, Card Cases, Burnt Leather Blotters, Pen Wipers and Book Markers: Tea, Crumb, Pin and Ash Trays, Ink Wells, Bon-bon Dishes, Japanese Cups and Saucers, Bread and Butter Plates, Rose Bowls, Vases, Biscuit Jars, all kinds of bric-a-brac, etc.

For Dolls We Lead—Others Follow

We propose to lead this season in the Doll Trade, and are showing Dolls at prices that defy competition. Handsome Kid Dolls, Dressed Dolls in all sizes, Bisque and Composition Dolls, Wax and China Dolls, Rubber Balls and Dolls that may be used for Fancy Pin Holders. Dolls from 1c up.

Please Remember

1.—That The Times Bookstore has everything marked close to cost.
2.—We can sell cheaper than any other house. The reason we can afford to do so is, because our expenses are practically nil compared with other concerns.
3.—We are large manufacturers of stationery supplies and books, employing about 40 persons, so that in these lines we have goods at first cost.
4.—We sell to the wholesale trade, who again sell to the bookstores and stationers throughout the country, so that by purchasing direct from us you save, in many cases, the profits of two "middle men."
5.—The Times Bookstore is confident that it can give you satisfaction, and would urge an early inspection of our stock before the rush begins. You only have to select what you want and have the goods put aside for delivery when required.

Soliciting the favor of your esteemed patronage, and wishing you the compliments of the season, we remain,

Very respectfully yours,

Times Bookstore

THE TIMES BUILDING, 141 HUNTER ST.

P. S.—If you have any books to bind at any time, kindly let us hear from you, and we will quote prices and show samples of our work. We make a specialty of printing Wedding, At Home and Calling Cards. A trial order is all we ask. We leave the rest to you.

THE TIME OF HER LIFE

Result of a Visit to the "Shores of Bohemia."

By CONSTANCE D'ARCY MACKAY

One morning when Billy and I were lingering over our coffee and rolls Betty came in with a [illegible] air and an [illegible] letter in her hand.

"Listen to this!" she exclaimed. "Eleanor Cuyler is coming to New York to visit her aunt, and she says she simply must see us because she's always wanted to visit the 'shores of Bohemia.'"

"The shores of what?" said Billy. "I'm sure there's nothing bohemian about us."

"That's just it," [illegible] Betty. "Now Miss Cuyler doesn't see it that way. She's daft about people who 'do things,' and she says she never met any [illegible] that she only came in [illegible] quite informally, and [illegible]. She thinks that because Kate [illegible] and you're an artist and we all live in a [illegible]—I must [illegible]—we are—well, we are queer and unconventional."

"Who is this Eleanor Cuyler?" said Billy, with a [illegible].

"She's a Philadelphia girl Kate and I met when we were in the mountains last summer. She was awfully nice to us in ever so many ways, and now it's our turn to do something for her. It's no use suggesting the matinee or a luncheon. Eleanor's rich as Croesus and tired of all that, and there's nothing else we can afford. Oh, I don't see what we're going to do!" And Betty puckered her brows in despair.

"Do!" cried Billy. "Why, it's as plain as day! Satisfy her craving for the unconventional! If we're not bohemians we can at least put up a good imitation of the real thing. We can ask the [illegible] they'll add a continental savor. And there's Perry Dashwood; he can sing [illegible] better than any one I ever heard. We'll get Cynthia to come and [illegible] Worthington [illegible]. They can pretend they're [illegible]. Cynthia will be an actress just starting on her career and Worthington a struggling musician. [illegible] is the right touch, isn't it? [illegible] Monday. Write and invite Miss Cuyler for Wednesday evening. Bohemians aren't supposed to give much notice when they ask people to their parties." And Billy looked over at [illegible] and laughed.

While Betty was [illegible] writing her note I went to explain things to Aunt Pattie. Aunt Pattie has worked for us ever since we were children, and nothing we do ever surprises her, so she fell in with our plan at once. "But I wouldn't be a bohemian if I tried," she declared. "I wouldn't know how to act, and I'd make you all miserable and myself too. [illegible]."

"But you'll miss all the fun," I [illegible].

Aunt Pattie's eyes twinkled. "Oh, I mean to be there!" she cried. "Since we have no maid I'm going to serve the dinner myself."

In vain we all protested, coaxed, commanded. Aunt Pattie was firm in insisting that as Miss Cuyler had never seen her it would make no possible difference. Yet somehow it did to me, for I could imagine with what horror my [illegible] might look on such proceedings. Even after I had written to him and explained the circumstances I was tormented by misgivings, for, although he didn't know it, his good opinion mattered more to me than anything else in the world.

All Wednesday Betty and I worked like [illegible]. We had always rather prided ourselves on the artistic arrangement of our little parlor. Now, in order to make it look bohemian we had hunted it with all the bizarre and [illegible] things we could lay our hands on. Billy's delicate water colors were jostled by [illegible] posters, theatrical photographs [illegible] the mantel, and [illegible] littered the table. It certainly looked queer, but, as Betty and I [illegible], we didn't. Betty was [illegible] in a [illegible] gown, and I wore my black [illegible] was just [illegible] one of Harry Rockminster's [illegible].

"There she is!" cried Betty hysterically. "Now, don't act as if anything unusual were happening!"

Eleanor Cuyler was [illegible] in her greeting, and [illegible] of her joy in coming [illegible] when we crossed the threshold of the parlor, the sight of [illegible], which assured that our work had not been in vain. Then Billy came forward, and the loose blouse and soft tie which he wore for the occasion made him look as if he had stepped straight out of the Latin quarter. But Miss Cuyler wasn't any more surprised at his appearance than he was at hers. Somehow neither Betty nor I had told him what a beauty Miss Cuyler was—a childish little beauty with a fluff of golden hair and deep blue eyes that opened very wide when anything astonished her.

Perry Dashwood and Harry Rockminster came early, but there wasn't a sign of Cynthia and Worthington.

"They're half an hour late already," said Betty to me in an aside. "What on earth can be keeping them? I'm afraid the dinner will be spoiled."

Something of our uneasiness reached Billy, and he turned abruptly to Betty.

"I really think we'd better not wait for the others," he said. "They may be quite late. You never can tell what may happen on the shores of Bohemia."

But we were hardly seated before we heard the turn of Worthington's latchkey and the swish of Cynthia's skirt down the hall. She made a dramatic pause at the dining room door and looked perfectly dazzling in a crimson Spanish costume glittering with spangles.

"I hope you won't mind my coming in costume," she said. "We were kept late at rehearsal, and there wasn't time to change. I met Worthington on the stairs," she continued nonchalantly. "He'll be in in a moment. He's a musician, Miss Cuyler, and you know what uncertain hours musicians are forced to keep, especially when they are young and struggling."

Cynthia moved toward her chair with sinuous grace. She said afterward that the Spanish costume had entered into her blood and she wasn't responsible for anything she did. Neither was Worthington, for he wore a peculiar, shabby black coat and carried his violin under his arm. But his crowning glory was his hair, or perhaps I should say his wig, which was very long and straight.

"'The Music Master,' by Jove!" ejaculated Harry Rockminster.

Yet not once did a triumphant gleam illumine the eyes of Signor Worthington. To this day I've always wondered how he managed to keep that dreamy, abstracted expression. Of course I knew I could count on Cynthia and Worthington, but I never knew I could count on them to such an extent as that. Eleanor Cuyler was delighted. She looked at them and listened to them in open eyed wonder as if they were beings from another world. And all my fears of what Harry Rockminster would think were set at rest when he whispered, "I say, isn't this a stunning lark?"

And now if Aunt Pattie didn't act too much like a lady our bohemian dinner would be a complete success, but one false note would ruin everything. I toyed with the grapefruit as long as possible. Then I rang the bell. As I did so I kept my eyes fixed on Billy. He sat opposite the kitchen door and would be the first to see Aunt Pattie. The kitchen door creaked, swung open, and the expression on Billy's face signaled me that something had happened.

"Auntie," he burst out and then checked himself.

From behind me came a soft voice with the pleasant slurred accent of the south. "I reckon yo's s'prised to see me, Mass' Billy! Yo didn't know I was to cook de dinner, did yo'?"

I turned and beheld Aunt Pattie, and yet not Aunt Pattie, for the face that beamed from beneath a bandanna turban was as black as the ace of spades.

To Miss Cuyler this apparition was nothing more than a loquacious darky servant, but the rest of us were in confusion of mind. We have vowed ever since that we owed the whole success of the evening to Aunt Pattie, for not only was the dinner deliciously cooked and splendidly served, but it went with a whirl. Harry Rockminster was never more brilliant in his life and told stories of [illegible] in which he had taken part. Cynthia [illegible] "[illegible]" with [illegible] dramatic fervor. [illegible] Worthington played [illegible] in which Perry [illegible] pumpkin chorus. The [illegible] through the blue [illegible] the radiant face of Miss Cuyler.

When dinner was over she leaned back in her chair with a little sigh. "It's just as I fancied Bohemia would be," she declared. "Oh, what fun you all must have gathering round the table this way every evening. Of course it's just a common occurrence to you, but I shall never forget it. Never! And I can't thank you enough for this glimpse of it."

Billy said she thanked him fervently again when he saw her to her carriage. "I've had the time of my life," she reiterated—"the time of my life!"

"Well, she wasn't the only one," said Worthington. He had taken off his wig and was mopping his brow, while the rest of us sat about the dining room table nibbling.

"Miss Cuyler did seem to appreciate it," said Cynthia.

"Appreciate!" cried Billy. "I think it's we who ought to appreciate her coming. Why, just to look at her is a feast! She has exactly the kind of eyes I want for my 'Queen Titania.'"

"Why don't you ask her to pose for it, then?" suggested Cynthia slyly.

"I have asked," answered Billy quite simply, "and we are going to begin tomorrow."

"Whiff," sniffed Betty. "I smell orange blossoms!" And under cover of the laughter Harry turned to me.

"Miss Cuyler's had the time of her life, Billy's had the time of his, and there's just one thing wanting to give me the time of mine." His lips were smiling, but there was no mistaking the look in his eyes.

"I'd hate to spoil your evening by saying 'No,'" I whispered back. And then, although I was so happy, I had an absurd desire to cry, and if Billy hadn't suddenly interrupted with a toast to the shores of Bohemia goodness knows what might have happened!

Glass That Won't Break.

Baccarat, France, has the honor of producing the first glass that is unbreakable. The new process has been successfully applied to the manufacture of lamp chimneys for use in coal mines containing [illegible] firedamp. The glassmakers of Baccarat have also succeeded in increasing the elasticity of the glass. This they accomplish by adding magnesia and oxide to the ordinary crystal glass.—Success Magazine.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for Addition to Refinery, Royal Mint, Ottawa, Ont.," will be received at this office until 4.00 P.M., on Wednesday, January 14, 1914, for the above mentioned addition.

Plans, specification and form of contract can be seen and forms of tender obtained at this Department.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made on the printed forms supplied, and signed with their actual signatures, stating their occupations and places of residence. In the case of firms, the actual signature, the nature of the occupation, and place of residence of each member of the firm must be given.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank, payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of Public Works, equal to ten per cent. (10 p.c.) of the amount of the tender, which will be forfeited if the person tendering decline to enter into a contract when called upon to do so, or fail to complete the work contracted for. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By order,
R. C. DESROCHERS,
Secretary.

Department of Public Works,
Ottawa, December 24, 1913.

Newspapers will not be paid for this advertisement if they insert it without authority from the Department.—47485.

TENDERS FOR PULPWOOD LIMIT.

TENDERS will be received by the undersigned up to and including [illegible], the [illegible] of December next for the right to cut pulpwood on a certain area situated on the [illegible] River in the District of [illegible].

Tenderers shall state the amount they are prepared to pay as bonus in addition to the Crown dues of [illegible] per cord for Spruce, and [illegible] per cord for other pulpwoods, or such other rates as may from time to time be fixed by the Lieutenant-Governor in Council, for the right to operate a pulp mill and a paper mill on or near the area referred to.

Such tenderers shall be required to erect a mill or mills on or near the territory and to manufacture the wood into pulp and paper in the Province of Ontario—the paper mill to be erected when directed by the Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines.

Parties making tender will be required to deposit with their tender a marked cheque payable to the Honourable the Treasurer of the Province of Ontario, for ten per cent. of the amount of their tender, to be forfeited in the event of their not entering into an agreement to carry out the conditions, etc.

The highest or any tender not necessarily accepted.

For particulars as to description of territory, capital to be invested, etc., apply to the undersigned.

W. H. HEARST,
Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines
Toronto, Ontario, September 17th, 1913

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS.

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at the office of any Local Agent of Dominion Lands (not sub-agent), on certain conditions.

Duties.—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required in every case, except when residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside of his homestead. Price $3 per acre. Duties—Six months residence in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and 50 acres extra cultivation. The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land after report by Homestead Inspector on application for patent.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy of the Minister of the Interior.

THE MASTER SUN.

Sirius, the Dog Star, May Be the Center of Attraction.

Astronomers once believed that the entire starry universe revolved around a center of attraction, and the star named Alcyone, in the group of the Pleiades, was selected by Maedler as marking that great center.

It has long been known, however, that Maedler's conclusion, which was based on the apparent motions of the stars, was incorrect, and if any universal center exists it has not yet been discovered. In fact, many of the stars seem to be moving in straight lines, some in one direction and some in another, and among these is our own sun. But it is possible that further observations will show that all the stars are really moving in curved lines.

In the meantime it has been found that there are certain groups or sets of stars which appear to travel together. To what set, if any, the sun belongs we do not yet know, but Doberck has presented reasons for thinking that those stars whose distances have been measured (that is to say, those which are nearest to us) group themselves around Sirius, the dog star, in a manner similar to that in which the inner planets are grouped around the sun.

If this be correct Sirius may possibly be the master sun of which our orb of day is a distant satellite.—Harper's Weekly.

GLYCERIN.

In Many Ways It Is a Most Remarkable Substance.

One of the great advantages of glycerin in its chemical employment is the fact that it neither freezes nor evaporates under any ordinary temperature. No perceptible loss by evaporation has been detected at a temperature less than 200 degrees F., but if heated intensely it decomposes with a smell that few persons find themselves able to endure. It burns with a pale flame, similar to that from alcohol, if heated to about 500 degrees and then ignited. Its nonevaporative qualities make the compound of much use as a vehicle for holding pigments and colors [illegible] stamping and typewriter ribbons, carbon papers and the like.

If the pure glycerin be exposed for a long time to a freezing temperature it crystallizes with the appearance of sugar candy; but, these crystals being once melted, it is almost an impossibility to get them again into the congealed state. If a little water be added to the glycerin no crystallization will take place, though under a sufficient degree of cold the water will separate and form crystals, amid which the glycerin will remain in its natural state of fluidity. If suddenly subjected to intense cold, pure glycerin will form a gummy mass which cannot be entirely hardened or crystallized. Altogether it is quite a peculiar substance.

The Barbarous Suttee.

Suttee, or the practice of immolating widows on their husband's funeral pyres in India, was first attacked by the British government in 1829. It was on Dec. 4 of that year that Lord William Bentinck carried a resolution in council by which all who abetted suttee were declared guilty of "culpable homicide." In the year 1817 700 widows were burned alive in Bengal alone, but since the passing of the act the practice has entirely died out. Suttee was really a primitive rite, a survival from barbarous times, and not sanctioned by Hinduism, the passage in the Vedas supporting it being a [illegible] misinterpretation. But no previous governor had the courage to violate the British tradition of religious toleration. Lord William Bentinck also suppressed thuggism, which made strangling a religious rite to the goddess Kali.

An Ancient Tragedy.

A historical paper in Lord Montagu's collection in London tells of a strange tragedy "done in Holborn, a little before Christmas," several centuries ago: "A boy seven years old came up into a gentleman's chamber and prattled to him and drew his sword and flourished with it. The gentleman, being in bed, [illegible] The boy [illegible] the gentleman [illegible] the gentleman. [illegible] good words to follow them. If they did not sleep peacefully in their sunny graves then were pure lives and good deeds vain. Notwithstanding there was the talk, now one, now another, glimpsed them walking hand in hand up the broad stairway or flitting at dusk through the overgrown rose garden.

Dennison heard all this avidly. He liked whatever was old world and unusual. Perhaps that was why, when the rain at last sent everybody scurrying within, he drew a little apart from the merrymakers and stood staring up the dim vista of the great stairway. And thus he was the first to see twin wraiths, slim and girlish, floating rather than walking, glide out of the upper dusk and, linking arms, fall into the swing of a waltz. They were all in vaporous white—swirls of it covered them from head to foot. They kept perfect time and moved so in unison it was like the rhythm of one soul rather than two.

Dennison felt his heart beat faster. All the rest had accepted the veiled dancers as but new come maskers. He nodded toward them, saying in Hartwell's ear: "Don't you hate monopoly? Let's break that one up."

Then in hurried whispers he told what he had seen. Hartwell suppressed a whistle, then said with a quick breath: "I'll go you. Take the taller one."

"No; I'm going to dance with the other. Ghostlike masqueraders don't demand formal presentation." Dennison whispered back as he shot out to intercept the whirling visions. In a wink he had his chosen one fast, and Hartwell perforce took the other. Together they made the round of the long hall, not once, but many times, the ghost dancers moving so lightly they did not even breathe more quickly, although their mortal partners at last were panting.

"How did you think of it? How dared you do it?" Hartwell asked as he whirled and wheeled. The wraith in his arms answered evenly: "We've been doing it this long time. It was a sort of outlet. Selina first thought of it after we had found the lost key to the big gate, but she never would have had the courage to do it if I had not egged her on. She wouldn't dare be here tonight if I had let her think. We have always gone home before 9 o'clock and climbed in by the library window. This time we shall have to be ghosts until morning. We can get in on the heels of the milkman, and of course we shall run away before unmasking time. What would Aunt Wilton say if anybody told her we had been here?"

"Probably disinherit you. I should like that," Hartwell returned. "Then you wouldn't think, you couldn't, I am fortune hunting when I say I love you"—

What more he might have said nobody knows. Just then there came wild cries of fire and after them general panic. Despite the pouring rain, helped by the raging wind, the old house burned like tinder. Hartwell had for a moment left Bess. When he looked for her he saw two vapory creatures fleeing up the stairway.

Bess and Selina, madly bent on avoiding discovery, meant to vanish that way and escape up the back stairs by which they had come. A wall of flame blocked them. As they ran back from it they heard a shout: "Stand still! We are coming!" Then up the long main stair came Hartwell and Dennison, to rush down half a minute later through licking flames, each with a girl's inanimate figure crushed against his breast.

Right there was settled the question of a double wedding. Even Aunt Wilton insisted on it. Her nieces, she said, needed stronger guardians. Both matches have turned out to be ideal, so much so that Hartwell and Dennison say they shudder to think they gained such happiness by barely the ghost of a chance.

Quick Growing Trees.

A remarkable tree has been discovered about the region of Lake Chad. Its power of increase in every way is remarkable. In a few months an extensive tract of land, we read, became an impenetrable forest. In one season it is said to grow to the height of from four to five meters—in other words, from thirteen to over sixteen feet. Its foliage is said to resemble the mimosa, and its branches are thorny. The wood can be cut into planks, and the natives work it up into canoes. The Tilho mission has utilized the wood for making tables and doors.—London Globe.

At a Pinch.

There's a certain minister whose duties sometimes call him out of the city. He has always arranged for some one of his parishioners to keep company with his wife and little daughter during these absences. Recently, however, he was called away so suddenly that he had no opportunity of providing a guardian.

The wife was very brave during the early evening. But after dark had fallen her courage began to fail. She stayed up with her little girl till there was no excuse for staying any longer and then took her upstairs to bed.

"Now, go to sleep, dearie," she said. "Don't be afraid. God will protect you."

"Yes, mother," answered the little girl, "that'll be all right tonight, but the next time let's make better arrangements."—Human Life.

Many Reasons Why Liquid Cough Mixtures Can't Cure Bronchitis

But the Healing Fumes of Catarrhozone, Which are Breathed to the Furthest Recesses of the Bronchial Tubes, Bring Quick Relief and Sure Cure.

Every sufferer from coughs, colds, bronchitis and all throat and chest ailments needs a soothing, healing medicine which goes direct to the breathing organs in the chest and lungs, attacks the trouble at the source, disperses the germs of disease, and cures the ailment thoroughly. And this medicine is "Catarrhozone."

The germ-killing balsamic vapor mixes with the breath, descends through the throat, down the bronchial tubes, and finally reaches the deepest air cells in the lungs. All parts are soothed with rich, pure, medicinal essences, whereas with a syrup the affected parts could not be reached, and harm would result through [illegible] the stomach with drugs.

"I have been a chronic sufferer from catarrh in the nose and throat for over eight years. I think I have spent four hundred dollars trying to get relief. I have spent but six dollars on Catarrhozone, and have been completely cured, and, in fact, have been well for some time. Catarrhozone is the only medicine I have been able to find that would not only give temporary but will always cure permanently.

Yours sincerely, (Signed) WILLIAM HAGAN, Brockville, Ont.

For absolute, permanent cure, use Catarrhozone. Two months' outfit costs $1.00; smaller size, 50c., at all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Company, Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Canada.

OTONABEE TOWNSHIP COUNCIL

Regular Monthly Meeting — Large Number of Accounts Paid.

A statutory meeting of the Otonabee Council was held on Dec. 15th.

On motion the reeve and clerk was authorized to sign a lease from the township to the trustees of Stewart's Memorial Church leasing for a term of 20 years part of the road allowance for a horse shed site. Jias Annie Sinclair was granted $5.00 per quarter on condition that the Foley estate pay $10 per quarter. Messrs. Anderson and Dywell were authorized to have a railing erected on the dangerous part of the approach to Wallace Point Bridge. Mr. John Laing was present stating that he had been corresponding with the Board of Railway Commissioners to take steps to have the G.T.R. safeguard the travelling public at the very bad crossing on the 6th line near Keene Station; he had a communication from the Board saying that it had ordered the G.T.R. Co. to install within 60 days an electric bell. Mr. Laing is of the opinion that a overhead road bridge would serve the purpose much better than a bell, and requested the Council to urge this upon the Board, which was done by passing a resolution instructing the clerk to write to the Board urging the overhead bridge.

The following deputy returning officers were appointed: J. Hastie, Wm. O'Leary, A. Shearer, L. A. Eason, J. A. Drummond, F. E. Sargent, Geo. Robertson. Poll clerks: Alex. Gillespie, W. H. Bedford, R. Knox, Jas. McFarlane, S. M. Cousris, W. C. Howson, Fred Stewart.

The following accounts were passed: W. J. Bullock, $11.33, for lambs injured by dogs, and J. C. Hope $6.06; R. W. Eason, inspecting $1.50; C. F. Kitney, cement, $2.75; G. W. Robinson, cedar, $1; J. INDICTMENT TALK IN PRISON PROBE

Alleged Mistreatment of Prisoners at Blackwell's Island Expected to Lead to True Bills

New York, Dec. 28.—More disclosures are expected to-day when the grand jury sworn in by Supreme Court Justice Seabury last May files its report regarding prison conditions on Blackwell's Island.

Assistant District-Attorney Du Vivier, who is conducting the investigation, expects to get documentary evidence. Chief among the documents to be used are records in the institutions on the island. While Du Vivier said that he was not sure just what these records would show it was expected that they would materially aid the investigators. Mr. Du Vivier said that it would probably be a week before the evidence so far gathered could be shaped into a report to District-Attorney Whitman. The name of the prisoner whose death has been traced to alleged mistreatment will be made public then, it is expected.

When the grand jury was appointed, eight specific cases of cruelty and severe mistreatment had been reported. Once the inquiry began, however, more cases came to light, and there was uncovered, according to the information in the hands of Mr. Du Vivier, a system of brutality in the prison.

There were beatings, manhandling, incarceration in dark cells, it is alleged, and other acts against the law. Six or seven cases of brutal treatment are said to have resulted in injury of a marked character.

The investigation of the island seemed to be a surprise to city officials. Commissioner of Correction Whitney was at the Criminal Courts building yesterday and saw Assistant District Attorney Gold. Speaking about the grand jury's work, he said: "This is the first I have heard that he had made an investigation of the island. I never heard of it before. I want to say, however, that if the [illegible] has discovered that any wrong was committed there I will be the first one to help them punish the persons concerned. They may rest assured of the aid of the department."

A WONDERFUL EVANGELIST

Billy Sunday Stirring Pittsburgh in Religious Matters.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Dec. 27.—Pittsburgh is stirred from centre to circumference over the coming of "Billy" Sunday, who is scheduled to open one of his characteristic evangelistic campaigns in this city to-morrow. Pittsburgh is the largest city that the noted evangelist has ever invaded and he has made his plans in proportion. A monster tabernacle has been erected in the heart of the city and a mammoth chorus has been trained to lead the singing. Three hundred ushers have been trained in their duties and one hundred dishpans of largest size are in readiness for use in taking up the collection. While the voices of 10,000 persons have been raised in nightly prayer in preparation for the opening of the campaign, an equal or larger number of persons have been active in opposing it. The opposition, which includes a number of ministers and many prominent church workers, went so far as to pray an injunction to restrain the building of the tabernacle.

THE WATER COMMISSIONERSHIP MR. J. B. McWILLIAMS' ADDRESS

He Gives a Few Facts and Figures for the Ratepayers to Think Over

Has Always Been a Friend of the Working Man in the Past

Gives Reasons Why Ratepayers Should Give Him Their Vote

Mr. J. B. McWilliams, on rising said:

As you are aware I am a candidate for Public Utilities Commissioner, and I believe at the present time it is a far more important position than Mayor of the City. Whether you are in sympathy or not with the actions of the Council in this Hydro-Electric business, you must admit we are in to a contest and have to carry it out to a successful issue. The ratepayers voted $120,000 to purchase plant and make the necessary changes, and about $[illegible] has already been expended. The city valuators value the plant at $94,000 and the company's valuators at $300,000. It is not at all likely the city and company will agree, and if some satisfactory arrangement is not made the question will have to be left to arbitration, and we will have to take the property at the arbitrators' valuation. Some people are badly frightened when they think of the amount the city will have to pay, but I can see no reason why we should be frightened. The company had to issue bonds to pay for the dam, power house and plant, and not only has the company to pay interest on the bonds, but dividends to the shareholders. If the company is so anxious to retain the property and pay interest and dividends. Surely if the business is properly managed the city can pay interest on the bonds when there are no dividends to be paid to shareholders.

This question will require to be carefully thought out by the Commission, and a good straight business proposition submitted to the people. I can see no reason why we cannot be prepared, and I for one, if elected, will devote my whole time and energy to make it a success, and those who know me will admit I have the energy to carry it through. Now is not the time to find fault with the Council or discuss their mistakes, for the future of the city is at stake. Instead of fault-finding we must meet the enemy with a united front and let them see that the ratepayers of Peterborough have both the courage and ability to make this business a success. One of the commissioners, I understand, has shown that he is not in hearty sympathy with the Hydro-Electric, and that makes it more necessary for you to elect a Commissioner in whom you have entire confidence.

Mr. Hicks and I are very old friends and he has proved himself a good business man by the way he has managed the coal business, but he has a large business to attend and would either have to neglect the city business or his own, and I leave you to judge which would suffer. Besides, we know that the men who brought him out and are working for his election are in active opposition to the Hydro-Electric.

I have always been in favor of municipal ownership, and in an address to the ratepayers nearly 20 years ago was the first to publicly advocate taking over the water works and gas lighting. Had my advice been taken the city would be in a different position today. I offered the city the Burleigh Falls water power for [illegible], but it was turned down by some of the council at that time, although the same men a short time after made me an offer of $8,000 for a three-fourths interest. I also went to Ottawa to see Mr. Blair, Minister of Railways and Canals, about Nos. 4 and 5 dams. He asked me if it was for a company or for the town, and when I told him it was for the town, he said, "You know I am in favor of government and municipal ownership, and to prove it will give the town Nos. 4 and 5 dams at $1.00 per horse power, the only condition being that one of the dams must be developed inside three years."

Since I offered Burleigh Falls power

STATEMENT WAS ABSOLUTELY FALSE

A letter appeared in last night's Examiner, over the signature of "Workingman," which is absolutely untrue. The writer says: "In the Morning Times of recent date, Mr. Burnham takes great credit upon himself of getting the pay cheques of those working on the Trent Canal for Christmas."

We can tell the writer that the item referred to was published without Mr. Burnham's knowledge or consent. The information regarding the cheques came to us from another source altogether, Mr. Burnham having no more to do with it than the man in the moon.

THE MEN WERE PAID

Superintendent McClellan Says the Canal Men Were Paid.

A Times reporter called on Mr. J. H. McClellan, Superintendent of the Trent Canal, at his office last night, and showed him the letter which appeared in the Examiner, on the payment of the men on the Canal, and asked him concerning the charges.

Mr. McClellan said that November cheques amounted to about $2,350, and the December cheques $3,500. Every man was paid up to December 21st.

"Have you many men working now?"

"No, it is always quiet with us from about December 15th to Jan. 15th."

"Has your department done as much work this season as done in other years?"

"Yes, quite as much, if not more."

"Did you get as large an appropriation last season as usual?"

"Yes."

CITY IN NEED OF SOME NEW BLOOD

Mr. A. H. Stratton Thinks That the Council Should be Composed of Representative Business Men.

At the municipal nominations yesterday, Mr. A. H. Stratton in his address, said:

If I were to consider my nomination from a selfish standpoint, I would decline this kindly meant honor from friends. It is said that this city is in need of representative men who are willing and ready to work for a bigger and better city. There are many things that tempt a man who is interested in his city's welfare and the desire for the greatest and best things for it often tempts a person to sacrifice for its interests. If this city realizes its potential greatness, it must find representative men who will stand fearlessly for the city's rights.

Large Taxpayer—I am among the larger tax payers, and if elected will make every effort to keep our taxes down to the low water mark.

Manufacturers.—I am a strong advocate for the encouragement of existing manufacturers and if elected will give every assistance I can to procure new manufacturers for our city.

The Municipal Lighting System.—I am in favor of extending the Hydro Electric system throughout the city, and especially in favor of business like methods being used to further this project and in seeing that the people who voted so unanimously for it get the greatest benefit from it at the least possible cost consistent with efficiency.

The Workingman.—I am in favor of anything that will benefit the workingman and find employment for them at good wages, as this will surely help the business man and tend towards a bigger and better city.

There are two by-laws before the people, one to build a bridge at or near Dalhousie street. The other for the purchase of a new auto truck and chemical engine. Increased fire protection is something that will have to be gone into carefully and the city's interests safeguarded against any serious conflagration.

New Streets—Another thing to be considered is the opening up of new streets. There are a number marked on the map that have never been opened up. This can be done cheaper now than ten years hence. This is the first time I have come before the electors of Peterborough for any honors whatever, as I never felt that I had the time to devote to civic matters. I now feel that I have the time and the inclination and I want you, the electors, to show your appreciation by electing me as alderman for the business or Centre Ward by a bumper majority.

I think it will pay you to do so. I have the time, I have the energy and will promise you that I will use the best that is in me to make this a bigger and better city. I thank Mr. Mason, who nominated me, and Mr. Kingan who seconded my nomination; it is now up to the electors to place me at the head of the polls.

Proposed by A. Brown and H. P. Lindsay.

The new men for the Board of Education are Messrs. Claude Rogers, manufacturer; John H. Smith, foreman; and J. M. Greene, merchant. All the members whose terms expire with the year were nominated.

GEORGE A. GILLESPIE.

Mr. George A. Gillespie was well received and said:

It was my wish to have Mayor Bradburn occupy the chair for another year, to finish the work he had begun, but circumstances, for which I am not responsible, have prevented this, and I am asking your support on Monday next, realizing that my opposition, Alderman Buller and Mr. Hartley, have the same right to advance their claims as well as myself.

For five years I have been a member of your City Council, and have taken my share of the responsibility in connection with the work accomplished by the various Committees. I have kept in close touch with public affairs of the City, and in asking your support for the position of Chief Magistrate of our City, I fully realize the responsibility of the placing at the head of the Council, for the year 1914, the best available man who can guide and direct to a successful finish the very important undertakings now before the ratepayers.

Hydro Electric

Most [illegible] of the present time [illegible] in the light and power question. I wish to remove from the minds of the public, an apprehension they may have had in regard to the installation of the Hydro-Electric System. The enterprise is one where the profits go to reduce the cost to the people. There are no profits to pay to any shareholder, but each ratepayer is a shareholder and a partner in the enterprise. The Hydro-Electric policy has worked out well in other municipalities and I believe it will work out well in the City of Peterborough. There are no doubt, difficulties to be overcome, but I fully believe that with the help of Mr. Beck, and the engineers of the Commission, all the difficulties will be overcome, and the public will have the advantage of an up-to-date lighting and power system at cost, with the rates decreasing year by year and the advantage not only to ourselves, but to our children who come after us.

I have been Chairman of the Manufacturers and on the Power Committee for two years and while chairman of this Committee, Peterborough passed through the most critical stage in her history of development. We were practically at a stand still in getting new industries to locate here, but by pursuing a vigorous campaign we were successful in locating three new industries in our city, i.e., The Nermont Marble Works, The Henry Hope and Sons and the DeLaval Dairy and Supply Company. The latter Company, I feel that I can claim it was through my knowledge of the dairy business, able to demonstrate to them that Peterborough was the best place in the Province for them to locate. They have now spent $200,000.00 in plant and buildings in our City and have given employment to 150 of our ratepayers.

I have also been Chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee for the past two years, and while Chairman of their Committee, we have succeeded in putting the fire department of our City in first-class fighting shape, believing that it is important that we protect the home of our citizens and the industries of our City, so that the working man may not be deprived of his daily work through our negligence in not being prepared to fight fires on the shortest possible notice. Our loss by fire during this year, has only amounted to $17,000.

Streets and Pavements

We have this year started the paving of our streets and we hope next year to continue this policy, believing that in the business section of our city, traffic is becoming so heavy that it is absolutely necessary to lay permanent work, believing that it is economy in the end, in the yearly upkeep of our streets. Our Engineering Department is fully alive to our need of better streets, and have recommended to the Board of Works, and to which they have approved, of the placing on our streets next year, a crushed rock, obtainable in the northern part of our City, the cost of which will be less than gravel, and far superior as a wearing material.

Taxation

It has been said and truly said, that the rate of taxation in our city is too high. With this argument I agree, but circumstances have been such that your Council have been unable to prevent the ever increasing tax rate. Our growth has been enormous in the past ten years, practically doubled, and to provide for this, more sewers, sidewalks and roadways have had to be built, and just as in any private concern, the cost of expansion has to be undertaken and provided for before any revenue can.

IF LIGHT IS WANTED OTONABEE POWER CO. WILL SUPPLY IT

But Asks Council to Recommend the Incoming Council to Consider Their Proposition to Sell Their Distributing Plant to the Peterboro Light and Power Co. For $48,000

The City fathers met in special session last night, Mayor W. H. Bradburn presiding. there were also present Aldermen Gillespie, Gordon, Anderson, McIntyre, Johnston, Buller, Duffus, Langford.

On resolution of Ald. Anderson, the debentures and interest for and on the $100,000 borrowed for Hydro-Electric purposes will be made payable in Montreal, Toronto and Peterborough.

PROPOSITION FROM OTONABEE POWER CO.

Mr. D. O'Connell was present in the interests of the Otonabee Power Company, and suggested that the city permit the company to sell their distributing system to the Peterborough Light & Power Co. for $48,000, the Otonabee Power Co. to be allowed to retain their poles and wires on the streets after January 1st. and continue to serve their customers until such time as expropriation proceedings for Hydro-Electric purposes are terminated. In support of this proposition Mr. O'Connell offered that were the Otonabee Power Company's system destroyed, according to a recent resolution of Council, the supplementing of the Peterborough Light & Power Company's distributing plant with poles and wires to complete the city's Hydro-Electric system throughout the whole city, would cost more than the $48,000 valuation put upon their plant by the Otonabee Power Co. Hence, he urged, the acceptance of this proposition would prove an economic measure for the city in general, and an act of justice to the shareholders in the Otonabee Power Company.

Mr. O'Connell in conclusion asked that the Council have placed on their minutes the request of the Otonabee Power Company that they be permitted to sell their distributing plant to the Peterborough Light and Power Co., and that the city council have a reasonable time in which to consider this proposition, accompanied by a resolution recommending the incoming council to consider this question; the Otonabee Power Co. in the meantime to continue serving their customers with power.

Were Council to agree that the Otonabee Power Company sell out to the Peterborough Light & Power Co. for $48,000, the amount in the present expropriation proceedings would have to include this $48,000, which the Council by their act of agreement would recognize as the value of the Otonabee Power Company's distributing plant. Hydro-Electric Engineer Jeffery, however, has advised Council that $[illegible] would cover the value of the plant of the Otonabee Power Company required by the city as a large portion of said plant parallels that of the Peterborough Light & Power Company.

Council could not agree to comply with Mr. O'Connell's request as worded, and referred him for consultation with City Solicitor [illegible] Hall for framing a resolution acceptable to both parties.

The conference between the two legal gentlemen resulted in the following resolution:

Moved by Ald. Johnston, seconded by Ald. Duffus,—Whereas [illegible] the resolution directing the removal of the poles and wires of the Otonabee Power Co. from off the streets, the council has learned that this would inconvenience a number of ratepayers that without prejudice to the interests of the city, council is willing that the poles and wires of the Otonabee Power Co. remain on the streets until further notice from the Council; and that if the proposition made by Mr. O'Connell is put in writing it be referred to the incoming Council.—Carried.

The exact meaning of the foregoing resolution is that the Council will recommend that the Council of 1914 consider the Otonabee Power Company's proposition, get a valuation from the Hydro-Electric Engineers as to the value to the city of the Otonabee Power Company's distributing plant and act accordingly; the Otonabee Power Co. in the meantime to continue furnishing power to their customers.

OPEN AIR SKATING RINKS.

The Water Commissioners wrote, offering to supply the water for an open air skating rink in each ward if the lots for same are forthcoming, and the city supply a man to look after same.

The Mayor offered his lot in the Centre Ward, next to the Bell Telephone Co's exchange on Hunter street for this purpose, which was accepted.

On motion of Ald. Buller and Duffus, the offer of the water Commissioners was accepted, and the incoming Mayor and non-retiring Aldermen were appointed a committee to look for a lot in each of the other wards for open air skating rink purposes.

EXTENSION OF LICENSE.

Moved by Ald. Gordon, seconded by Ald. Anderson,—That Huffman's pool license be extended for two months.—Carried.

DISCRIMINATING AGAINST PETERBOROUGH.

The Mayor reported that the morning train from Havelock to Port McNicholl is diverting considerable trade to Lindsay which would otherwise come to Peterborough were there a morning train from Port McNicholl to Havelock. Lindsay merchants are offering return tickets to farmers and others on this route to trade in Lindsay.

On motion of Ald. Buller the C.P.R. will be asked to give a morning service from Port McNicholl to Havelock to give the people from Bethany and contingent points opportunity to reach Peterborough in time for market.

STREET LIGHTING.

The Peterborough Light and Power Co. propose to continue furnishing power for street lighting purposes until such time as expropriation proceedings of their plant are ended.

The Mayor and chairman of the Power Committee will confer with the City Solicitor and the Hydro-Electric Commission on this proposition.

A LEGAL DILEMMA

Tangle of Red Tape In an English Extradition Case.

GETTING AROUND THE LAW.

Only the Quick Wit of the Canadian Police Inspector Kept a Notorious Criminal In Custody When In Reality He Was as Free as the Air.

The manner in which a prisoner extradited to England from a foreign country is treated while on the voyage home depends very much on the detective who had him in charge and also on whether or no there is any suspicion that he may be contemplating violence either to himself or to others.

For instance, in the case of Jabez Balfour, who was taken to England all the way from Buenos Aires, there was a strong suspicion—probably ill founded—that he contemplated committing suicide. Consequently Inspector Froest, who had him in charge, decided to take no risks that he could possibly avoid.

The regulations do not permit of an unconvicted prisoner being handcuffed on board ship once the vessel has left port, and he must be allowed one hour's exercise on deck each day. These indulgences, if indulgences they may be called, were therefore not withheld from Balfour.

But he got few others. For twenty-three hours out of every twenty-four he was immured in a locked cabin. He was not permitted even to enter the public dining room, his meals being brought to him by Mr. Froest himself after the rest of the passengers had fed. He was, besides, constantly watched and was subjected to a most rigorous search immediately on coming aboard.

His only relaxation was an occasional game of chess with some of the passengers who kindly came to his cabin to play with him by permission and in the presence of his keeper. This sea imprisonment lasted exactly one month and a day, and Balfour afterward declared that it was the most trying experience of a captivity that was destined to continue for nearly twelve years.

One of the longest and in its later stages one of the pleasantest voyages ever undertaken by an unconvicted criminal was that which Charles Hylton Davidson, the notorious forger, made some years back in the custody of Chief Inspector Murray of the Canadian department of justice.

Murray tracked the wanted man to Mexico and secured his extradition to Canada. But then his difficulties began. He could not bring his prisoner to Canada by the direct route through the United States, for immediately Davidson set foot in that country he could have demanded to be released. There was therefore nothing for it but to convey him by way of Jamaica and England and thence back across the Atlantic to Quebec.

On the voyage Murray kept Davidson under close observation, although allowing him considerably more freedom than Froest allowed Balfour. When, however, he had got safely as far as London he was both mortified and astonished at the likelihood of his having had all his trouble for nothing.

The law was, he was told, that a prisoner extradited from a foreign country to a British colony could not be kept in custody in England for longer than twenty-four hours, nor could he be taken as a prisoner on board a British ship sailing from a British port.

Here was a dilemma. Davidson was free as air—had he only known it. But Murray was equal to the occasion. "Look here, Davidson," he said, "I've got you safe. There is only the last stage of the journey to complete. If I allow you to travel saloon with me as an ordinary first class passenger will you give me your word to play me no tricks?"

To this proposition Davidson, knowing nothing of the real state of affairs, was naturally quite ready to agree. And so it came to pass that one of the most notorious criminals Canada has ever known came home in state; free, yet not free, a voluntary prisoner, and yet an involuntary one.—Pearson's Weekly.

The Open Mind in Travel.

To leave oneself behind is perhaps the first and best initiation for travel. As one steps on the train or goes up the gangplank one says farewell to that wearing and aggravating personality who has lived so close to us for months, demanding, exacting, questioning, exhausting us with complaints and breeding troubles. It requires no entire army of Montaigne's to prove to us how "that the spirit often hindereth itself." Fresh fields and pastures new ahead and the hour to throw aside the old and put the best foot foremost bring a new heart as readily as conversion. Care is slipped from the shoulders; the back is turned upon taxing, reiterated obligations, and adventures and strangeness, so exhilarating after a long stage of the accustomed round, are ahead. Montaigne says that some one reported to Socrates that a certain man was in nowise improved by his travels, and he replied, "I can well believe it, since he took himself along."—Louise Collier Willcox in Harper's Bazar.

The Real North Pole.

The popular idea of the compass is that it is an instrument having a freely moving needle which points to the north pole. But the needle points to the north pole when the compass is situated on the meridian of longitude that runs through the north magnetic pole. The real or geographic north pole and the magnetic north pole are not in the same place. The magnetic north pole, toward which the compass needle really points, is situated in the northern part of Canada in northern latitude 70 degrees, 5 minutes and longitude 96 degrees 46 minutes west from Greenwich. It was first visited in 1831 by Sir James Ross. The southern magnetic pole is a corresponding [illegible]

Bedouins and Water.

It is not unusual to hear a Bedouin upon reaching a camp where water is offered him refuse it with the remark, "I drank only yesterday." On the Bedouins' long marches across dry countries the size of the water skins is nicely calculated to just outlast the journey, and they rarely allow themselves to break the habit of abstemiousness, as this would be sure to make their next water fast all the harder. They are accustomed from infancy to regard water as a most precious commodity and use it with religious economy. They know every hollow and nook in the mountains where water may be found. Their camels and goats, which they take with them on their marches to supply them with milk and meat, live principally on the scanty herbage and foliage of the thorny mimosa. Neither men nor animals drink more than once in forty-eight hours. No wonder they can subsist where invaders quickly perish.

Mice That Subsist on Scorpions.

Among the queer forms of animal life that inhabit Death valley is a mouse that has acquired such a taste for scorpions that they form its entire bill of fare. The scorpion carries its formidable armament in the end of its slender, elongated abdomen in the shape of an exceedingly venomous hooked sting. When disturbed it elevates this in the air and goes in search of its disturber. But it is comparatively slow in its motions, while mice are proverbial for their quickness the world over. The mouse learned many generations ago where the scorpion carries its weapon, and when he meets it he leaps at the uplifted abdomen, takes off the sting at a single bite and proceeds to make a meal of his helpless prey. It is supposed to be the only animal that relishes scorpions.

A Point of Information.

"Gentlemen of the jury," said the judge, "if the evidence shows in your minds that pneumonia was the cause of the man's death the prisoner cannot be convicted."

An hour later a messenger came from the jury room.

"The gentlemen of the jury, my lord," he said, "desire information."

"On what point of evidence?"

"None, my lord. They want to know how to spell 'pneumonia.'"—London Answers.

CHRISTMAS APPEAL

FOR

The Hospital for Sick Children

COLLEGE ST., TORONTO

Dear Mr. Editor:—

Thanks for your kindness in allowing me the privilege of appealing at this Christmas time on behalf of the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto.

It would take more space than you can spare to tell of the good work done for the sick and deformed children of this Province. Let me, however, in a few words, tell you of the progress of the work of the Hospital.

One nurse, six little white beds, a few dollars, a few friends—this was the beginning. The beds have grown to 250, the dollars to thousands, the friends to hundreds. 1875, the first year, 44 in-patients, 67 out-patients; 1913, last year, 1,646 in-patients, 25,50[illegible] out-patients; 1875, 1 nurse; 1913, 70 nurses.

Since 1875, thirty-eight years ago, the Hospital has admitted within its walls 21,018 children as in-patients, and 159,221 as out-patients, a total of 180,240, or an average of 4,743 per year. Of the 21,018 in-patients, 15,300 were from Toronto, and 5,718 from other parts of the Province; 10,150 of the total in-patients were cured, and 6,867 were improved.

In the Orthopedic Department last year, of the 1,046 in-patients, 378 were treated for deformities, 25 hip disease, 37 Pott's disease, 2 knock-knees, 30 bow-legs, 63 club feet, 3 lateral curvature of the spine, 44 infantile paralysis, 6 wry neck, and 79 tuberculous disease of knee, hip and ankle. In 1913, the Surgical Apparatus Shop manufactured 427 appliances for in-patients and out-patients, including ankle braces, spinal braces, hip splints, bow-leg splints, club-foot splints, plaster jackets, etc.

In this Department in 38 years nearly 800 boys and girls have been treated for Club Feet and 650 corrected. Half of these came from places outside of Toronto. Surely we have a fair claim for help from the people of this Province.

Will you, the reader of this letter, help to give crippled children a fair start in life?

Busy dollars are better than idle tears. The sympathy that helps is good, but the Hospital has to have the sympathy that works.

While Christmas Bells are ringing to the glory of Him "Who made the lame to walk and the blind to see," give, give, give, and help the Hospital to help God's little ones, upon whom the heavy hand of affliction has been laid.

Will you please send a dollar, or more, if you can spare it, to Douglas Davidson, the Secretary-Treasurer of the Hospital, or

J. ROSS ROBERTSON,
Chairman of the Trustees, Toronto.

THE FREE FOOD FOLLY

The fallacy of Sir Wilfrid's election catch cry of "free food" as a solution of the problem of the high cost of living is exposed by the situation in the United States. The Underwood tariff has taken the duty off foods and yet the cost of living keeps on soaring and new theories are being sought. The business depression is much more serious in the United States than in Canada despite the fact that Laurier's latest trade policy is law in the republic.

The New York Sun in the following editorial sizes up the Laurier campaign about as well as anything we have seen:

"In Canada the Liberal party, led by that accomplished opportunist, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, is preparing to make a campaign for tariff revision downward because the cost of living is too high; while on this side of the international line the Republican party is organizing a campaign to recover control of the House of Representatives because downward revision of the tariff by the Democrats has not reduced the cost of living.

Sir Wilfrid is using the same argument that every Democratic orator pattered on the stump when the Payne Law was on the statute book:

"'If the tariff were reduced as I propose, we would take away the cost which weighs up on the poorer classes of the community.'

"Like the Democratic friends of the consumer, Sir Wilfrid Laurier is 'fighting for the wives, for the mothers, for the children' of the workingmen, the clerks, the teachers, and of all who earn wages and salaries. Yet the Underwood law was no sooner enacted than Canadians saw in it a great advantage to their industries and openly exulted. In the untoward conditions in Canada, despite a propitious tariff law in the States, Sir Wilfrid Laurier sees the opportunity of his party and mightily sounds the slogan of revision downward. But it so happens that in the States trade is also depressed, production restricted, and that there are more idle men in the big cities than it is pleasant to think of, while the cost of living goes up instead of down. The Conservatives in Canada have only to point to prices in the United States under the lower tariff to refute Sir Wilfrid Laurier."

Offensive Breath Caused Usually by Catarrh

A Simple Remedy that Cures Without Drugs.

The American people suffer more from Catarrh than from any other disease. It undermines more constitutions and creates more sickness than all other diseases combined. It is, therefore, very dangerous.

You can't successfully treat Catarrh by internal dosing—you must in some way send a purifying, healing agent through the breathing organs, so that the germs can be reached. This you do every time you inhale Catarrhozone. It's rich essences and healing balsams are breathed all through the nose, throat and lungs, and effectively destroy every trace of Catarrh. This is a proven fact.

I endorse Catarrhozone because I know of six bad cases of Catarrh, including my own, that it has cured. It is a sensible remedy because it is capable of going where the disease is. I believe it cures quicker than other remedy because it gets sooner to the source of the disease than anything else I know of. I had headaches, bad breath, and much stomach trouble associated with my Catarrh, but they have disappeared since using Catarrhozone, which keeps me free from colds, headaches, catarrh and all winter ills." OTTO E. KRAMER, Belleville, Ont.

Catarrhozone is needed in every home. Large size lasts 2 months, price $1.00; small size, 50c.; trial size 25c. At all storekeepers and druggists or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

DOUBLE EDGED JUSTICE

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—The sword of justice, I believe is depicted as having a broken point. The sword of justice as wielded in police courts of Canada is certainly a double-edged weapon. It cuts the delinquent and cuts off the family's living. If in the case of drunks and minor offenders, the majesty of the law is appeased by a fine of $2 or $3, why imprison a man and starve his family for a debt owed when the fine is unpaid? Would it not be more sane and rational to apply a shingle to the offender's dormer window and let him get back to work?

CARRYING VOTERS TO THE POLLS.

Editor Morning Times.

Dear Sir,—My attention is called to your article of to-day's date with reference to new section of the Municipal Act regarding the carriage of Voters to the Poll. Some doubt is expressed by you in respect of the question where friends of a candidate may provide their own conveyances for the carriage free of charge, of Voters on Election Day. I perhaps should not take the liberty of expressing an opinion as to the meaning of the language used, but I would like to point out that the Section in question contains the exact language used in the Provincial Election Act of 1908. Since the latter Act was passed two Provincial elections have been had, and so far as I am aware no one up to the present has questioned the right of friends of the candidate to utilize their own vehicles, free of charge, to assist in getting out the vote. If the narrow interpretation suggested in your article is to be adopted a very large number of persons in this city have already become liable to pay the very heavy penalty imposed by the said Act of 1908.

I would like also to refer briefly to Mr. W. H. Collier's letter, which also appears in to-day's issue of the Times. Mr. Collier's criticism of the Council can be readily met, but the position I desire to take is that Mr. Collier and other critics, who have recently furnished letters to the local papers, are not rendering any service to the city by the action they are taking at the present time. The position of affairs is that the citizens on two occasions have by large majorities expressed their desire that the city should own its own street and domestic lighting system with power to be furnished by the Hydro-Electric Commission. The City Council by their present action are preparing to carry out the expressed will of the people, and have taken definite steps to that end. The proper attitude I submit for the citizens is to back up the Council in their effort to carry out the instructions given them. I have no brief for the Council, but knowing something of the position of affairs I desire to say that I believe the matter will at no distant date be arranged in accordance with the wishes of the people and with no undue expense to them. When this is done I am sure Mr. Collier will be the first to come forward and to express his approval of the action of the Council.

Yours truly,
E. A. Peck.

BOARD OF EDUCATION

To the Electors of the City of Peterborough

Ladies and Gentlemen:

At the request of a large number of the ratepayers of the city, I have consented to be a candidate for the Board of Education, and respectfully solicit your support.

If elected I will do my best to serve you faithfully and well.

Yours very truly,
JOHN H. SMITH,
The People's Candidate.

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY

Ladies and Gentlemen:

The retirement of Mr. W. H. Hill has decided me to acquiesce with the desire of a number of ratepayers who wish me to be a candidate for a seat on the Utilities Commissioners' Board for 1914.

We all realize that the Board of Water Commissioners is, and needs to be, an efficient, business like organization. For the coming year, the management of the local Hydro-Electric will be an important addition to the duties of the Commissioners.

It will be my aim, if honored with a seat at the board, to co-operate with the present members of that commission, and to assist in continuing the success achieved by the Waterworks department.

I shall also endeavor to help, so far as is in my power, with the organization of the local Hydro-Electric system. Having from the beginning felt the advantages of this system, I shall do my utmost to make the public utility of the greatest possible service to the citizens of the municipality.

The qualification which I present to you in support of my candidature is service in your interest for five years on your board of Aldermen. On this record I ask your support at the polls.

Respectfully,
ROBERT HICKS.

To The Electors of The North Ward

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,—

In making an appeal to you for your support in the coming municipal elections, I [illegible] under the handicap I am under of being a stranger to quite a number of you, even though I have been practising my profession here for seven years. My [illegible] is this:

An honest endeavor to show a dollar's value for every dollar expended, and the most economical and efficient government of the city's affairs. To attain this I have acceded to the wishes of a large number of the ratepayers in offering myself as a candidate for Alderman in the North Ward. Should I find it impossible to see you all personally before election day, I wish to make a most earnest appeal for your vote and influence, and can assure you that I will do all in my power to fully merit your confidence.

W. T. HOLLOWAY.

THE WATER COMMISSIONERSHIP
MR. J. B. McWILLIAM'S ADDRESS

however the government has built a new dam, which will raise the water on Lovesick Lake five feet, giving a reservoir eight miles long by about a mile wide. Now, see the position the city would be in if my advice had been taken. The Burleigh Falls power represented 2400 horse power, and Nos. 4 and 5, if developed, together would give 3200 horse power, or taken together, will give 5600 horse power, which at the low figure of $15 would give $84,000 a year revenue to the city, or it could have been given at a nominal figure to induce manufacturers to locate in Peterborough. Besides that power we would have the water works dam, which supplies the city with water and provides about 1000 horse power for the Canadian General.

That is the position of city would be in today only for a number of self-interested men in Peterborough who have been a curse to the city. Some of the same men are to the fore today and doing everything possible to make the Hydro-Electric a failure. Let the ratepayers stamp out this opposition for all time to come. That you may understand where my opposition comes from, will give you a few figures:

One of the parties who has been active in bringing out oppisition to me, claims to represent a very wealthy company. I know $50,000 was offered for one portion of their property and $75,000 was asked. That porperty is assessed at $28,000. Another of the parties owns property he holds at $40,000, assessed at $11,000. Another owns property which he has subdivided, and the price he asks for the different lots amounts to $27,000, assessed at $8600. Another owns a house that could not be built for $10,000 assessed at $2250. Yet these men and others expect to get a rake-off on light and water as well as taxes.

If a number of wealthy men a the city were made to pay their just share for taxes, light and water, the working man, with a house worth from $1000 to $2000, would not require to be assessed for the last dollar his place if worth.

We hear a great deal about the labor candidates and labor votes. All I can say is, if there is one man in Peterborough entitled to that vote, I am, for I was the first man in Peterborough to lead them to victory. When elected to the council some years ago I was made chairman of the board of works. At that time the men employed by the city only received 90c. and $1.00 per day of 10 hours. I refused to be a party to any such arrangement, and after a hard fight in which I had the assistance of the late Adam Dawson, got the wages increased to $1.25 per day and the time reduced to 9 hours.

The men employed on the Canal were paid the same wages, and after the town increased the pay, they struck for higher wages and appointed me their arbitrator, the contractors appointing Archdeacon Casey. It did not take us long to decide that the men on the Canal were doing as hard, if not harder, work than the city employees, and were entitled to the increased wages. That was the beginning of the labor men's success, and ever after they gave me their hearty support and looked to me to champion their cause, and I have no doubt they will give me the same support they did in my past elections.

The Commissioners have been looked upon as great business men, but in my opinion they made a mistake in not having a careful estimate made of the cost of bringing water from Chemong before going to expense of building new dam and power house. Chemong Lake is 180 feet above Little Lake, and there would be pressure enough to force water to the top of the highest building in Peterborough, and all expense in connection with pumping water in the future would be saved. Besides, the water would be pure, as it would pass through a bed of sand, a natural filterer. By taking water from Chemong, would avoid all the pollution from here to Buckhorn.

There must be mismanagement in some quarter when the parks and lawns are allowed to burn up for want of water. If the Commissioners are not to blame it is their duty to find out who is to blame and have it remedied.

Ringing For Gofer.

Among the queer church customs in England is the one observed at Newark parish church, called "ringing for gofer." This custom, which has lasted for over 300 years, arose through a wealthy merchant named Gofer losing himself one October night in the forest that then surrounded Newark. He carried much money, and the forest was infested with thieves. Suddenly he heard the sound of Newark bells and was guided safely home by their music. To commemorate his escape Gofer left a goodly sum for Newark bell ringers on condition that they "rang for Gofer" every year on Sunday nights in October and November.

Hydro—Johnston
To the Electors of NORTH WARD

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

I desire to heartily wish you and all the citizens of Greater Peterborough all the compliments of the season.

As a representative in the City Council, elected by the good people of the North Ward, I have had the honour of representing the people generally in carrying out their wishes for the introduction of the Hydro-Electric system into Peterborough, and I respectfully ask you for a further renewal of the confidence by again re-electing me to that very responsible position.

I stand for a principle that I believe to be in the interests of the masses of the people.

Notwithstanding the opposition offered to the honest work of your Council of 1913 I will continue to help to carry out that work until light and power are in the hands of the municipality and being run in the interests of the people, and not in the interests of a monopoly.

Yours in the good work,

W. J. JOHNSTON

To the Electors of the City of Peterboro

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,

Your vote and influence is solicited for Re-election on your Board of Education.

GILLESPIE FOR MAYOR

To the Electors of the City of Peterboro

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—

At the urgent solicitation of many of my business and personal friends, I have consented to become a candidate for the position of Mayor of your City, and respectfully solicit your votes and influence.

As in the past, I shall not make any rash promises, to gain the vote of any elector, but, if elected, my attitude on every question will be to stand firm for the best interests of our Progressive City.

Having been interested in Peterborough all my life, and one of your Aldermen for five years, I may fairly claim to be in close touch with every section and every interest of the municipality, and familiar with its needs and ambitions.

I believe that in all respects the will of the people should prevail; that a vigorous but economical administration is the best administration, and that if your Chief Magistrate is able to devote a fair proportion of his time to his civic duties, it will not be to your disadvantage if he brings with him the experience and energy he displays in the conduct of a large and successful business of his own.

If my career in the Council during the past five years has in the main met with your approval I shall esteem it an honour to have your further approval and support in the coming contest.

Yours respectfully,

G. A. GILLESPIE

November 29th, 1913.

To the Electors of the WEST WARD

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

Having been requested by a large number of citizens to stand for re-election as Alderman, I again respectfully tender you my services.

I have now represented you for four years, during which time I have made myself thoroughly conversant with the streets, sidewalks, sewers, and other interests in the Ward.

By my services in the past, together with the past four years' experience, I ask you to judge my actions in the future, and confidently solicit your support and influence.

If elected, I again promise to conscientiously look after the interests of the Ward and the City in general, and to give all matters coming before your Council the necessary time and careful consideration, endeavouring to consider all questions in a fair and business-like manner, consistent with economy and general progressiveness.

With season's best wishes, I am,

Your obedient servant,

JOS. J. DUFFUS.

TO THE ELECTORS OF WEST WARD

Gentlemen:

I respectfully solicit your vote and influence to return me as Alderman for your Ward for 1914. As a business man with a successful business experience, I feel that our motto should be "Business methods in all departments of the Council." Efficiency linked with economy should be our guiding principle.

I trust you will favor me with your support and I promise should I be returned that I will do my best to merit your approval.

In voting for A. H. STRATTON for Alderman for Centre Ward you are voting for a live progressive man who has the interests of Peterborough at heart. He is a large taxpayer and will use his best efforts to keep your taxes down to the lowwater marks. At the same time he is sure to encourage existing manufacturers and endeavor to bring in a new industry. In regard to the important matter of Hydro Electric, while he favours it he is especially in favour of business-like management of the enterprise of seeing that the people, who voted so, almost unanimously for it, get the greatest benefit from it at the least possible cost, consistent with efficiency. He is a good business man by the test of success in his own business and knows that to encourage the working man and find employment for them at good wages, helps the business man and thereby help to make a BIGGER AND BETTER CITY. MAYOR FOR 1914

G. A. GILLESPIE

Asks your support and influence to ensure his election as

MAYOR FOR 1914

To The Ratepayers

of

CENTRE WARD

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

There is one thing on which the Council and people should stand together. That is our Hydro-Electric and Municipal Power and Light policy. In their own interests the electors should unite in electing men who will put that policy through. A good beginning has been made. See that it is completed.

I am in accord with that policy as a citizen and will [illegible] as an Alderman and shall be glad to [illegible] your vote to place me in Council.

Yours respectfully,

FRANK H. [illegible]

be derived and returned back to the City Treasury. However, I think I can safely predict that next year we will have a substantial revenue from the new industries lately located, and from the workmen brought into our city by these industries. We also have a statement from Mr. Patterson of the Canadian General Electric Company, that they expect to enlarge their plant by the manufacturing of electric locomotives, and will employ many more skilled mechanics who will also contribute towards the City's treasury.

(Your Board of Education has also made very heavy demands on your Council in the past two years, and has been responsible for about one-half of the increase in taxes each year. Your Police Department has been increased, and all combined, go to account for the higher rate of taxation. My opinion is, that not until we get a change in our system of taxation and tax the land instead of improvements, will we be entirely rid of the burden of taxation. I have also been an advocate of publishing the assessment roll, so that all ratepayers may see just how his neighbor is assessed, and if he feels his assessment is unjust, he may apply to the Court of Revision for an adjustment, and if elected I will do my utmost to have this accomplished.

I place before you my five years' service as your Alderman, ten years' citizenship of your city, my own business dealings with the citizens and ratepayers and ask you to judge as to my ability to fill the chair of your Chief Magistrate. Cast aside any political influence and be guided by what you think is for the best interest of our City.

In closing I would like to say to the labor men of our city, that I am fully acquainted with their conditions of high cost of living and tax of labor personally, I cannot but realize their needs under present conditions of high cost of living and taxation, and if elected on Monday next, will promise to see that they receive just treatment.

I have tried in a short space of ten minutes, to cover some of the important points in connection with our City Government, and will be pleased to answer personally, or through the press, any questions relating to my past or future intentions of City expenditure.

WM. BULLER.

Ald. Buller, on being warmly greeted, said in part that there had been no expenditure that the ratepayers could find fault with. "My claim is, I was born here, raised here, and I am a workingman. In the Council I did my duty and I expect to be elected Mayor. I did my part to bring the new manufacturing concerns to Peterborough.

My platform would be to use economy. I was in close touch with the city. My conduct has been above board."

Equalization of taxation; municipal government by commission; free markets were questions which Ald. Buller believed were worthy of consideration for the future.

He would know what was required of the laboring man. He would thank the electors to place him at the head of the polls.

J. S. HARTLEY.

Mr. Hartley said he was not seeking the position simply by the honor, and if he thought he could not be of service to the city he would not offer himself for the position. All he had was invested in the city, giving work to laboring men and mechanics. He had put his money into building.

"There's no place like Peterborough to me; my earnest desire is to see the city progress right along."

He believed the city's taxes to be as high as any place. The assessment had also increased year by year. When a slump comes, like that in the West, then the high rate of taxation is felt. "It's all right to go ahead, but there's a possibility of us spending too much money.

This thing has got to come to a stop sometime.

ROBT. HICKS.

Mr. Hicks, next speaker, said: "The Board of Water Commissioners was like a Board of Directors, and the ratepayers as shareholders. He refused to be a candidate with the promise to reduce the rates, but he asked support on the grounds that by careful management the waterworks would automatically lower the rates. He had helped to keep the "lid" on Hydro. What was wanted was the power at cost to the people. There should be no uncertain sound as to where the candidates stand on the important question of Hydro.

"The reason you are paying 25 mills is because the sins of the fathers have been visited on the children." He said if Mr. McWilliams was a better man for the position than he, he would withdraw. He referred to Mr. McWilliams posing as a labor candidate, but wanted to know what labor Mr. McWilliams ever employed.

resolution, for record, of the high regard in which the City Council holds Mayor Bradburn's two years' exceptionally acceptable occupancy of the velvet chair.

This resolution was accompanied by unanimous regrets at Mayor Bradburn's retirement from a position which he has held with generally conceded approval.

Ald. Gordon here took the chair, while the aldermen showered their well-deserved bouquets upon the retiring Mayor.

To be brief Ald. Gillespie remarked that the Mayor's services had always been given regardless of any self-interests and for the good of the whole community.

Ald. Duffus, in an extensive eulogy of his worship, exceedingly well put, said no man had filled the velvet chair quite as well as W. H. Bradburn. (Endorsive applause).

The resolution was here carried unanimously.

Chairman Ald. Gordon, in tendering his worship the resolution said: "Your advice, judgement and suggestions have been to me of great assistance. Your judgment has always been sound and in the interests of the city at large, without consideration for self or any class of ratepayers.

Mayor Bradburn, in reply, expressed his sincere regret at leaving office and especially at severing his official association with his confreres. He had spent six or seven pleasant years on the Council Board, the last two years of which had been of an exceptionally pleasing nature. He had endeavored to fill the Mayor's chair to the best of his ability at all times. Last year was a particularly trying one, involving the expenditure of considerable time, but he was happy to say, much progress had been made. The Hydro-Electric system, when completed, will prove one of this city's best advertising mediums. Many visitors have already remarked that Peterborough is just now assuming city clothes. In conclusion his worship thanked, in the heartiest possible manner, one and all of his colleagues for their unstinted support the past two years in the city's interests.

RESOLUTION OF SYMPATHY.

Moved by Ald. Gordon, seconded by Ald. Johnston,—A resolution of sympathy with Ald. and Mrs. Duncan in their recent bereavement in the loss of their little son.—Carried.

SILVER DOLLAR DATED 1804 FOUND BY A WORKER

New Haven, Ct., Dec. 29.—A silver dollar bearing the date 1804, highly prized by numismatics, and understood to be quoted at $3,500 for collection purposes was found here today. William Sullivan, a laborer working on the excavation where the Yale ice hockey rink will be erected, turned over an old jar which rested a boulder seven feet below the surface of State Street nearby. Under the bowl was a silver snuffbox made in Nuremberg [illegible] with oxidization and in it a United States silver dollar dated 1804, in good condition, a number of Connecticut copper coins, a continental note for $3, several state notes and some rings.

The metal articles were slightly corroded but they rubbed up well and dates were plain. The snuffbox was taken to jewelers for examination.

They found the coins to be as follows: Silver dollar dated 1804, with letters around the edge in place of milling; silver dollar, 1795; three Connecticut copper coins, 1787; Connecticut bank note for 40 shillings, date 1778. Continental note of 1775 for three dollars, a watch made in Strassburg in 1721; a deed of property written in old English, not yet deciphered, of date of 1667, a document dated 1728, with six imprints on it which appear to be imposts by the British government. The hall mark on the snuffbox is of 1740.

J. J. HARTLEY

The Workingman's Candidate For

MAYOR

Unanimously Endorsed by the Trades & Labor Council

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY OF PETERBOROUGH:

Ladies and Gentlemen:—At the earnest request of a large number of the ratepayers I have consented to be a candidate for the position of Mayor for the year 1914.

Being born and having lived all my life in Peterborough, and my whole life's savings being invested in Peterborough, I naturally have a deep interest in the welfare and prosperity of the City.

Should I be elected I promise you that I will guard to the very best of my ability, the interests of the ratepayers and will oppose all unnecessary expenditure. I will do my utmost to keep down the ever increasing rate of taxation consistent with needs of a growing City.

I may say that I am in favor of Municipal Ownership, and am in favor of having all city work done by our own people instead of bringing in outsiders to do it.

I will endeavour to see that the ratepayers get value for every dollar that is expended.

I have had considerable experience in municipal matters, having served ten years in the Council and fourteen years on the Board of Education, being Chairman of that Board for two years, I was also Chairman of the Board of Health for several years, so that you will see that I am not without a fair share of experience.

Should you do me the honor to elect me as Mayor of our City I will do my best to serve you to the extent of my ability.

Yours respectfully,

J.J. HARTLEY

To The Electors of Ward One

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,—

A number of ratepayers request me to offer myself as a candidate for the representation of the above Ward in the coming Aldermanic election. I have consented to stand, and ask for your vote and influence.

If elected, I will seek to the utmost of my power, to promote the highest interests of the city.

Yours respectfully,

JOSEPH SAUNDERS.

To the Electors of the West Ward

Ladies and Gentlemen,

At the request of a number of the ratepayers of the above Ward, I have consented to offer myself as a candidate for the Council at the approaching Municipal Elections.

If elected I will do everything in my power to promote the best interests of the city.

Yours very truly,

James B. Brown

Susannah's Independence

It Was Short Lived, but Served Its Purpose

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Copyright by American Press Association, 1913.

That Sunday had been one of Miss Lettice Penfield's lugubrious days when the whole world was garbed in a dark dismal blue. She had looked up from her melancholy book of sermons to discover her niece, Susannah smiling radiantly at Martin Wayne's portrait in its shrinelike frame on the bookcase. Susannah had the grace to blush rosily as her eyes met Aunt Lettice's disapproving glance.

"Isn't he handsome, Aunt Lettice?" she asked daringly.

" 'Handsome is as handsome does,' " quoted Miss Penfield gloomily. "Sometimes I have qualms regarding your future happiness. Marriage is such a lottery you can never tell how one of 'em is going to turn out. Sometimes it seems as if when there's the most reason to expect happiness there comes the most misery. And it doesn't do for a girl to trust herself to a man just because he is handsome."

"Seems as if I'd heard something of that sort before," Susannah said composedly. "Aunt Lettice, I've always noticed that you have qualms about everything on Sunday afternoons, never any other time unless it's a rainy day. I do believe it's that horrid book of sermons all about everlasting torment and so forth. Now, I'm going to prescribe a cure for your melancholia—there!"

Miss Penfield gasped as Susannah leaned forward, caught the book of sermons from her hand and tossed it page downward into the glowing grate fire. The flames flickered up, and the ancient and brittle pages curled into charred fragments. The old sheepskin binding sent a black pillar of smoke up the chimney, while it shriveled to ashes.

"[illegible] Penfield," cried her Aunt [illegible] "see what you have done! [illegible] belonged to my [illegible] [illegible] I have [illegible] it. You are looking to expect to go [illegible]" Miss Penfield [illegible]

[illegible]

"I am so [illegible], Aunt Lettice," said Susannah remorsefully. "I wish I could undo that mischievous deed."

"I must expect ingratitude from you, Susannah. It is ever thus when one performs an act of benevolence. I have always tried to do my duty by you ever since you came to me poor and friendless, and now you turn and bite the hand that has nurtured you."

Susannah arose and stood before her aunt, her pretty cheeks pale as white roses, her gray eyes dilated until they seemed quite black.

"Aunt Lettice, what are you saying? You exaggerate what I have done. I have been grateful for your kindness—I have tried to be as a daughter to you, and and"—

"Merely because I suggested that your future life with Martin Wayne might not be all rose color," went on Miss Penfield in monotonous complaint. "I couldn't help thinking about it when I saw Martin paying so much attention to that rich Miss Fearing—not that he needs the money, for he has plenty of his own, but"—

Susannah anticipated Miss Penfield's departure by leaving the room hastily through the library door, thus adding insult to the injury she had imposed upon that austere lady.

Through the gloomy library and the dim hall she went, up the wide red carpeted stairs to her own room, where she locked the door and sank breathlessly into a chair before her writing desk. Her face was still white, and her eyes wore a new look of trouble [illegible] Susannah had always [illegible] her troubles aside. Today they were heavy enough. She had [illegible] by letter with Madeline Fearing, but until Aunt Lettice's insinuation Susannah had never entertained a doubt of Martin's loyalty. Now her honest heart was aflame with jealousy and her pride was stung by Aunt Lettice's taunt.

Pen and paper were at hand, and it was the work of an instant to write a brief note to Martin breaking off the engagement and inclosing within the envelope a tiny box containing the ring he had given her. Another letter to Aunt Lettice announced that henceforth Susannah would make her own way in the world and would try to repay little by little her indebtedness to her aunt. Susannah selected her plainest hat and street suit, packed a few other necessities into a small [illegible] leather bag, slipped her own especial picture of Martin on top and stole away in the dusk of that Sunday evening just at the time when she might have been expecting Martin to come. She had left the letters on her dressing table so that when Aunt Lettice came to seek her they would be found.

With a beating heart she rode down town to the railroad station and bought her ticket for New York. Her own home town did not offer any opening for a young woman who had no talent for anything in especial unless it was to make a home for some confident young man, and Susannah's career in that direction seemed to be closed forever.

Arrived in New York, she found lodgings at a working girls' club of which she had often heard, and the next morning she awakened to a new life of independence and work.

At the end of three days Susannah found work in the basement of a large department store, where she sold all sorts of kitchen ware to busy housewives. Because Susannah was a born housewife herself she found genuine pleasure in recommending the various utensils that composed her stock. Her knowledge of music and languages was not sufficient to offer her a means of livelihood; here was her own proper sphere among the household gods and their satellites.

Her wages were small enough, but there was a great satisfaction in the thought that she was earning her own way after all. She knew how horrified Aunt Lettice would be [illegible] her [illegible] behind the counter. As for Martin—she shrugged her pretty shoulders with assumed indifference.

She had been there a week when a very sharp eyed, thin faced man edged his way toward her and appeared to study her appearance closely. Later she saw him talking to the floor manager, and after awhile he disappeared. Susannah thought little of the incident, for shortly afterward it was eliminated from her memory by the appearance of Martin Wayne.

Susannah shrank back among the blue enameled saucepans and pots and hoped some other clerk would wait upon him, but it was a busy morning, and there was no way of escape, for Martin came directly toward her and, without the slightest sign of recognition, spoke to her:

"Will you show me some teakettles, please?" he asked, referring to a paper in his hand.

Without a word poor Susannah set forth on the counter a row of teakettles of every size and shape—tin, copper, nickel and enameled ware of every color.

Martin looked at them critically. "What would you choose?" he asked, looking her directly in the eyes with his clear, searching glance. "What would you choose for a family of two. I'm going to be married," he added in explanation.

Susannah's color came back in a swift rush, and her daintily poised head went up proudly. All at once she was the model saleswoman, brisk and attentive. If Martin Wayne in his chagrin was to flaunt his marriage to Miss Fearing, Susannah would not flinch. It did not occur to her to think it strange that Martin should be buying his kitchen ware alone. Had not he and Susannah planned every detail of their future home down to the very toasting forks?

"What would you choose?" he repeated, and Susannah picked out a green enameled kettle because in the house that they had built in fancy there was to be nothing but white enamel ware.

"Green?" he repeated in a puzzled tone.

"It wears well," said Susannah in a businesslike tone. "Now, here are other kettles to match in the same color—pots and saucepans and"—

"I must ask your advice," he said soberly and laid his list before Susannah—the very list that they had compiled together in the red glow of the fire in the library. "My wife—that is, the lady who is to be my wife—has expressed a wish for white enameled ware—pure white. Don't you think I had better choose what she wants? You see, she made out this list herself." He gave it to her, and before her blurring eyes the letters danced up and down, but it was her own writing.

All at once Susannah found speech. "Martin!" she said in a very small voice.

He turned instantly. "Susannah, dearest, what is it?" he asked in a low tone.

"Oh!" said Susannah sharply. "Then you got my note?"

"Yes—and tore it up," said Mr. Wayne promptly. "Your Aunt Lettice is weeping over here yet. Dear, she sent you a message by me: 'Tell my little girl that I don't regret the book of sermons; I have learned a sermon by heart now.' "

"Oh, dear!" half sobbed Susannah. "I'm afraid I'm going to cry, Martin. I've been so horrid to you both! Did Aunt Lettice tell you all about it?"

"Every word, even unto how she incited your jealousy of Madeline Fearing. Susannah, as they say in the melodramas, all is forgiven; come home." He covered her little hand with his own while the floor manager turned his back.

"I must wait until the whistle blows," gulped Susannah through her happy tears.

"And I will wait outside—just as if I was your 'steady company.' Shall I, Susannah?"

"Yes," said Susannah softly.

"Tomorrow we will come back and select white enamel—oh, dear!"

"Yes," said Susannah again, her face radiant with blushes. "Martin, how did you know I was here?"

"My detective—didn't you see him prowling around awhile ago? I was waiting outside for his report."

"I see. And, Martin, just as I was beginning to enjoy my independence it is ended," she sighed, a little regretfully.

"Isn't there something sweeter than independence, Susannah, dear?" whispered Martin as he slipped the ring back into its accustomed place.

"Yes, indeed!" And this time there was no [illegible] in Susannah's voice.

Holiday Announcement

WE take pleasure in once more presenting to you our Annual Announcement in connection with the Holiday Trade, and would respectfully call your attention to the fact that we have secured from the leading markets of the world an up-to-date stock of holiday goods, suitable for Christmas and New Year presents, which we are selling at a bargain. This year we are better prepared than ever to cater to the wants of the public.

In both quality and prices, we defy competition. Our expenses are comparatively insignificant as compared with the other larger stores in the city, and the fact that we have not got to look to the profits from our bookstore trade to carry us through, but have a large printing and book manufacturing business as well, in addition to our rapidly expanding newspaper business.

We have made expensive preparations for the Holiday Trade, and invite the public to call and inspect our stock and get our prices before purchasing elsewhere.

Calendars, Handy Booklets, Christmas and Text Cards

We have in Calendars, Booklets, Christmas and Text Cards a stock of the latest designs, and a very large assortment to choose from. Special discounts to parties taking a number.

Fancy Goods

In Fancy Goods, as in every other line, our stock is up-to-date. We can supply you with presents for young and old, rich and poor, wives, husbands and sweethearts. We only give a mere hint here of the articles with which our shelves are loaded:—Brush and Comb Setts, Manicure Setts, Writing Desks, Collar and Cuff Boxes, Glove and Handkerchief Boxes, Ladies' and Gentlemen's Travelling Companions, Jewel Cases, Photo Boxes, Albums, etc., etc. These goods are all new, and made in designs and of material not shown before.

Books for All

We ask an inspection of our stock and prices. We aim to give our customers the best possible value for the money. Dainty Gift Books, Padded Poems, and an endless variety of Cloth and Leather Bound Works. Also Bibles, Hymnals, Children's Illustrated Books, etc.

Games for Young and Old

Our stock in Games is very complete, including Fishpond, Flips, Game of India, Halma, The Century Ride, Lost Heir, Authors, Checkers, Dominoes, Nations, Lotto and all the popular 10 cent games.

New Souvenir Novelties and Small Wares

The following are but a few of the many very desirable articles suitable for Yuletide remembrances: Purses, Card Cases, Burnt Leather Blotters, Pen Wipers and Book Markers; Tea, Crumb, Pin and Ash Trays, Ink Wells, Bon-bon Dishes, Japanese Cups and Saucers, Bread and Butter Plates, Rose Bowls, Vases, Biscuit Jars, all kinds of bric-a-brac, etc.

For Dolls We Lead— Others Follow

We propose to lead this season in the Doll Trade, and are showing Dolls at prices that defy competition. Handsome Kid Dolls, Jointed Dolls in all sizes, Bisque and Composition Dolls, Wax and China Dolls, Rubber Dolls and Dolls that may be used for Fancy Pin Holders. Dolls from 15c up.

Please Remember

1.—That The Times Bookstore has everything marked close to cost.
2.—We can sell cheaper than any other house. The reason we can afford to do so is, because our expenses are practically nil compared with other concerns.
3.—We are large manufacturers of stationery supplies and books, employing about 60 persons, so that in these lines we have goods at first cost.
4.—We sell to the wholesale trade, who again sell to the bookstores and stationers throughout the country, so that by purchasing direct from us you save, in many cases, the profits of two "middle men."
5.—The Times Bookstore is confident that it can give you satisfaction, and would urge an early inspection of our stock before the rush begins. You only have to select what you want and have the goods put aside for delivery when required.

Soliciting the favor of your esteemed patronage, and wishing you the compliments of the season, we remain,

Very respectfully yours,

TENDERS.

TENDERS addressed to the undersigned at Ottawa, and endorsed on the envelope "Tender for Old Buildings at Oshawa," will be received up to noon of the

for the purchase of the TWO buildings contiguous to the breakwater in Oshawa Harbour, namely, the elevator standing at the shore end of the breakwater, and the smallest of the coal sheds standing directly behind the elevator in a line northward from the elevator. These buildings are offered for sale on the following conditions:

The purchaser is to take down the buildings and remove the material and fittings from the Government Reserve within a reasonable time after the offer is accepted. The time required for removal to be specified by the tenderers and accepted by the Department. The material and fittings to become the property of the successful tenderer when removed from the Government Reserve.

The buildings are to be taken down by the Contractors at their own risk and expense, and the Department is not to be held liable for any accident that may occur in connection with the removal of the buildings or material.

The ground occupied by each building is to be levelled off and left in good condition by the Contractor.

A separate price is to be made for each building and the Department reserves the right to accept the whole or any part of a tender. The Department further reserves the right to refuse the highest or any tender.

The purchase price to be paid in cash as soon as the successful tenderer is notified of the acceptance of his offer.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered Canadian Bank equal to 10 p.c. of the whole amount of the offer. Cheques accompanying tenders which are accepted will be forfeited if the successful tenderers decline to forward the purchase price when their offers are accepted or fail to remove the buildings in accordance with this notice. Cheques accompanying unsuccessful tenders will be returned.

Newspapers copying this advertisement without authority from the Department will not be paid for same.

GREAT SALT LAKE.

An Immense Fresh Water Sea Some Thousands of Years Ago.

In glacial times Great Salt lake was a magnificent fresh water lake the size of Lake Huron—that is, about 18,000 square miles—and had its outlet into the Port Neuf, the Snake and the Columbia rivers. This was at least 10,000 years ago, but since that time the climate has become arid, and not enough water has fallen over the Great basin to supply that lost by evaporation. Consequently the lake has ceased to flow from its outlet and gradually dried up from over a thousand feet deep to fifteen feet and from 18,000 square miles in area to less than 1,700.

It is now seventy miles long and about thirty wide, but is beautiful still and is the home of myriads of sea birds and other waterfowl. It is the great resort of the people of Utah, for from 3,000 to 5,000 visit its shores daily in the summer, and many bathe in its waters. The lake contains about 7,000,000,000 tons of salt.

When the lake is high the salt is so diluted that it has gone down to 11 per cent. When it is low, as it was not many years ago, it reached saturation, which for the mixed ingredients of the water is 20 per cent.

There is nothing mysterious about it any more than there would be about a teacup with a teaspoonful of salt in the bottom. If a tablespoonful of water were put in the cup on the salt it would taste very salty, but if the cup were filled to the brim with water it would not.

The salt has come from the water of the rivers flowing into it since it ceased to flow from its outlet. All river water contains salt, and the annual evaporation of from two to five cubic miles of this water leaves large quantities of salt behind, and so it has accumulated for thousands of years.

A DREAM JOURNEY.

It Was a Very Long One, but It Took Only a Few Minutes.

"Dreams are curious things," remarked the amateur psychologist. "Time does not seem to enter into their composition at all. For instance, the other day I was sitting on the porch of a hotel with a friend of mine smoking after lunch. It was a drowsy day, and conversation lagged. Presently I saw my friend nodding in his chair. He had dozed off, holding his lighted cigar in his left hand, which was folded over his right. His left hand relaxed, and the end of the cigar came in gentle contact with the right hand, inflicting a slight burn.

" 'The devil it won't!' exclaimed my friend, waking with a start.

"The [illegible] sounded so incongruous that I burst out laughing. 'Won't what?' I asked.

" 'How long have I been asleep?' he asked.

" 'Not more than a couple of minutes,' I replied.

" 'It doesn't seem possible,' he said. 'During that time I had a dream that pretty nearly took me around the world. I sailed for Southampton, did England, France, Switzerland and a part of Italy, then through the orient to India. It was in India that I became much interested in one of the native snake charmers. He had the snakes crawling all over him and offered one to me. I told him I was afraid it would bite me. He assured me that it wouldn't, and I took the reptile in my hand. It promptly fastened its fangs in me. I said, "The devil it won't!" and dropped it, and then I woke up.'

"I explained the episode of the lighted cigar," concluded the amateur psychologist, "and we both laughed."—New York Sun.

Southey's Industry.

Southey probably deserves to rank as the most industrious of authors. In the greater part of his life he spent fourteen hours a day in composition. He had six tables in his library. He wrote poetry at one, history at another, criticism at a third, and so on with the other subjects upon which he was engaged. He once described to [illegible] the disposition of his time—two hours before breakfast for history, two hours for reading after, two hours for the composition of poetry, two hours for criticism, and so on through all the working day. "And pray, Mr. Southey," asked [illegible], "when do you think?"—London Chronicle.

THE WORLD TONGUE.

Hardly a Land in Which English Is Not Now Heard.

The traveler of today, unless he is going to Tibet or Tierra del Fuego, can get along very well with a knowledge of the English language. The farther he goes the more he is surprised at finding that English is really "the" world tongue. In France and Spain and Italy the American traveler is readily "spotted." He is approached on the streets by those who would for a consideration make him feel quite at home. One of his chief worries is to escape the pests who can speak English and who wish to apprise him of the fact. They may not necessarily desire to assist him. Sometimes they are seeking merely to "show off." At any rate, they classify distinctly as bores. One may go to Smyrna or Constantinople or Beirut and still find the streets plentifully full of English speaking nuisances. At Jerusalem he will be fairly flooded with English. He may penetrate even to Damascus, and he will find at least a befezzed hall porter who can converse glibly with him and any number of fluently willing dragomans. He may go to Cairo, and in the shadow of the pyramids he will find blue gowned Bedouins speaking more than passable English. He may go hundreds of miles up the Nile and may be steered through the locks of the first cataract by frizzly haired Nubian boatmen who make insistent demands for backsheesh in very intelligible terms. He may wander donkey back to the tombs of the kings in the Sahara desert and be painfully disillusioned by a few words of concise information or explanation by some barefooted, dusky tent dweller.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

METEORIC DUST.

Bombards the Earth In an Invisible, Never Ending Shower.

Meteoric dust particles are infinitely finer than grains of sand. They have an interesting origin. Meteors or shooting stars have been bombarding the world from the beginning at a rate estimated at many thousands an hour, of which, however, an average of only five or six are visible to the naked eye in that time.

Owing to our protecting envelope of air few of these missiles reach us. In weight meteors vary from a few ounces to many pounds. Occasionally one is of sufficient dimensions to survive the passage of eighty to a hundred miles through an atmosphere increasing in density as the earth is approached.

The speed at which they enter the atmosphere, calculated at not less than thirty-two miles a second, generates such intense heat by friction that the iron, of which the meteor principally consists, is immediately reduced to an incandescent vapor, which is the luminous train so frequently seen in the heavens on a clear night. The vapor rapidly cools and condenses in the form of these minute particles, which assume the spherical form, as does shot during its fall from the top of the tower.

Finally the little spheres are wafted by the winds and currents in the upper air and gradually descend in their billions as an invisible, never ending shower. The perfect condition in which these meteors are found is due to the presence of certain noncorrosive elements found by analysis to be present in the metal of meteors which have come to earth.—Chicago Tribune.

A Clever French Captive.

A person who was supposed to be the French General Mouton, count de Lobau, was once captured by an English vessel, but after a time the captain discovered that his prisoner was the Count de Montrond. "Why did you deceive me?" he demanded angrily of the count. "I did not deceive you," replied Montrond; "not at all. You thought I was General Mouton. You told me so. You have a fifty gun frigate. Was it for me, who have only a pocket pistol, to contradict you?"

The captain did not forgive Montrond and took every opportunity to treat him rudely. One evening at dinner aboard he proposed the health of the French. As Montrond rose to acknowledge it the captain cried: "They are all cowards! I make no exceptions!" When Montrond's turn came he gave this sentiment, "The English—they are all gentlemen, but I make exceptions."

Opulence.

"Does that calf belong to that cow?"

"Certainly."

"Gracious! With milk getting so expensive I don't see how she can afford to keep it."—Washington Star.

Their Conclusion.

HERE IS MORE PROOF OF QUICK CURES FOR ALL FOLKS THAT ARE WEAK, AILING, NERVOUS.

More Praise for Dr. Hamilton's Pills

"For a period last summer the thought of food excited feeling of nausea," writes Mrs. C. A. Dodge, of Bloomsbury. "The heat had made me listless and the distaste for food reduced me to a condition of semi-starvation and brought me to the verge of nervous collapse. Tonics were useless to restore an active desire for food. The doctors told me my liver and kidneys were both at fault, but the medicines they gave me were too severe and reduced my strength so that I had to abandon them. At the suggestion of a friend who had been cured of blood and skin trouble, I began the use of Dr. Hamilton's Pills. The difference I first noticed was, that while they cleansed the system, instead of feeling weaker I felt better after taking them. Indeed their activity was so mild it was easy to forget I had taken them at all; they seemed to go right to the liver, and in a very brief time not only did all search of nausea disappear, but I began to crave food and I digested it reasonably well. Then I began to put on weight until within three months I was brought to a condition of good health. I urge Dr. Hamilton's Pills for all who are in poor health."

Get this best of all medicines today and refuse a substitute for Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut. Sold by all druggists and storekeepers, 25c. per box or five for $1.00. Sent postpaid by The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo N.Y. and Kingston, Canada.

Garbage Case Dismissed

Mrs. George King, of George street was charged with a breach of the garbage by-law. She was defended by Mr. Medd. It would seem that the defendant had put her garbage in a lane to the rear. Mr. Medd explained that the complaint was instigated by spite work. The magistrate agreed with him and said the by-law had been distorted to make a case. The case was dismissed. The charge was not laid by the Sanitary Inspector but by a Mr. Andrews. The magistrate remarked, "You will have to take your share of the stinks of the town. Ladies have to use perfume sometimes to kill the garbage smells.

WHERE OUR MINISTERS WILL BE NEW YEAR'S

Toronto, Dec. 29.—The ministers of the Ontario Cabinet will welcome in the new year at different points within the empire.

Sir James Whitney, who has been making rapid strides towards his old vigor, will sit down at his own table in his residence at 113 St. George Street. He is expected in the city early in the week.

Hon. J. J. Foy, attorney-general and acting premier, will be in the city over the holiday. It is not unlikely that he will pay a friendly visit to Sir James to extend holiday greetings on behalf of the ministry.

Hon. J. O. Reaume, minister of public works and Hon. Adam Beck, minister without portfolio, will eat the roast beef of Old England in the midst of their families. Mr. Beck is visiting his newly-purchased estate in the southern counties, and Dr. Reaume is touring the continent.

The minister of education, Hon. Dr. Pyne, it is understood, will also be in Toronto, when the municipal struggle is at its height.

Hon. W. J. Hanna, provincial secretary, spends the week in Sarnia.

Hon. I. B. Lucas, provincial treasurer, visits his home in Markdale.

Hon. Jas. Duff, minister of agriculture, and Hon. W. H. Hearst, will eat New Year's dinner in Cookstown and Toronto, respectively.

A prompt assembling of the cabinet is expected early in January.

DEATH SHOWS UP BLUE BEARDS SECRET

Woman Found Living in a Hidden Chamber Connecting With the Lawyer's Office

Monticello, N. Y., Dec. 29. — The death of Melvin H. Couch, a prominent lawyer and former district attorney of Sullivan county, revealed to-day that, unknown to his family and friends and to his clients, a woman had lived for three years in a secret room connecting with his law office. Couch was found yesterday lying dead on his office lounge. Death was due to rupture of a blood vessel near the heart. In the next room crouched a frightened woman, who admitted she had seen him die, but insisted she was not responsible for his death. She said she was Adelaide M. Branse, of Goshen, N. Y., and that the secret room had been her only home during the past three years.

Woman Very Poorly Dressed

Couch was 65 years old. The woman is 40. She was poorly dressed and the room where she lived was sparsely furnished. She said she had lived there voluntarily and had never gone out in the day time. At rare intervals she went for a walk at night.

The woman was held on a technical charge but the coroner's verdict as to the cause of Couch's death supported her assertion that she was not responsible. The attorney, she said died of a ruptured blood vessel Sunday morning. The autopsy today brought the verdict that death was due to the breaking of the ascending aorta.

Miss Branse said she first met Couch three years ago when she called at his office to sell books. The lawyer's friends remember that about this time he had the room where she was found cut off from his office by a heavy partition.

Wife First Heard of It

Couch's wife first learned of her husband's secret when word of his unexpected death brought her to the office where he lay dead. She had visited the office frequently but never had entered the adjoining room.

She fainted when she confronted Miss Branse.

PRISON TERM FOR ZELLER IS BEGUN

Ex-Sheriff of Hudson Taken From Family While Celebrating His Fifty-eighth Birthday

Trenton, Dec. 29.—Taken from the midst of a family gathering which was celebrating the fifty-eighth anniversary of his birthday, former Sheriff John Zeller, of Hudson County, was brought to Trenton today to begin serving his term of from one to three years in State prison for misusing funds of the county. Zeller was surrounded by his grandchildren when Deputy Sheriff James Bogle called at his home and notified him that he must accompany Bogle to Trenton.

To avoid unnecessary publicity, Zeller was taken to Newark by automobile, and there boarded the train leaving for Trenton at 9 o'clock. The attempt to avoid the public gaze failed utterly, for on the very train which Zeller took were the members of the Hudson County delegation in the Legislature and a number of other politicians and friends of Zeller's, who were on their way to Trenton to attend the Governor's Day conferences. At Newark the force of politicians was further augmented by members of the Essex delegation and others, who were also on their way to the capital.

Zeller and the deputy entered the smoking car in which a number of the Hudson delegation were seated. It soon became whispered about that Zeller was on his way to begin his prison term, and his acquaintances gathered about him and offered their condolences.

FEDERALS CHASED TO UNITED STATES, THEN CHASED BACK

Stronghold at Ojinaga Found Easy by Enemy After a Very Long March

Presidio, Tex., Dec. 30.—The Federal army of 4,000 men at Ojinaga, opposite here, was put to flight last night by 4,200 constitutionalists sent by General Villa from Chihuahua. In [illegible] of the Federals [illegible] to the American side, but all except the wounded were [illegible] back by the United States troops.

The final rout was preceded by a three hours' battle begun after dark, in which the rebels marching through the [illegible] south of Ojinaga completely wiped out the Federal outposts. The news of the defeat of Lozano Pena and LaMadela, giving the rebels an unobstructed pass to within firing distance of Ojinaga [illegible] retreat [illegible] the Federals.

Forced Back by U. S. Troops.

About [illegible] of them plunged into the river to seek safety on the American side. They were forced back by Maj. McNamee, commander of the American forces.

A [illegible] in the Ojinaga fort. General Salazar and General Orozco, believing their men were about to desert, stood with drawn revolvers, threatening to shoot those who did not obey.

The badly wounded were the only ones allowed to remain on this side, and they were cared for by Dr. [illegible], of the U.S. army.

Not Many Were Killed.

The killed on both sides was small, but many were reported injured.

In their charge, after [illegible] the outposts, the rebels were said to have left behind a field strewn with disabled Federals, who had fallen from exhaustion in their efforts to gain the fort.

Canada Buys Food Abroad

The Trade and Commerce Department at Ottawa, is advised that the Marama left Auckland, New Zealand, on Nov. 21, the principal items of cargo for Canada being 17,800 boxes of butter, 278 carcases of veal and 1256 carcases of mutton.

GIRLS ARE MISSING MOTHER FEARS ONE HAS BEEN ABDUCTED

Bessie and Josephine Carpentier Have Not Been Home Since Saturday

Toronto, Dec. 30.—Every effort is being made to locate the two sisters, Misses Bessie and Josephine Carpentier, who have been missing from their home at [illegible] Dalhousie avenue since Saturday. The mother believes that at least one of the girls has been abducted. Bessie, the elder of the girls, is about 16 years of age and has been married for over a year. Her sister is 15.

The mother is almost frantic over their disappearance and accuses two Greeks, George [illegible] and another known as Pete, [illegible] having a hand in her daughters' [illegible]. The former had taken an friendly turn with the elder girl, according to her story, while Pete is said to have made advances to her sister, who, however, refused absolutely to have anything to do with him, and was keeping company with another young man.

At the [illegible].

Bessie has been [illegible] for the past few months. She [illegible] from her husband. Josephine was employed as a waitress at the Savoy Cafe, [illegible] Queen west, and the first intimation of her disappearance was received from the proprietor on Saturday, when he telephoned to Mrs. Carpentier to inquire why her daughter did not come to work. The girl had left home at 9.30 o'clock and Bessie left the house with the avowed intention of going to a boarding house at [illegible] Church street. Bessie has not been seen since. Josephine, however, was seen at the Yonge street branch of the Savoy on Sunday evening when she was heard at the telephone. She said she intended going to the Savoy on Monday. "Pete, the Greek, referred to by the mother, is about 35 years old, and was a waiter in a restaurant on Yonge street. He was at the house of the Carpentiers on Friday with a message for Bessie. The girl's mother ordered him out of the house.

MR. COLLIER ANSWERED

City Solicitor R. H. D. Hall Explains the Present Hydro-Situation.

Editor Morning Times.

Dear Sir,—As Mr. W. H. Collier's letter in your issue of the 29th inst. refers to me I think I might be permitted to correct some of the statements in it, probably made through want of knowledge of the facts. He seems to assume that the Acts relating to city's powers of expropriation passed in 1912 and 1913 were passed exactly in the form the Council wished them to be in, and has forgotten or did not know the Acts as prepared under instructions from the Council, had to pass the Private Bills Committee of the Legislature and undergo in that ordeal many changes and the City had to take what the Private Bills Committee would give, not what the Council wanted or asked. Both the Acts of 1912 and 1913 were very strenuously opposed before the Private Bills Committee, not only by the Companies engaged in the supply of electricity and their friends, but by many of the ratepayers who did not agree with the Council's policy, and although the representatives of the Council made every effort to have the Acts put in the shape they wanted, they had to be accepted as they are now and the Council had to proceed under them, and although the Acts are not as the Council desired, it is not to be assumed that the rights of the City under the Acts are not sufficient for the purpose of acquiring the property of the Light & Power Company, or that the Council is in any "tangle or muddle" as asserted by Mr. Collier. Several of Mr. Collier's other ideas as expressed in his letter are also erroneous, but at this juncture it is not advisable to set him right through the public press.

Yours truly,
R. H. D. Hall.

SHACKLETON STARTS IN OCT.

Sir Ernest Says Sufficient Funds Have Been Raised For Antarctic

London, Dec. 30.—Sir Ernest Shackleton, the [illegible] today told a U. P. correspondent that he proposes to start on his Antarctic trip in October, 1914, leaving from Buenos Ayres, South America. He confirmed the statement that sufficient funds have been provided.

"We will have two expeditions," Shackleton said, "a second party starting from New Zealand to meet my personal party from South America. We will have 42 people in all. Our vessels will cap-all [illegible].

"I will take only five men with me on the final polar dash, which I expect will occupy 5½ months.

"I hope to make the whole journey over new ground. I shall pay particular attention to the investigation of the [illegible] to ascertain if the Victoria [illegible] [illegible] with the Andes, which is the greatest geographical problem of the present time."

All, He Had.

A [illegible] was talking to a [illegible]. [illegible] on the [illegible] the student asked. "[illegible] hundred pounds," replied the [illegible]. "[illegible], I know," said the student, "I [illegible] have [illegible]." "[illegible]" replied the surgeon.

PARCELS POST NEARLY READY

Postmaster-General Pelletier to Launch it Shortly

(Special to The Times.)

Ottawa, Dec. 30.—Quietly and unostentatiously—for he is a poor advertiser—Hon. L. P. Pelletier, Postmaster-General is pushing ahead his parcels' post plans and now [illegible] that the system will be [illegible] operations in January.

It is a question whether the people of Canada appreciate what Mr. Pelletier has accomplished since he became a cabinet minister. He has made in the first place a free rural mail a practical thing for the farmers of Canada—at least the farmers of the older parts. The old government made many promises in regard to rural mail. Outside of a few routes hurriedly established just previous to elections for political purposes practically nothing was ever done, outside of the purchase of enough boxes at high prices to last the government for years.

Mr. Pelletier has recognized this branch, and placed it in the hands of efficient officials. He has energetically pushed free rural mails. Today whole counties in Ontario are served by rural free mail, while almost the whole of the Province of Prince Edward Island is now covered by rural routes. The system is also being spread in Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Quebec, British Columbia and were practical in the prairie provinces.

Mr. Pelletier has also been responsible for securing substantial cuts in cable rates, and has from satisfied has been endeavoring to secure further reductions. Another announcement may be expected shortly.

But his great accomplishment will be parcels' post. For years there has been an agitation in Canada for a parcels' post. Time and again it has been urged in the house by Conservatives. The Liberals always refused, they would not even consider the matter. It remained for Mr. Pelletier to introduce a measure last session authorizing him to establish such a system. He has been working on it all summer and fall and now the system is about to be inaugurated and Canada will [illegible] form which has been urged for years.

In connection with the inauguration of the system Mr. Pelletier has announced that it has been decided not to allow any liquor to be carried. Mr. Pelletier, who is a firm believer in temperance principles has absolutely refused to allow liquor to be handled through the medium of the parcels' post.

ASSAULTED A WOMAN, THEN GETS TEN LASHES

Toronto, Dec. 30.—One of the most revolting cases ever seen in the Police Court was that of Tom Hobbin, a young professional prizefighter and hotel porter, 116 Gerrard street east, charged with assaulting and beating Fanny James, a twenty-year-old girl, for which he received 60 days in jail and ten lashes.

PEARY IS PIQUED BECAUSE HONORS GO TO ENGLAND

North Pole Discoverer Predicts the Almost Certain Success of Shackleton's Expedition to Antarctic

New York, Dec. 30.—Expressing the keenest regret that the important discoveries certain to be made by Sir Ernest Shackleton, on his contemplated trip completely across the Antarctic plateau, should not have fallen to an American explorer, Admiral Robert E. Peary, discoverer of the North Pole, to-day declared he believed Shackleton had every chance of succeeding in one of the most remarkable Polar expeditions ever attempted.

[illegible] proposed by Shackleton, crossing the distance from the Weddell Sea to the Ross Sea, with the South Pole merely a stepping point, would have been a "walk-over" for the men trained and having the results of the experience of the trip to the North Pole in the Peary expedition, the Admiral declared.

"For four years," said Admiral Peary, "I have urged that such an expedition be fitted out. The Roosevelt, the greatest ice-fighting ship afloat, would have been put in commission at little expense. The entire cost of the undertaking would not have exceeded $100,000, but we could not raise the money."

John M. McLeod of Los Angeles, Cal., died of appendicitis while on a visit to his father, James McLeod, Cornwall.

MONTREAL SAVED FROM BAD BLAZE BY LACK OF WIND

Firemen Stood Helpless For Half an Hour, Waiting For a Reserve Water Supply

Montreal, Dec. 30.—This city has entered upon its fifth day of an inadequate water supply. This morning a dangerous fire was only confined to one building on St. Lawrence street because of the absence of wind, while prompt work by the firemen, many of whom have not had their clothes off for several days, accounted for other blazes.

The St. Lawrence street fire damaged the offices and store of the National Stove Foundry Company, the Miller Clothing Company, and Lee and Rosenstock, clothiers. The damage done is estimated at about $30,000.

The firemen were compelled to stand by idle for thirty minutes until the city's reserve force of water was turned into the empty mains.

This morning Eugene Sullivan, resident engineer in charge of the construction of the conduit to the water works pumphouse which collapsed, was suspended by City Engineer Janin.

Indignation meetings have been called by all the important business organizations in the city with the avowed intention of passing strongly worded resolutions condemning those responsible for the bungle and the scandal.

Ashburnham

We believe a large majority of the people residing on the other side of the Otonabee River greatly prefer to have that district continue to be known as "Ashburnham," instead of "East City." It is claimed that the name is more euphonious and more in keeping with modern ideas. Toronto, for instance, has its High Park, Rosedale, Deer Park, Parkdale, Leaside, Humber Valley, etc. Likewise Peterborough might have its Ashburnham, Auburn, Victoria Heights, Mackenzieville, Riverside, etc. The Times invites letters for publication on this subject, suggesting names for our outlying districts.

STEPS TAKEN FOR BAR ASSOCIATION FOR THE DOMINION

Ontario Bar Association Appoints Committee to Investigate and Report

Toronto, Dec. 30.—An important step toward the formation of a Dominion organization of legal men, to be known as the Dominion Bar Association, was taken this morning at the meeting of the Ontario Bar Association in Osgoode Hall. A resolution was passed in which the association [illegible] its approval of the principle of a Dominion Bar Association and appointed the following committee to investigate the subject and report to the council: James Bicknell, K.C., M. H. Ludwig, K.C., and W. J. McWhinney, K.C., of Toronto; Mr. W. C. Mikel, K.C., of Belleville; Mr. Frank M. Field, K.C. Cobourg; and Mr. R. J. MacLennan, the corresponding secretary. The president has power to add to this number.

Mr. Frank Denton, K.C., read the report of the Committee on Law Reform. He said the committee recommended the attention of the association to the question of establishing commercial courts throughout Canada, which would provide means of settling interprovincial actions. The matter had been brought to the attention of the committee by the Canadian Manufacturers' Association. There should be specially qualified judges and very simple procedure.

SAYS HE FORGOT HE HAD A WIFE

Man Accused of Bigamy in Providence—Said to Have Mental Trouble.

Providence, Dec. 30.—Frank Johnston of Brooklyn will be arraigned in the Central Falls police court tomorrow on a charge of bigamy. He says he was married to his second wife two months before he remembered he had a wife and three children in Brooklyn.

Johnston disappeared from Brooklyn in July, [illegible]. In May this year he married Miss [illegible] Christina Colquhoun of Lincoln under the name of Frank J. Jackson, the ceremony taking place in Central Falls. The couple have been living at [illegible] Smithfield avenue, Pawtucket. Wife No. 2 was not aware of Johnston's former [illegible] of his arrest, until this evening, when she was notified by Detective [illegible] of Central Falls.

This morning Johnston's Brooklyn wife, with one of her children, came to Providence at the suggestion of the Central Falls police and confronted him. The child greeted him with "Hello, papa." The police say he admitted they were his wife and child.

Johnston is an optical worker. The publication of his picture and story of his disappearance in a trade paper led to his arrest. A member of the Rhode Island Optical Company told the police the man sought was working for his firm under the name of Frank J. Jackson.

GILLICK CONFESSES TO TEN ROBBERIES

Youthful Gunman Sorry Now He Shot Elizabeth Policemen and His "Pal."

Newark, Dec. 30.—Expressing regret for the shooting of the two police officers in Elizabeth and one of his "pals," Thomas Gillick, the eighteen-year-old youth arrested for the shooting, has confessed to ten robberies in this city. He is still being held at headquarters.

The two officers whom he shot in Elizabeth are reported as much improved, but Nelson Smith, colored, Gillick's companion, who was shot by the latter, is in a critical condition in the City Hospital. John Powell, colored, the other companion of Gillick, who was shot by one of the Elizabeth officers, is also in a precarious condition in the Elizabeth General Hospital.

Neither Smith nor Powell is out of both of these men is in doubt. The danger. The ultimate recovery of both of these men is in doubt. The Elizabeth officers wounded in the fight Saturday night—Sergeant Herman Frotz and Patrolman Michael Kennedy—are both reported out of danger. Kennedy left the hospital yesterday but Frotz will be confined for some time yet.

A surplus of $45,000 is shown from the dual operation of the water and Hydro-Electric departments in London.

THE VEILED PROPHET.

He Was the Most Noted Impostor of the Middle Ages.

The celebrated "Veiled Prophet" of history was a Moslem fanatic whose real name was Hakem ibn Hashem. He was born about the middle of the eighth century and became the most noted impostor of the middle ages. He pretended that he was an embodiment of the spirit of the "living God" and, being very proficient in jugglery (which the ignorant mistook for the power to work miracles), soon drew an immense number of followers around him. He always wore a gold mask, claiming that he did so to protect the mortals of this earth, who, he said, could not look upon his face and live.

At last, after thousands had quitted the city and even left the employ of the Caliph al Mahdi to join the fanatical movement, an army was sent against the "Veiled Prophet," forcing him to flee for safety to the castle of Keh, north of the Oxus. Finally, when ultimate defeat was certain, the prophet killed and burned his whole family and then threw himself into the flames, being entirely consumed, except his hair, which was kept in a museum at Bagdad until the time of the crusades. He promised his faithful followers that he would reappear to them in the future dressed in white and riding a white horse.

WANTED HIS PAY.

The Husky Jamaican Didn't Care to Work For Nothing.

An English naval officer tells of being on a war vessel which took provisions to St. Kitts, one of the British West India islands. A hurricane had left many of the inhabitants in a destitute or even starving condition. Hungry crowds gathered at the wharf, but refused to help unload the food that was to be given to them unless paid for their work.

A similar story sheds light on the Jamaican negro. Some years ago a hurricane devastated the island, and a large relief sum was raised, much of it in England and the United States. The committee having charge of this fund sent a wagon load of lumber to a husky black man whose house had been scattered over the parish. He and his family were living in a rude shack, made out of odds and ends.

"What's that fur?" he asked of the men who were unloading the material in front of his patch of ground.

"That's for your new house," was the reply. "It's from the relief fund and won't cost you anything."

"Who's goin' to build mah house?"

"You are, if anybody does."

"Who's goin' to pay me fur mah work?"—Waynesboro Record.

An Old Garret on a Stormy Day.

I know no nobler forage ground for a romantic, venturesome, mischievous boy than the garret of an old family mansion on a day of storm. It is a perfect field of chivalry. The heavy rafters and dashing rain, the piles of spare mattresses to carouse upon, the big trunks to hide in, the old white coats and hats hanging in obscure corners like ghosts, are great! And it is so far away from the old lady who keeps rule in the nursery that there is no possible risk of a scolding for twitching off the fringe of a rug. There is no baby in the garret to wake up. There is no "company" in the garret to be disturbed by the noise. There is no crotchety old uncle or grandma, with their everlasting "Boys, boys!" and then a look of horror.—Donald G. Mitchell.

Jack Sheppard as a Text.

Jack Sheppard had a great hold upon the imagination of the people of his time. The fact that 200,000 people witnessed his execution at Tyburn on Nov. 16, 1724, "upon the tree that bears twelve times a yeare" is bong witness to his grim popularity. But one of the strangest tributes ever paid him was the sermon preached upon him in a London church.

"Oh, that ye were all like Jack Sheppard!" began the preacher, to the stupefaction of his congregation. He went on to draw a parallel between things of the flesh and those of the soul and to point out that the genius shown in housebreaking might have been bestowed upon "picking the locks of the heart with the nail of repentance."—London Standard.

A Tribute to Woman.

When everything around a man staggers and wavers, when all seems dark and dim in the far distance of the unknown future, when the world seems but a [illegible] and the universe a chimera, when the whole structure of ideas vanishes in [illegible] and all certainties become [illegible], what is the only [illegible] thing which may still be his? The faithful heart of a woman. There he may rest his head; there he will renew his strength for the battle of life, increase his faith in Providence and, if need be, find strength to die in peace with a benediction on his lips.—Henri Frederic Amiel.

CHRISTMAS APPEAL
FOR
The Hospital for Sick Children
COLLEGE ST., TORONTO

Dear Mr. Editor:—

Thanks for your kindness in allowing me the privilege of appealing at this Christmas time on behalf of the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto.

It would take more space than you can spare to tell of the good work done for the sick and deformed children of this Province. Let me, however, in a few words, tell you of the progress of the work of the Hospital.

One nurse, six little white beds, a few dollars, a few friends—this was the beginning. The beds have grown to [illegible], the dollars to thousands, the friends to hundreds. 1875, the first year, 44 in-patients, 67 out-patients; 1912, last year, 1,[illegible] in-patients, [illegible] out-patients; 1875, 1 nurse; 1912, 7[illegible] nurses.

Since 1875, thirty-eight years ago, the Hospital has admitted within its walls 21,[illegible] children as in-patients, and 15[illegible] as out-patients, a total of 180,[illegible], or an average of 4,74[illegible] per year. Of the 21,[illegible] in-patients, [illegible] were from Toronto, and [illegible] from other parts of the Province; 10,[illegible] of the total in-patients were cured, and [illegible] were improved.

In the Orthopedic Department last year, of the 1,[illegible] in-patients, [illegible] were treated for deformities, [illegible] hip disease, 37 Pott's disease, 2 knock-knees, [illegible] bow-legs, [illegible] club feet, [illegible] lateral curvature of the spine, [illegible] infantile paralysis, [illegible] wry neck, and [illegible] tubercular disease of knee, hip and ankle. In 1912, the Surgical Apparatus Shop manufactured 427 appliances for in-patients and out-patients, including ankle braces, spinal braces, hip splints, bow-leg splints, club-foot splints, plaster jackets, etc.

In this Department in [illegible] years nearly [illegible] boys and girls have been treated for Club Feet and [illegible] corrected. Half of these came from places outside of Toronto. Surely we have a fair claim for help from the people of this Province.

Will you, the reader of this letter, help to give crippled children a fair start in life?

Busy dollars are better than idle tears. The sympathy that helps is good, but the Hospital has to have the sympathy that works.

While Christmas Bells are ringing to the glory of Him "Who made the lame to walk and the blind to see," give, give, give, and help the Hospital to help God's little ones, upon whom the heavy hand of affliction has been laid.

Will you please send a dollar, or more, if you can spare it, to Douglas Davidson, the Secretary-Treasurer of the Hospital, or

Chairman of the Trustees, Toronto.

Our Point of View

Laurier wishes his former finance minister back in the Commons. Of course he does. As the captain of the team he wants good Fielding.

The best proof that this is an age of invention was the prosecution of several Montreal milkmen for supplying the public with cowless milk.

—o—

We learn that some of our friends intend to celebrate the advent of the New Year in the old-fashioned way. We advise them to communicate with Chief Thompson and reserve cells at the police station.

—o—

The one-step is said to be the most popular of all the new dances, but we notice that many of our friends are very busy practising the income tax sidestep.

—o—

There is no telling where the Paris fashion of hair ribbons for men will end if it gets a fair start in this country. The chances are it would not be long before some of our friends would be wearing pink bows on their chin whiskers.

—o—

That old farmer who once indignantly remarked that the farmers would never countenance the gosh-dinged automobile, now owns and rides around in one, and all of his boys have them, and they are working for better roads.

A FAIR ARGUMENT

Here is a fine sample of middlemen's profits which send up the cost of living.

The western Grain Growers Grain Company pays a dividend of 25 per cent. How much does that put on wheat and flour? Is it fair to say 25 per cent.? But there are overhead and selling costs to be added to this. Would it be fair to add another 25 per cent.?

In other words, 50 per cent. is added to the price of grain by the Grain Growers Grain Company. Is that a fair statement?

Roderick Mackenzie, who visited Ottawa and slashed the Government, declaring that the Conservatives were responsible for the high cost of living, is a prominent stockholder of the Grain Growers Grain Company. He gets 25 per cent. for his stock. He is a middleman. He raises the price of grain. He increases the cost of living while trying to blame others.

Meanwhile what do the farmers get when the Roderick Mackenzies, their professed friends, are getting 25 per cent?

New Treatment Now Advocated For Bronchitis

Is Having Wonderful Success, and is Making Most Remarkable Cures.

For bronchitis a different form of treatment is now advocated. It consists of a scientifically devised vapor that penetrates to the uttermost recesses of the lungs and bronchial tubes. Every spot that is sore, every surface that is irritated is at once bathed with soothing balsams and healing essences that make chronic bronchitis an impossibility.

This treatment now so universally employed in bronchitis, throat troubles, colds, etc., is called CATARRHOZONE. It acts just as air of the pine woods act, as a healing antiseptic remedy for all diseases of the breathing organs.

Just think of it—a remedy that can be carried with the very air you breathe to the seat of bronchial or catarrhal inflammation. A remedy powerful enough to kill germ life and yet so healing that disease flees before it. Catarrhozone is truly a wonderful remedy. In many lands it has won its way and it affording grand results to sufferers from colds, catarrh, throat weakness, asthma and bronchitis. There is no sufferer from a grippy cold or any winter ill, that won't find a cure in Catarrhozone, which is employed by physicians, ministers, lawyers and public men throughout many foreign lands. Large size lasts two months and costs $1.00 and is guaranteed; small size 50c., sample size 25c., all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE AEROPLANE

It comes with a little shock of amazement to realize that it was only ten years ago that the Wright brothers made their first successful air flight, but a good deal has happened since then. Now flying is commonplace, and to give it renewed novelty Bleriot and others have taken to performing weird evolutions in the air, looping the loop, flying upside down, risking their lives to provide a new sensation to rivet a jaded public's attention to the flying game.

There are hundreds of air adventurers to-day where ten years ago there were but two. There are thousands of flying machines of one type or another, where ten years ago there were hardly any. Hundreds of birdmen have been killed, but the amazing thing is that hundreds have dared the air and lived.

So far as practical results are concerned the history of air travel is largely still in the future, and probably it will be a varied and important history. General opinion, however, is that air travel is too dangerous to ever become the regular thing but it should be remembered that general opinion years ago was that travel behind steam locomotives would be too dangerous to ever become popular.

But when we consider what has been done in the past ten years, he is a venturesome prophet indeed who will attempt to set a limit on what may be done in the next ten years.

BOARD OF EDUCATION

To the Electors of the City of Peterborough

Ladies and Gentlemen:

At the request of a large number of the ratepayers of the city, I have consented to be a candidate for the Board of Education, and respectfully solicit your support.

If elected I will do my best to serve you faithfully and well.

Yours very truly,
JOHN E. SMITH,
The People's Candidate.

THE HOSPITAL FOR SICK CHILDREN.

Editor Morning Times.

Dear Sir,—Many thanks for your generosity in giving space in your valuable columns to the appeal of the Hospital for aid in its work.

I just want to say that I am very grateful for your kind response to our call for help.

Once a year we must appeal in the feeble words of human language to the friends, whose money has proved a friend to many a sick and ailing child in The Hospital for Sick Children, and you have rendered us material aid by your kind share in our work.

Yours faithfully,
J. Ross Robertson,
Chairman of the Trust

MR. PECK'S LETTER.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—It is a great pleasure to read Grandfather Peck's patronising message to the people of Peterborough, who are invited to do something at his bidding without giving any data for going on. His letter is a very hard reflection on the Council and reminds me of Hydro-Johnston, who got Hydro for the City and it is not here yet. There are some bluffers in this city, Mr. Peck, and if you or any other man thinks that the city is going to put up $600,000 when there was no need to put up a cent if the business had been done right, then I say, Mr. Peck, you cannot tave the hint and write a letter like that. It ain't right.

Citizen.

ONE GOOD MAN.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—Mr. A. H. Stratton duly comes out, he says, because the city needs good men. Even he would not have consented then to come out only such a darned lot of people kept insisting on it that he says well, if you must have one good man I'll take a throw and there ye are. Now, do he think Mr. Hatch Morgan and Mr. F. H. Dobbin be no good at all bit only owld garbage that he condescended to run fearing the city would go crazy if it hadn't one good clane, swate, honest man on the Council.

Common Sense.

STATEMENT FROM DR. HOLLOWAY.

Editor Morning Times.

Dear Sir,—My attention has been drawn to the fact that some party or parties have circulated a report that I have been placed in the Aldermanic field by the Seymour Power Company. I wish to absolutely deny this as strongly as I can, and if I have as good evidence that the statements are made after this notice appears, as I have of the fact that they have already been made, I will take other means of correcting an absolute lie. I wish to state that I am entirely in favor of the Hydro-Electric system and its operation in Peterborough, but I leave it to your own judgment as to whether it has been competently handled by the Power committee of the City Council, during the past year, of which Mr. Johnston is chairman.

W. T. Holloway.

Peterborough, Dec. 30, 1913.

"FREE FOOD FOLLY" EXPOSED.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—The Liberal press is wasting much paper and ink these days telling the Canadian consumer how he is "groaning under the burden of the taxation of food" and holding out to him for relief, Laurier's "Free Food" panacea.

An examination of this particular Free Trade nostrum is both interesting and illuminating.

We will take those commodities which go to make up the dinner table of the average Canadian—meats and poultry, eggs, fish, butter and breadstuffs,—and by analyzing the amount of duty paid for their importation into Canada during the year 1912-13, see just how much the consumer "groans" under their taxation.

Meats and Poultry.

In 1913 the total duty collected from meats and poultry brought into Canada, totalled $1,040,547. If you divide this amount among a population of eight million, you will find that this terrible taxation of meat under which Canadians "groan," amounted in a whole year to the enormous sum of 13 cents per head—or the price of one half pound of beefsteak.

Now let us see about eggs. The duty collected from eggs imported during the year 1912-13 amounted to $267,128. Divide that among eight million people and you will be startled to find that this particular "groaning" was over the payment of a fraction over four cents per head, for a whole year—the price at present less than a whole egg.

Three Cents Per Head.

We will next take butter. The total duty collected from butter during the whole of the year 1912-13 was $[illegible]. Divide that among the population of the country, and it amounts to what?—the "crushing" sum of three cents per head.

On fish we paid duty to the amount of $[illegible]. Divide that among eight millions and it amounts to four coppers per head.

Lastly we will take breadstuffs. Duty on breadstuffs amounted during the past year to $[illegible]. Divide that among eight millions and you will see that this "crushing" taxation over 3c. per head for a whole year—over three cents per head for a whole year.

Total Duty Collected.

The total duty collected from the importation of all these food-stuffs, for one year, when divided among the country's population, amounted to [illegible] cents per head—and this is the "terrible food tax" that the Liberal press would make us "groan" under.

In Great Britain where they have a [illegible] tariff, the duty collected on foodstuffs last year amounted to nearly $[illegible], or nearly [illegible] dollars for every man, woman and child in the United Kingdom.

Let the Canadian consumer ponder over these few facts, and groan—for the Liberal press, and the Liberal policy.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, I am, etc.,

James Flood.

Cavan, Dec. 30, 1913.

TO THE ELECTORS OF PETERBOROUGH:

Ladies and Gentlemen:—

Last year a large number of ratepayers requested me to be a candidate for Water Commissioner in opposition to Mr. Moore. I not only declined to be a candidate but did what I could to prevent opposition. The Commissioners at that time had law suits on with the contractors where about thirty thousand dollars of the people's money was at stake. Mr. Moore being a lawyer I considered he should be the best posted man on the Commission to fight the contractors and in the interest of the City it would be a mistake to remove him.

This year I have again been waited upon by a large representation of the ratepayers who believe that with my thorough knowledge of all the waters in this district and my many years experience as alderman I should be a capable man for the position. I have consented to be a candidate and my past record in the Council I think is proof that if elected will give you faithful and honest service.

The taking over of the Hydro-Electric system will require a great deal of time—more than any man who has a large business to attend to can spare. Not being in business I can give all the time required, and if necessary will make a personal inspection of every house in the city and see that rich and poor are treated alike.

I can see no reason, with the large body of ready made reservoirs of the Otonabee River there should be any shortage of water for either household or lawn service, or why there should not be a reduction in the water rates. A good supply of good water is a necessity in every home and should be available for the people at a low rate.

To the ratepayers who are now residents of the City and not personally acquainted with me, would say that for a number of years I occupied the position of alderman, and always stood at the head of the poll both as a representative of No. 3 Ward and also after the Ward system was abolished.

General street railway extension and cheap transportation like cheap light and water, should be the goal of our municipal government. When a worker can have his house and garden anywhere, and is not tied to locality his prospects are greatly improved.

Trusting that the ratepayers who want good service in the future as I have given the past will give me their hearty support.

I am, yours very truly,

J. B. McWILLIAMS

Salts and Senna

Can you forget the horror of it! Oh how it clings to memory, the one blot on an otherwise happy childhood; now you have become a woman; same old bilious attacks, head splitting, and those awful vomiting fits; same old misery. Better have your physician examine you for gall stones, because there is no doubt but that is the cause of it all. Sanol treatment should be taken at once. Sanol will dissolve the stones and permanently cure you. Sold by all druggists. —Manufactured by Sanol Mfg. Co., Winnipeg.

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY

Ladies and Gentlemen:

The retirement of Mr. W. H. Hill has decided me to acquiesce with the desire of a number of ratepayers who wish me to be a candidate for a seat on the Utilities Commissioners' Board for 1914.

We all realize that the Board of Water Commissioners is, and needs to be, an efficient, business like organization. For the coming year, the management of the local Hydro-Electric will be an important addition to the duties of the Commissioners.

It will be my aim, if honored with a seat at the board, to co-operate with the present members of that commission, and to assist in continuing the success achieved by the Waterworks department.

I shall also endeavor to help, so far as is in my power, with the organization of the local Hydro-Electric system. Having from the beginning felt the advantages of this system, I shall do my utmost to make this public utility of the greatest possible service to the citizens of the municipality.

The qualification which I present to you in support of my candidature is service in your interest for five years on your board of Aldermen.

On this record I ask your support at the polls.

Respectfully,
ROBERT HICKS.

To The Electors of The North Ward

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,—

In making an appeal to you for your support in the coming municipal elections, I fully realize the handicap I am under in being a stranger to quite a number of you, even though I have been practising my profession here for seven years. My policy briefly is this:

An honest endeavor to show a dollar's value for every dollar expended, and the most economical and efficient government of the city's affairs. To attain this I have acceded to the wishes of a large number of the ratepayers in offering myself as a candidate for Alderman in the North Ward. Should I find it impossible to see you all personally before election day, I wish to make a most earnest appeal for your vote and influence, and can assure you that I will deem it my duty to fully merit your confidence.

J. M. GREENE
Board of Education

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

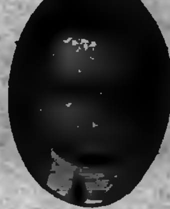
Having been requested by a number of ratepayers, I have consented to be a candidate for the Board of Education. I here ask for your vote and support and will assure you that my best service and ability will be given and used if honored with election.

Yours very truly,

J. M. GREENE

To the Electors of the WEST WARD

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:



Having been requested by a large number of citizens to stand for re-election as Alderman, I again respectfully tender you my services.

I have now represented you for four years, during which time I have made myself thoroughly conversant with the streets, sidewalks, sewers, and other interests in the Ward.

By my services in the past, together with the past four years' experience, I ask you to judge my actions in the future, and confidently solicit your support and influence.

If elected, I again promise to conscientiously look after the interests of the Ward and the City in general, and to give all matters coming before your Council the necessary time and careful consideration, endeavouring to consider all questions in a fair and business-like manner, consistent with economy and general progressiveness.

With season's best wishes, I am,

Your obedient servant,

JOS. J. DUFFUS.

Hydro—Johnston
To the Electors of NORTH WARD

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

I desire to heartily wish you and all the citizens of Greater Peterborough all the compliments of the season.

As a representative in the City Council, elected by the good people of the North Ward, I have had the honour of representing the people generally in carrying out their wishes for the introduction of the Hydro-Electric system into Peterborough, and I respectfully ask you for a further renewal of the confidence by again re-electing me to that very responsible position.

I stand for a principle that I believe to be in the interests of the masses of the people.

Notwithstanding the opposition offered to the honest work of your Council of 1913 I will continue to help to carry out that work until light and power are in the hands of the municipality and being run in the interests of the people, and not in the interests of a monopoly.

Yours in the good work,

Business Management of City's Business to the ELECTORS OF CENTRE WARD

In voting for A. H. STRATTON for Alderman for Centre Ward you are voting for a live awakened man who has the interests of Peterborough at heart. He is a large taxpayer and will use his best efforts to keep your taxes down to the lowest marks. At the same time he is sure to encourage existing manufactures and endeavor to bring in a new industry. In regard to the important matter of Hydro Electric, while he favours it he is especially in favour of businesslike management of the enterprise, so that the people, who voted so almost unanimously for it, get the greatest benefit from it at the least possible cost consistent with efficiency. He is a good business man by the test of success in his own business and knows that to encourage the working man and find employment for them at good wages, helps the business man and thereby help to make a BIGGER AND BETTER CITY. DAILY SHORT STORY

DOWN BY THE RIO GRANDE

The Bravery of a Woman and the Saving of a Life.

By CURRAN R. GREENLEY.

The long gray adobe walls of the hacienda lay bathed in the quiver of yellow light. Alleyne watched Margaret's face for a sign of truce, but the shadows came and went between the vines that draped the patio as the interminable Sabbath afternoon dragged away and Margaret remained buried in her book. "And all about a beggarly horse thief," he murmured to himself as he sat up straight and sent the pile of magazines crashing to the floor.

There was a look of consciousness about the back of that shapely brown head that held itself so persistently averted, but Alleyne deemed it wiser not to reopen the subject of Miguel.

Over in the corral things wore a deserted air. Two or three men lounged in the shade of the high wall. Alleyne yawned and looked at his watch and at a faint movement of the figure in the rocker. "Margaret, I"— Crack-crack-crack! Somewhere away to the west three shots rang out in rapid succession, a pause and then three more.

Over in the corral the lounging figures sprang to life, and an instant later three ponies were galloping in the direction of the shots. Alleyne dashed into the house, reappearing with the field-glasses. "They've got him!" He was peering at a collection of black dots on the edge of the horizon.

"Got who?" Margaret laid her hand upon his arm.

"The mischief!" Alleyne jerked the glasses down. "I forgot you were here." Under her steady gaze his color changed. "Yes, if you will have the whole ghastly truth and cannot be persuaded to stay out of it, it's that scoundrel Miguel."

Margaret shrank away from him with a low cry of distress. The look in her eyes went straight to Alleyne's heart, and his voice softened to a tender pleading as he tried to draw her to him. "Little woman, you cannot be the judge of these matters. And you cannot shield a horse thief. I could have told you this morning, but I preferred to let you think me a bit hard on Miguel than to shock you with the truth. There have been some queer happenings lately both here at the Alamo and at Jose's. Last night a bunch of Jose's best ponies came up missing and the boys have been trailing him since sunrise."

"John Alleyne, do you mean to let those savages of yours murder a man here on the Alamo just for the sake of a few broncos?" Margaret faced him sternly, and Alleyne lost his hard-kept patience.

"You forget that there are men's laws to be considered as well as God's, and out here on the fringe of the world the code knows no greater crime than lifting a broncho, and the lifting of many broncos aggravates the case. It is not a question in which my wife may meddle." And Alleyne strode toward the corral, while Margaret picked up the glasses.

The wind blown stretch of bare brown mesa told her nothing of the tragedy brewing behind its crest. She watched Alleyne until her eyes ached.

A clatter of hoofs and a voice calling her name brought her to the door, where a half broken cayuse snorted and pawed. Astride of him sat Bright Eyes, Miguel's Indian wife, the brown baby swung to her back. There was a queer ashen pallor on the woman's stolid face as she slid from the pony's back, one hand clutching at the deerskin thong that held the papoose. "White man get Miguel. Miguel he die." Here she pointed to her throat and made a gasping sound. "White squaw much heart. Miguel he no die. Sabe?"

Margaret cowered before the awful pleading in those savage eyes. "Not a question in which my wife may meddle," John had said, but there was no time to weigh scruples, and five minutes later a strangely assorted pair rode into the face of the setting sun, and the rough little cayuse strove to keep pace with the swinging stride of the Hindu mare. Far ahead a black dot moved against the sky that Margaret knew to be Alleyne. A glimmer of [illegible] flashed across her mind, but the sweet young mouth only grew a little firmer as she struck the trail of many horses and knew the goal to be in sight.

On and on, sagebrush and prickly pear, the yellow sand beneath, and overhead the blue melting into the evening's violet crown, nature's own studio upon the scene that swept into view. Where men and horses were grouped around the impassive figure wrapped in the ragged poncho that lounged in careless grace against the white scarred trunk of a large mesquite. Margaret's eyes went instinctively to the lariat knotted about the bronze throat. It was not the first time that Miguel had felt it there, but Rusty Pete himself held the end of this one.

The voices hushed instantly, and to a man the wide sombreros were lifted as Margaret slipped from the saddle and stood looking from one dark face to another. An awful sense of self consciousness [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible].

[illegible] [illegible] [illegible] interminable time it seemed to the woman who stood between that ring of fierce faces and their prey.

"God in heaven, will it last forever?" Her brain was reeling, and the black figures danced in a blood red mist as earth rose in waves beneath her. The silent battle was almost done when a wild yell from the darkening mesa scattered the circle to right and left as the men from Jose's galloped in. "Cut that rope!" yelled the leader as he bore down upon the group under the mesquite.

Margaret staggered blindly into Alleyne's arms, seeing nothing but the flash of Pete's knife as he cut the thong, then utter blackness until she awoke to the white walls of her own room.

Alleyne was bending over her. There was something distinctly apologetic in his attitude. Margaret grasped her advantage. "Well?" Her tone was tentative. Alleyne settled himself on the side of the bed, laughing a bit uneasily.

"I suppose you have the best of me, little woman. Your dramatic entrance upon the scene saved the day or we would have sent Miguel on the long ride on another man's count. Jose's men would have come too late."

"Who did it?"

"One of the greasers. Miguel had been over to the post loading up on fire water, as usual, and the greaser ran across him just about the time he discovered that the boys were close on his trail. Things were getting pretty warm for him when he persuaded Miguel to take charge of the ponies while he skipped out. Naturally the boys did not stop to question Miguel when they found him heading away from the ranch and the proof trotting alongside. It would have been all over for Miguel but for the fact that the greaser met a man who had good reasons for wanting to find him—and found him. Explanations came later, and when the greaser realized that a few broncos more or less couldn't count against a man who had only about twenty minutes to live he set things in motion to reach Miguel. That is all the story."

The south wind rustled the vines in the patio. Margaret looked down to the grove of mesquite just beyond the big corral, where a brown baby rolled in the dust at the door of Miguel's tepee. Alleyne's eyes followed hers. He understood.

WILLING TO LEND.

Only Her Husband, the Mean Thing, Had Pinched Her Wad!

Men have something to learn from women in the art of warding off "touches" for cash. Women respond to such requests once in about every thousand cases, but they are scientific in their refusals. A Cleveland woman with a reputation as a borrower turned up at the home of one of her friends the other morning with a much done over story about a persistent and threatening dressmaker and the usual request for the loan—"pay it back tomorrow, certain"—of $5.

"Why, my dear, certainly," was the pleasant response to her carefully rehearsed little yarn. "you poor thing, you! Just wait till I run upstairs and get my purse."

She ran upstairs. The male head of the house happened to be in the room where she kept her purse. He saw her dig the purse out of a chiffonier drawer and deliberately remove a wad of bills from it, leaving about 37 cents in silver and copper in the change receptacle. The man was mean enough to lean over the stair railing when his wife went downstairs to the parlor with her flattened pocketbook in her hand.

"Oh, I'm so sorry, dearie," he heard her say, "but I really thought I had the money. I find, though, that Frank, as usual, has been at my purse—I heard him say something about settling a plumber's bill last night when I was half asleep—and the mean thing has left me only enough for car fare. Too bad! Of course, you know, if I had it"—and so on.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Patronizing.

"That man Fullerton has a very supercilious manner."

"Yes," replied Miss Cayenne. "He can't even say 'it's a pleasant day' without seeming to patronize the climate."—Washington Star.

Just a Bluff.

"How is it that the quail on your bill of fare is always struck off?"

"That's just a fancy touch," explained the honesty waiter. "We never had a quail in the joint."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Confident Appeal to the Electors

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

Most of you are already familiar with my brief election address, and my further public statements made on nomination day, and if any additional explanations of my views are desired on any of the live questions affecting the interests of the City, I will be glad to give them to anyone between now and polling day. But as I will not be able, personally, to wait upon the whole electors before the day of voting, I desire to use this medium of soliciting your support.

The very encouraging indications of your support, coming so generally from all classes, has served to strengthen my confidence in the result.

With a clear comprehension of the work that lies before the coming Mayor of your city, begotten of close attention to the City's affairs during the past five years as your Alderman and a conscientious desire to contribute a further share of service, I now leave the campaign confidently in your hands.

Wishing one and all a Happy and Prosperous New Year,

G. A. GILLESPIE

J. J. HARTLEY

The Workingman's Candidate For

MAYOR

Unanimously Endorsed by the Trades & Labor Council

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY OF PETERBOROUGH:

Ladies and Gentlemen:—At the earnest request of a large number of the ratepayers I have consented to be a candidate for the position of Mayor for the year 1914.

Being born and having lived all my life in Peterborough, and my whole life's savings being invested in Peterborough, I naturally have a deep interest in the welfare and prosperity of the City.

Should I be elected I promise you that I will guard to the very best of my ability, the interests of the ratepayers and will oppose all unnecessary expenditure. I will do my utmost to keep down the ever increasing rate of taxation consistent with needs of a growing City.

I may say that I am in favor of Municipal Ownership, and am in favor of having all city work done by our own people instead of bringing in outsiders to do it.

I will endeavour to see that the ratepayers get value for every dollar that is expended.

I have had considerable experience in municipal matters, having served ten years in the Council and fourteen years on the Board of Education, being Chairman of that Board for two years, I was also Chairman of the Board of Health for several years, so that you will see that I am not without a fair share of experience.

Should you do me the honor to elect me as Mayor of our City I will do my best to serve you to the extent of my ability.

Yours respectfully,

J.J. HARTLEY

To The Electors of Ward One

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,—

A number of ratepayers request me to offer myself as a candidate for the representation of the above Ward in the coming Aldermanic election. I have consented to stand, and ask for your vote and influence.

If elected, I will seek to the utmost of my power, to promote the highest interests of the city.

Yours respectfully,

JOSEPH SAUNDERS.

To the Electors of the West Ward

Ladies and Gentlemen,

At the request of a number of the ratepayers of the above Ward, I have consented to offer myself as a candidate for the Council at the approaching Municipal Elections.

If elected I will do everything in my power to promote the best interests of the city.

Yours very truly,

James B. Brown

Two Reverend Gentlemen

They Played Their Parts Well, but There Was an Anticlimax

By J. [illegible] CROPS

Copyright by American Press Association, 1913.

When I was sheriff of [illegible] county there was the slipperiest scoundrel [illegible] the region [illegible]. He was not only slick, but a desperado. No one dared resist him, shelling out whenever he ordered one to do so. He was fond of disguises. At one time he would go about as a peddler, at another as a horse trader, and so on. He was known among us by the name under which he made his first haul, John Wagstaff. He changed his name every time he worked one of his schemes, but Wagstaff was what we called him.

I had done some neat work under disguise myself and determined that if I could locate the villain I would match him at his own game. So when news came that he was stopping with a widow about five miles up the creek I determined to go for him. I went as a traveling evangelist, mounted and with a pair of saddlebags filled with tracts. Two revolvers hung to my waist under my [illegible] coat. I hadn't any clerical garb, so I got one of the women to make me a [illegible].

When I reached the widow's place [illegible] I was going to work in the vineyard of the Lord in that region for a few days and would like to put up at her house. She didn't object, saying that she had another clergyman traveling with her and she thought [illegible] would take [illegible]

[illegible] out in each other's work. I assured him that we would, and truthfully, for I didn't doubt that the other clergyman was the man I was after.

I had a description of Wagstaff given me by a man he had robbed. The bandit was a short, thick man, with [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]ly goods, and he should aid the cause with gifts of money. I found him very hard of heart—indeed, a genuine [illegible]. When I asked him for [illegible] with which to replenish my [illegible] he took me into a little room in the rear of the ranch house and showed me a pile of gold and silver dollars, saying at the same time: "You see, I have plenty to give, but not a cent for you lazy parsons. You should all be out to real work."

Wagstaff [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] him to show you what he has in the northeast corner room on the ground floor."

"I don't reckon my route will be that way, but if I go there I'll remember what you say."

"Goodby, Brother Warbury," I said. "I am very glad to have met a fellow laborer in the Lord's vineyard."

[illegible]

[illegible] and agreed to play his own part in it. The villain of the piece was late in arriving, and I feared that, after all, he suspected a trap and would fail to walk into it. But just as I was giving him up I saw him coming on the road. Dismounting at the steps, he walked to the veranda, where I was waiting for him, and Bittinger came out. Seeing two parsons instead of one, the latter put on a feigned scowl, saying:

"I suppose you two lazy rascals have come down on me for dinner. I don't mind feeding you if you'll let me off from your efforts to convert me. I wish you to understand that I'm a heathen, and, what's more, you can't make me anything else."

Dinner was waiting, so we all went in together. Since a desperado was a guest no other members of the family, except Bittinger, were present, and he was secretly well armed. The women in the house were all put up on to the top story, where they would not be injured in case any shooting took place.

Bittinger, as long as we refrained from any effort to convert him, made a pleasant host, but as soon as we made the slightest effort in that direction, or, rather, when I did so, for my colleague, being solely interested in getting his hands on the plunder, left this part of the performance entirely with me, our host grew grim. My plan was that we two parsons should spend the night in the house. Wagstaff would pick the lock of the supposed treasure room and go in, and I would see that he didn't get out without a surrender.

"Mr. Warbury," I said at table, dropping in presence of our heathen host the prefix brother, "I would like tomorrow, if Mr. Bittinger will keep us till then, to have you visit with me some persons in this neighborhood to whom I have been endeavoring to administer spiritual comfort. I think you will be able to add largely to their consolation."

"I don't mind," he replied.

"Oh, you can stay here if you like," put in Bittinger. "I've got two rooms vacant, one on the second story, the other down here. The one down here is the only bedroom on this floor. We keep it exclusively for guests."

I gave a quick glance at the villain and saw an expression of satisfaction on his face at the prospect of being assigned a room near the treasure and being left alone on the floor to work out the problem without disturbing any one.

All was going well when I, who sat facing a window, saw two men riding into the premises, one of whom I knew and who knew me. It was evident that my role of parson would be played out as soon as he came in and recognized me for a sheriff. There was no time [illegible]. I must think and act quickly. I dreaded a shooting match that Bittinger or some one else in the house might get hurt, but the matter must be settled then and there.

"Hello!" I exclaimed. "There comes Nick Edwards."

Wagstaff turned like a flash, at the same time putting his hand under his coat. When he faced the table again my weapon was within an inch of his nose.

I saw by his eye that he understood he had been trapped and was meditating whether to die then or later, but I had my eye fixed on his and would detect his resolve to it before he could even raise the revolver on which he had put his hand. Within a few seconds I saw that he had decided against a bullet in his brain.

"Drop your weapon," I said.

A few seconds passed and I heard his revolver fall on the floor.

"Mr. Bittinger," I said, "will you take away any other arms the reverend gentleman may have about him?"

Bittinger found several revolvers and two or three knives. [illegible]

Holiday Announcement

WE take pleasure in once more presenting to you our Annual Announcement in connection with the Holiday Trade, and would respectfully call your attention to the fact that we have secured from the leading markets of the world an up-to-date stock of holiday goods, suitable for Christmas and New Year presents, which we are selling at a bargain. This year we are better prepared than ever to cater to the wants of the public.

In both quality and price, we defy competition. Our expenses are comparatively insignificant as compared with the other larger stores in the city, and the fact that we have not got to look to the profits from our bookstore trade to carry us through, but have a large printing and book manufacturing business as well, in addition to our rapidly expanding newspaper business.

We have made expensive preparations for the Holiday Trade, and invite the public to call and inspect our stock and get our prices before purchasing elsewhere.

Calendars, Handy Booklets, Christmas and Text Cards

We have in Calendars, Booklets, Christmas and Text Cards a stock of the latest designs, and a very large assortment to choose from. Special discounts to parties taking a number.

Fancy Goods

In Fancy Goods, as in every other line, our stock is up-to-date. We can supply you with presents for young and old, rich and poor, wives, husbands and sweethearts. We only give a mere hint here of the articles with which our shelves are loaded:—Brush and Comb Setts, Manicure Setts, Writing Desks, Collar and Cuff Boxes, Glove and Handkerchief Boxes, Ladies' and Gentlemen's Travelling Companions, Jewel Cases, Photo Boxes, Albums, etc., etc. These goods are all new, and made in designs and of material not shown before.

Books for All

We ask an inspection of our stock and prices. We aim to give our customers the best possible value for the money. Dainty Gift Books, Padded Poets, and an endless variety of Cloth and Leather Bound Works. Also, Bibles, Hymnals, Children's Illustrated Books, etc.

Games for Young and Old

Our stock in Games is very complete, including Fishpond, Flips, Game of India, Halma, The Century Ride, Lost Heir, Authors, Checkers, Dominoes, Nations, Lotto and all the popular 10 cent games.

New Souvenir Novelties and Small Wares

The following are but a few of the many very desirable articles suitable for Yuletide remembrances: Purses, Card Cases, Burnt Leather Blotters, Pen Wipers and Book Markers; Tea, Crumb, Pin and Ash Trays, Ink Wells, Bon-bon Dishes, Japanese Cups and Saucers, Bread and Butter Plates, Rose Bowls, Vases, Biscuit Jars, all kinds of bric-a-brac, etc.

For Dolls We Lead—Others Follow

We propose to lead this season in the Doll Trade, and are showing Dolls at prices that defy competition. Mechanical Kid Dolls, Dressed Dolls in all sizes, Sleepers and Composition Dolls, Wax and China Dolls, [illegible] Dolls and Dolls that may be used for Fancy Pin [illegible] etc. Dolls from 15c up.

Please Remember

1.—That The Times Bookstore has everything marked close to cost.

2.—We can sell cheaper than any other house. The reason we can afford to do so is, because our expenses are practically nil compared with other concerns.

3.—We are large manufacturers of stationery supplies and books, employing about 60 persons, so that in these lines we have goods at first cost.

4.—We sell to the wholesale trade, who again sell to the bookstores and stationers throughout the country, so that by purchasing direct from us you save, in many cases, the profits of two "middle men."

5.—The Times Bookstore is confident that it can give you satisfaction, and would urge an early inspection of our stock before the rush begins. You only have to select what you want and have the goods put aside for delivery when required.

Soliciting the favor of your esteemed patronage, and wishing you the compliments of the season, we remain,

Very respectfully yours,

TENDERS will be received by the undersigned up to and including Wednesday, the 31st of December next, for the right to cut pulpwood on a certain area, situated on the [illegible] River in the District of Temiskaming.

Tenderers shall state the amount they are prepared to pay as bonus in addition to the Crown dues of [illegible] per cord for Spruce, and [illegible] per cord for other pulpwoods, or such other rates as may from time to time be fixed by the Lieutenant-Governor in Council, for the right to operate a pulp mill and a paper mill on or near the area referred to.

Such tenderers shall be required to erect a mill or mills on or near the territory and to manufacture the wood into pulp and paper in the Province of Ontario—the paper mill to be erected when directed by the Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines.

Parties making tender will be required to deposit with their tender a marked cheque payable to the Honourable the Treasurer of the Province of Ontario, for ten per cent. of the amount of their tender, to be forfeited in the event of their not entering into an agreement to carry out the conditions, etc.

The highest or any tender not necessarily accepted.

For particulars as to description of territory, capital to be invested, etc., apply to the undersigned.

W. H. HEARST,
Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines.
Toronto, Ontario, September 17th, 1913.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTHWEST LAND REGULATIONS.

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at the office of any Local Agent of Dominion Lands (not sub-agency), on certain conditions.

Duties.—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required in every case, except when residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre. [illegible]

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right [illegible]

ATE A WHOLE SHEEP.

One of the Feats of Nicholas Wood, a Famous Glutton.

The following account of a man named Nicholas Wood, famed for his gluttony, was written by John Taylor, the "water poet" of the seventeenth century:

Nicholas Wood was a Kentish yeoman. "Be it known to all men to whom these presents shall come," writes John Taylor, "that I, John Taylor, waterman of St. Savior's in Southwark, will, with plain truth, bare and threadbare, treat of the remarkable actions of Nicholas Wood.

"He hath eaten a whole sheep at one meal: pardon me! I think he left the skin, the wool and bones; and presently after he hath swallowed three pecks of damsons. Two loins of mutton and one loin of veal are but three sprats to him. Once at Sir William St. Ledger's house, so valiant and stomach of teeth he showed himself, that he ate as much as would suffice thirty men, and afterwards he slept eight hours.

"One morning I sent for him to the Inn to eat breakfast. He had already eaten one pottle of milk, one pottle of pottage, and bread, butter, and cheese. He gave me thanks and said that if he had known any gentleman would have invited him to breakfast he would have spared his meal at home. Nevertheless he would do me the courtesy to show me some small cast of his office. Whereupon I summoned the hostess and commanded that all the victuals in the house be laid before my guest.

"The inn was slenderly provided, but six-penny loaves were mounted two stories high like a rampart, three six-penny veal pies, one pound of sweet butter, and a number of other dishes were set out, all of which were quickly brought to nothing."

RUBBER OYSTERS.

They Brought Trade and Saved Their Inventor From Failure.

"Rubber oysters laid the foundation of my success," said a millionaire hotel man.

"I had a small saloon in those days, and things looked very black. They looked, in fact, like bankruptcy. So in desperation I cut an old rubber doormat into oyster shaped pieces on April 1 and fried them in egg and breadcrumbs to a tasty brown.

"There was only one man in the bar when I fetched in that dish of sparkling rubber oysters. His eyes glittered, and he grabbed a fork, jabbed it into a big fellow and took a hungry bite.

"Seeing the surprised look that spread over his face, I turned away to hide a smile. He gave an awkward laugh and said:

"'Them's fine oysters. I'll bring a couple of the boys in to sample them.'

"Sure enough, he brought two friends a half hour later. The friends no sooner saw the appetizing rubber oysters than, setting down their beer, they each sunk their teeth in one.

"They, too, sent in friends for oysters. I fried up no less than three old doormats and two overshoes that April fool day. The whole town laughed, and the papers printed funny stories about my joke. My joint got real popular.

"In short, I was saved—saved from bankruptcy by rubber oysters."—Washington Post.

A Light on Mothers.

The late William James, Harvard's famous psychologist, would often illuminate a dusty subject with an appropriate anecdote. Discussing motherhood in a lecture on psychology, Professor James once said:

"A teacher asked a boy this question in fractions:

"'Suppose that your mother baked an apple pie and there were seven of you—your parents and five children. What part of the pie would you get for your portion?'

"'A sixth, ma'am,' the boy answered.

"'But there are seven of you,' said the teacher. 'Don't you know anything about fractions?'

"'Yes, ma'am,' said the boy, 'I know all about fractions, but I know all about mother too. Mother 'd say she didn't want no pie.'"

Tactful Truth.

"I appeal to Mr. Verity, whose truthfulness nobody doubts," said the outraged hostess, with a glitter in her eye. "Mr. Verity, do you think I supply my boarders with bad butter?"

The others waited eager attention to see how Mr. Verity would get out of it.

"Madam," he answered, with a bow, [illegible]

THE CAMPHOR LANGUAGE.

Used in Johore Because of a Malay Superstition.

In Johore, on the Malay peninsula, there is employed one of the strangest languages in the world, used for a most curious purpose. This tongue is called Pantang Kapor or "camphor language," and is a medium employed by natives and others engaged in gathering the product of the Malaysian camphor tree, but only when they are at work.

It is a superstition of these natives that should they use the language of the district, the Malay or the aboriginal Jakun, they would be unable to obtain their camphor.

The Malay natives firmly believe that each species of tree has a spirit or guardian angel that presides over its affairs, this spirit being known by the name of Bisan. This divinity's resting place is near the trees. Then, too, the spirit of the camphor tree is held to be extremely jealous of the precious gum, so that it becomes necessary to propitiate her, inasmuch as she would, should she learn that hunters were in quest of it, endeavor to interpose obstacles to their mission. Accordingly the natives speak in a tongue that the tree spirit may not understand. It was for this purpose that the mysterious "camphor language" was invented, and it consists of an odd mixture of Jakun and Malay words that have been curiously altered and reversed.—Harper's Weekly.

CRATER LAKES.

Mexico Has Some of the Most Perfect of These Peaceful Pools.

The mere words "crater lake" carry with them a charm and mystery that are akin to romance. But Mexico, with all her romance, has never given abroad any description of some of the most beautiful crater lakes in the world. Valle de Santiago, a little town of the state of Guanajuato, boasts four of the most perfect and beautiful of such lakes.

The village nestles among eleven craters, all formed in some past age by sudden explosions from the interior of the earth, explosions that blew out a great amount of earth, formed low cones and subsided without flow of lava or other demonstration than the single explosion. They are what are known to science as "explosion craters."

The calm restfulness of the crater lake is unlike anything in the world. One finds lakes and solitary pools in forests of mountain fastnesses, and the calm there is akin to witchery, but they are stirred sometimes by passing breezes, and the trees will wave above in the wind. But in a crater lake there is not a breath that will stir it, and even a stone cast into its bosom creates ripples that seem as though they would be swallowed ere they are born. Peace is a word without a meaning until one has stood on the slope of such a crater, with such a lake at his feet.—Mexican Herald.

Made His Position Clear.

An old Pennsylvania German living in the mountains had a hard three hours' dusty walk to accomplish one morning, and he rose very early to make his start. He had gone but a little way when he was overtaken by an automobile. The driver picked up the old man, and they were at his destination in about twenty minutes.

"Dankte so much awfully unt de ride. If I had known myself to be here already two hours in front of de clock yet I vud be at home fast asleep already to start unless I know you vud not have picked me up since."—Housekeeper.

Scottish Students' Dress.

The Scottish university student has a code of etiquette in clothes as strict as that of Eton or of Harrow. And into it the straw hat enters. On Sept. 15, be the weather ever so bleak, the streets are full of what the small boy knows as "strawbashers." On the 16th you will find never a one—on a student's head, that is. As for the medical student, he seldom wears a straw hat at all or anything in its place. It is his pride to go bareheaded, as it is to wear a fancy waistcoat and turned up trouser ends. The arts and divinity men sedately avoid these last three fashions.—London Chronicle.

The Forgotten Picture.

Mr. Hope Moncrieff recalls in "London" a curious story of Lord Hertford. The one noble taste he had was for the collection of pictures, which he is said to have hung with their faces to the wall. He once commissioned an agent to find him a picture which, it turned out, he had himself bought three or four years earlier!

The Disgusted Friend.

De Chappie—If there's any one object I hate more than another it's a fellow who is always going around introducing people. There's Goodheart, for instance.

Smartweed—What's he been doing?

De Chappie—The idiot! The other day he introduced me to a man I owed money to, and I'd been owing it so long he'd forgotten all about me. Now I'll have to pay up or be sued.—London Telegraph.

Watch Night Service.

There will be a watch night service commencing at 11.00, in the George street Methodist church to-night. All welcome.

Enter Their Novitiate

An interesting ceremony took place at Mount St. Joseph yesterday, when nine young ladies received the habit of sisterhood of St. Joseph and entered upon a novitiate that extends through three years.

All Candidates But One.

All the candidates for municipal office, who were compelled by law to "qualify," which does not include candidates for the Board of Education, "made good" last night except Mr. Brown, who was nominated for councillor in [illegible] Ward.

The School Board.

For the information of our readers, as there seems to be some misunderstanding on that point, we might state that the election for members of the school board is a general city vote, not by wards.

A. O. H. Where "At Home"

Last night the annual At Home of local members of the Ancient Order of Hibernians was held in St. Aloysius Lyceum. There was a [illegible] crowd present and all thoroughly enjoyed themselves. A [illegible] and vocal program was rendered.

Chief Chilton Bit.

Chief of Police Chilton of Lindsay was "stung," along with many others, on Monday through a practical joke played near a moving picture house in that town. The boys had a good [illegible] watch with a long string attached. The watch was left on the pavement. [illegible]

Memorial Service

A memorial service has been arranged for to-night in the Salvation Army Temple commencing at 8 p.m. in the memory of the members of the local corps who have passed away. Among these is the late Captain Watkins, who was the officer in charge of the local Salvation Army immediately before Adjutant [illegible].

"No Police Court Yesterday"

"Nothing doing" was the [illegible] out at the local police court yesterday morning [illegible] The Times that he [illegible] the morality [illegible] of a [illegible] manufacturing city of over 20,000 population during Christmas week and is also a compliment to the vigilance of our local police force in [illegible] order out of a former [illegible].

Of Interest to Local Students.

The end of that bogey of youthful scholars—the entrance examination—is not far distant, if general advantage is taken of amended regulations just approved by the Ontario Department of Education. In the regulations governing the courses of study in the High Schools and Collegiate Institutes put into effect early in the year provision was made for the acceptance of the certificate of Public school principal for entrance to the High School, in lieu of a written examination.

Comes Here For Operation

Mr. Harvey Staunton, formerly of this city, but now living in Lindsay, arrived in Peterborough. He yesterday morning told The Times that he was going out in the afternoon to Nicholl's Hospital for an operation on the glands of his neck. When asked by The Times: "Why didn't you go into the Ross Memorial Hospital for the operation?" Mr. Staunton replied, "I would sooner pay the price at Nicholl's Hospital than be operated on free at Lindsay. Dr. Halliday is going to operate!"

Officers of Local Barbers

The annual election of officers for local 492, Journeymen Barbers International Union of America, resulted in the following being elected:

Pres.—John Smith.
Hon. Pres.—John Riley.
Fin.-Sec.—Wm. Welsh.
Treas.—H. Gainey.
Guardian—W. Flannery.
Trustees—Messrs. Geo. Campbell, R. Shakerove, L. Motrow and A. Mitchell.
Delegates to Trades and Labor Council—Messrs. Smith, Riley, Gainey, Miller and Flannery.

Port Hope Man Dead.

Toronto, Dec. 30.—The sudden death by apoplexy yesterday morning of William J. Shaw, 297 Leslie St., removes a well known figure, a man of sterling worth and unlimited energy. He was born 72 years ago in Whitby, Ont. After 27 years' sojourn in the United States, he returned to his native country, where he has resided for the past eight years. Since returning he has been identified with the promotion of the International Tool Steel Company, who have their works at Port Hope. He discovered the process of producing tool steel from the magnetic iron sands, of which there are large deposits near Port Hope. The late Mr. Shaw leaves a widow and one daughter, Miss Corrine M. Shaw.

Improvement to Montgomery House

The renovations at the Montgomery House are fast approaching completion. These changes include a big new lavatory, including a [illegible] with hot and cold water, to the south of the present lavatory. The present lavatory will be converted into a commodious cloak room. Mr. Montgomery intends to put a door in the wall between the rotunda and the new cloak room. It would surprise the average man to realize the difficulty of putting this door in the wall or rather in breaking open the needed aperture. The inside walls of this hotel are of stone almost two feet thick.

Interests Local Chauffeurs.

After the New Year paid chauffeurs in the province will require special licenses. The method of the government involves a system of resident examiners in different centres, all of whom belong to the Ontario Motor League. These have already been appointed in North and East Toronto, Ottawa, Peterborough, Chatham, Fort William, Woodstock, St. Thomas, North Bay, Sarnia, and other [illegible] centres. Arrangements are incomplete as yet for Toronto, Hamilton and [illegible]. [illegible]

John B. Rutherford, of Minneapolis, Minn., brother of the late Wm. Rutherford, of South Monaghan, is spending the winter with his sister, Mrs. James Perrin, and nephews and nieces here in Monaghan.

CITY IN PARAGRAPH

SUNLIGHT AND SHADOW ON THE REAL OF A CITY LIFE

Dysonville is almost ripe for falling into Peterborough's municipal basket.

Thirty years ago Mr. [illegible] of the Gazette, Penelon Falls, fell heir to $5,000.

A watch night service will be held in Bethany Tabernacle beginning at 9.30 o'clock this evening.

There is good skating on Little Lake and down the river to Rice Lake.

In December, 1888, strenuous efforts were made to have gas installed in the County buildings at Lindsay. Gas is still rampant on coal-oil.

Two brothers in the township of Ops, appeared before County Magistrate Moore of Lindsay and were both bound over to keep the peace.

The new wing of the Nicholls Hospital will be open to visitors on New Year's Day, afternoon and evening. Entrance from West side.

Yesterday a large consignment of fine straight telephone or telegraph poles arrived in the city on sleighs. The poles are unusually straight and adapted to their coming requirements.

Mr. Mack Curtis, who is charge of the public lavatory is wearing an official peaked cap with the letters "C. P. P." city private police, in [illegible] thereon.

Adjt. McElhaney of the Salvation Army is trying hard to get work for the local unemployed. If there is any chance for employment for these [illegible], the Adjutant will get a [illegible] on that opportunity and [illegible].

THE INNER SHRINE.

A strong play well acted will be the offering at the Grand Opera House, Saturday, Jan. 3rd, matinee and night. Dramatized from Basil King's popular novel, the play is even more popular and interesting than the book, because the strongest scenes can be made much more interesting and compelling to the sight than when read on the printed page. A romance of a woman's heart—this might be called. The first act is laid in Paris, and the next three acts are laid in America, and needless to say Dodge and Castle, the celebrated scenic artists, of New York, took advantage of this opportunity and turned out a superbly wonderful production. The last act is wondrously beautiful—it shows the magnificent Bay Tree Inn, at Lakeville, N.J.

The story is familiar to thousands who have read the novel, and has to do with the struggles of Diane Eveleth, in winning her Roy in the world [illegible] and how she eventually wins the man of her heart's choice, is vividly told in this dramatization by the brilliant Channing Pollock. Basil King who wrote the novel is the author of many other great successes, notably, "The Wild Olive" and "The Way Home." "The Inner Shrine" is still considered among the six best sellers. King is a Canadian by birth, having first seen the light in Prince Edward Island. He was educated at King's College, Windsor. The winsome Justina Wayne has been selected to create the heroine, Diane Eveleth. She has been a success both in this country and in London, where she played several special engagements at His Majesty's Theatre. The dainty Hazel Harrison has been secured to play Dorothea Fryne, and the handsome and magnetic actor, Albert Andrews, will be the [illegible] hero, Derek Pryne. This promises to be one of the events of the present dramatic season, and those who appreciate a good, wholesome, entertaining drama, cannot afford to miss Channing Pollock's great play, "The Inner Shrine."

BURN YOUR BRIDGES

When All Retreat is Cut Off, Then You Must Go Ahead.

Young men often make the mistake when they start on an important undertaking of leaving open a way of retreat if things go too hard, says Orison Swett Marden in Success Magazine. No one can call out his greatest reserves, do the greatest thing possible to him, while he knows that if the battle gets too hot he has a line of retreat still left open. Only when there is no hope of escape will an army fight with that spirit of desperation which gives no quarter.

Many a great general in his march on the enemy has burned his bridges behind him, cut off his only possible retreat, for the bracing, encouraging effect upon himself and his army, because he knew that men only call out their greatest reserves of power when all chance is cut off and when fighting desperately for that which they count dearer than life.

We are so made that as long as there is a chance to retreat, so long as there are bridges behind us, we are tempted to turn back when the great test comes.

"Will you hold this fort?" asked General [illegible] of General Pierce [illegible]. "I will try, general." "Will you hold this fort?" "I will die in the [illegible]." "That won't do. Look me in the eye, sir, and tell me if you will hold this position." "I will," said General Pierce, and he did.

Sure on One Point.

"Do you believe that great wealth [illegible] to keep a man out of [illegible]," asked the party who was [illegible] by the proverbial habit.

"I am not prepared to express an opinion on that subject," answered the student of human nature, "but I know that great wealth has kept many a man out of the penitentiary."—Chicago News.

THEY SEPARATED

But the Parting Was More Strenuous Than Jim Expected.

A man named Raynor when gold hunting in Alaska had as partner a venerable prospector, who went about habitually with his boot legs stuffed full of dynamite sticks. The old man had a pleasantly casual way of filling the stove oven with these sticks in order that they might thaw out there. Sometimes, too, he forgot them, which was imprudent, to say the least. Raynor was not at all of a timorous disposition, but the ancient prospector's reckless carelessness troubled his nerves. He remonstrated with him repeatedly and strenuously, but his protest did not seem to have the slightest effect.

"Jim," he said finally when driven to desperation, "if you can't be more careful with that dynamite we'll have to separate."

That night as he approached the shack a terrific concussion rent the air and knocked him insensible. When he recovered consciousness he perceived one of the aged prospector's legs lying near. He stared at it a moment meditatively.

"Well, Jim," he remarked at last sadly, "I guess we've managed to separate all right, particularly you, Jim!"—Minneapolis Journal.

The Thistle In New Zealand.

When New Zealand was first occupied by the white man it was practically without a pest of any sort. The white man, however, introduced the rabbit, Scotch thistle and sparrow. These multiplied exceedingly, and then stoats and weasels were introduced to kill the rabbits and "little owls" to thin out the sparrows. Experience has shown that the stoats and weasels think more of native birds as articles of diet than they do of the rabbit. The "little owl," on the other hand, appears to have quite justified his introduction to New Zealand, as he is reported to be waging violent war on sparrows, beetles and grubs. So far nothing has been invented which will eradicate the Scotch thistle; it is characteristic of its country.

THAT WATER FAMINE STILL WORRIES THE MONTREAL FOLK

City Will be Without Water To-morrow--City Engineer's Plan Has Failed

Montreal, Dec. 31.—Owing to the failure this morning of the plan adopted by the city engineer's department for giving Montreal temporary relief from the water famine caused by the collapse of the intake pipe leading to the waterworks pumping station the city will be without water to-day and most likely to-morrow. The famine began on Christmas Day.

The plan adopted called for the filling in of the 60-foot break in the intake conduit with steel pipes. the water had only been turned into the [illegible] two hours when the packing surrounding the steel pipes and the old [illegible] conduit was forced out and pumping operations had to be suspended.

Humor of the Situation.

The situation bad as it is, has not been without its humor. Some enterprising printer in Westmount, a suburb of Montreal which has its own water system, prepared a number of cards which bore an inscription inviting friends to "bath parties." They were eagerly bought by Westmount folk and sent to friends in Montreal who were not slow to accept the invitation.

It has become a regular thing now for men to carry home bottled spring water at night, while the bottles of water have been sent around by people to friends as presents.

Demand Compensation.

A formal demand for compensation for damage suffered to their premises in the Ontario street fire on Monday was to-day made upon the city by the owners of property who suffered loss. The claims made total over $350,000.

DONS MALE ATTIRE TO KEEP [illegible] WOLF FROM DOOR; WINS BARS

Plucky Girl of Twenty to Keep Alive Took on Job as a Porter--Lived for Weeks in Fort William

Fort William, Ont., Dec. 31.—Her male disguise so complete that a [illegible] in the west end of the city who employed her as porter, did not suspect she was a girl, Miss Elsie [illegible], aged 20, in the Police Court to-day said she had been masquerading as a man to keep from starving.

The girl said she came here several weeks ago from [illegible], where she lived at the home of her uncle on a farm.

Girls Under Handicap.

When planning to leave home she had decided that being in the guise of a girl she was under too great a handicap to make her way in the world.

She appeared in the dock with her black hair closely cropped, wearing an almost new suit of brown, with soft shirt, silk tie and moccasin shoes.

She was sentenced to serve six months in the Mercer reformatory.

London Papers Predicts Honors for Meredith, Roddick and Archambault.

London, Dec. 31.—The New Year's honors will be announced to-night. The Ottawa correspondent of the Daily Telegraph predicts those of the knighthoods for Montrealers, namely: Chief Justice Archambault, Mr. H. V. Meredith, president of the Bank of Montreal, and Dr. T. G. Roddick, Dean of the Medical Faculty at McGill University.

It is again asserted that Premier Borden has refused knighthood.

ALD. DUFFUS STATES HIS PLATFORM

To the Electors of the West Ward:

Ladies and Gentlemen,—There are several subjects which would receive the especial attention of the City Council during 1914, in addition to firm efforts to keep the general expenditure down to the lowest figure consistent with good service. To these subjects, if you honour me with re-election, I will give closest attention.

It is in the highest degree in the interest of the people that the Hydro-Electric project should be carried through, and this will receive my earnest support.

The extension of permanent improvements is an important subject, and in close connection with this question, the desirability of the city owning its own street paving plant should be carefully taken up, in order that the Board of Works and Engineering Departments may do as much of this work as is in the best interests of the city, and at such time as is most suitable, in order that we may have all the work done by our own ratepayers.

The extension of sewers and sidewalks, and the subsequent grading and water-tabling of same on such streets as may be requested by the ratepayers living thereon.

A more adequate system of surface drainage, in order to improve the general appearance and sanitary condition of our streets.

I have already asked for a report from the Engineering Department on the advisability of adopting civic conduits, in order that all wires may be placed therein, thus eliminating the undesirable necessity of having poles placed in front of the people's property. Space in these conduits to be rented to the different companies at such charges as will pay the cost and maintenance of same. If a favorable report is received this matter will have my further attention.

A better and more extensive system of street lighting and police protection for the outlying districts will receive my attention, in the interest of the general and [illegible] welfare of the city.

I will give all the time and assistance necessary to [illegible] further new industries, of such character and [illegible] as will be in the best interests of the city.

Owing to the orders of the Provincial Board of Health, sewage disposal works will have to be constructed, and my object will be to have this done in the most economical and efficient manner.

[illegible]

Yours most respectfully,
[illegible] DUFFUS.

SENDS A NEW YEAR'S MESSAGE TO CANADA

Toronto, Dec. 31.—The Lord Mayor of London cables the following message:

"The City of London sends warmest New Year greetings to the municipalities and inhabitants of the great Dominion of Canada, trusting that the 1914 period will be rich in prosperity, and contentment in municipal and social matters.

"BOWATER,
"Lord Mayor of London."

Sir Vansittart Bowater is one of the most impressive figures in English municipal life. The pageants that marked his inauguration were notable and interesting. He is an intimate friend of the King.

INFLUX TO CANADA WILL START EARLY

Halifax, Dec. 31.—The immigration officials of the Salvation Army at Halifax are preparing for the arrival during the winter and early spring of many thousands of their proteges, sent out from England by the Army.

There will be Army parties, varying from 30 to 400, on many of the liners to Halifax this season. Bookings have been arranged on no less than twenty-four steamships.

Letters are being sent throughout Nova Scotia to all farmers in the Province who might be in need of men to work on their lands.

There is at present a demand for domestics introduced by the Army which cannot possibly be met, but commencing with January, large monthly detachments of domestics will be brought from the British Isles.

BIGGEST TURKEY IN CANADA

St. Catharines Boasts That It Has a 43 Pounder.

St. Catharines, Ont., Dec. 31.—At the poultry show here to-day is a turkey, tipping the scales at the tremendous weight of 43 pounds. It is owned by John Smith, a Pelham Township farmer, and is said to be the biggest and heaviest in Canada.

A FINAL MESSAGE FROM ROBERT HICKS

Ladies and Gentlemen,—As it will be quite impossible for me to personally interview the whole of the electors before polling day, I take this means of soliciting your voluntary support for the important position of Water Commissioner for 1914.

Let me just add that to my mind the spirit in which the Water Commissioners in the past have thought to accomplish every problem which has confronted them, has been most exemplary, and that it will be my aim, if elected, to do my best to assist in solving every new problem of the future and to render the best public service in the interest of our rapidly growing City.

The valuation placed upon a public man in the midst of a campaign and an impartial review of his business ability, conduct, and stake in the City should enter into his fitness for office.

Your faith in me must be the strongest incentive to my usefulness, and if I am favoured with your confidence I will see to it that that faith has not been misplaced.

With best wishes of the season, I remain,

At Your Service,
ROBERT HICKS.

SHIPWRECKED CREW SAVED SIX MONTHS ON AN ISLAND

Norfolk Island, Australasia, Dec. 30.—The shipwrecked crew of the steamer Eldorado, of San Francisco, after a forced stay of six months on Easter Island, a Chilean possession about 275 miles out in the Pacific Ocean were picked up and rescued by the Knight of the Garter, a British steamer, while she was making the voyage from Valparaiso to Newcastle, New South Wales.

The Eldorado, which left Columbia River on April 1 for An Anto Fagasta, was abandoned at sea on June 13 and her crew of eleven men made their way in a boat to Easter Island. The place is practically uninhabited and is out of all trade routes. The captain N. Benson, decided therefore to risk another voyage in his small boat, and with three volunteers set out to sea leaving his two mates, the ships cook and four sailors behind.

He set off and after a 28 days voyage reached Papeete one of the Society Islands on Nov. 5, when he reported the predicament of his shipmates.

Nothing further was heard of the shipwrecked men till the arrival at the cable station here of the Knight of the Garter which had the rest of the Eldorado's crew on board.

POLICE DEPARTMENT HOLD VERY SUCCESSFUL BANQUET

A Good Menu, a Good Musical Program and Good Fellowship Characterized the Event

Last night the first annual banquet of the Police Department of the City of Peterborough was held in the Court room, which was beautifully decorated with streamers and National flags.

About sixty sat down to a sumptuous repast provided by Chief Thompson and his merry men in blue and brass buttons.

Chief Thompson very ably filled the chair and kept things going in a manner that made all present regret when the proceedings ended.

A very handsome menu card, beautifully embossed and printed set forth the following good cheer:

THE MENU.
Soup.
Cream Tomato.
Fish.
Fried Salmon and Parsley Sauce.
Roasts.
Young Turkey, a la Vermont.
Stuffed Goose and Cranberry Sauce.
Celery. Olives.

MUSICAL PROGRAM.

A splendidly enjoyable musical and vocal program was given. The artists contributing to this part of the entertainment included:

Robert Henry, Scotch Soloist.
P. C. Brown, violin.
P. C. Paterson, vocal solo.
Miss Pentland, violin.
Miss Burgess, vocal solo.
James Brown, vocal solo.
E. Pratt, vocal solo.
E. Dunnett, reading.
Mrs. Evans, pianist.

It did seem good for once to see the "bridge of sighs" or steps leading to the police court for once thronged by happy well dressed ladies and gentlemen instead of victims of the law. The police department is to be congratulated on the success of this, their first banquet.

HAND-TO-HAND FIGHT BY REBELS

Presidio, Texas, Dec. 31. — Practically the entire remnant of the northern division of the Mexican Government army faced extermination today.

If the Federals cross the border into the United States, they will be arrested and disarmed, and if they continue the battle which has been in progress for 48 hours, they are threatened with death by the 4,500 rebels under Toribio Ortega, attacking Ojinaga, across the river from here.

General Ortega, acting under orders from General Villa, to "drive the Federals into the United States and return to Chihuahua with no prisoners" has in two days' battle, fought an aggressive fight, which has terrorized the Federal troops, and which already has sent scores of them in flight across the American border. A desultory fire was continuous through the night, both from Federals and rebels, but the casualties remain unknown.

HAND-TO-HAND FIGHTING.

Conflicting reports arrived in Presidio to-day concerning the numbers of wounded and dead, but always the greatest number of conjectured fatalities were on the side of the Federals whose firing was believed to have been ineffectual against the guerilla tactics of General Ortega and his men.

Resumption of the battle this morning was expected to be the beginning of the end for Ojinaga was tightly surrounded and the fighting must almost be hand-to-hand before the Government troops could be dislodged from their trenches and the fortifications of the town.

TENEMENT FIRE CAUSES A LOSS OF EIGHT LIVES

They Were Suffocated in Room Which Had Fo Fire Escapes Thirty Families are Now Homeless

New York, Dec. 31.—Eight persons five men and three women were killed in an early morning tenement house fire at 96 Monroe street, in the crowded east side district to-day. Fifteen persons were injured, four seriously, by jumping from fire escapes. The police and firemen made many rescues. The fire started in the hall on the ground floor, cutting off escape by the stairway.

An hour before dawn the tenants in the house were aroused by the cries of persons in the street, finding escape by way of the stairway shut off, they crowded on the fire escape platforms. Many jumped, the calmer waited for the firemen to erect ladders. A few made their escape by going to the roofs of adjoining tenement houses.

Cassie [illegible], a girl of 19 years, after assisting her father and mother and five brothers to escape, lost her head and returned to her room, and later was found dead.

To The Electors East Ward

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,—

I am again a candidate for alderman in No. 5 Ward, and respectfully solicit your support on my record in Council.

I have served you for the past three years as alderman, and in that time I have gained a knowledge of city affairs, city finances and the problems now before the Council, which fits me to deal with them in a capable and intelligent manner.

I have given close attention to my duties and have carefully looked after the interests of the East Ward in particular and the city as a whole.

I trust that my services in the past meet with your approval, and if so I ask your hearty support.

Wishing you the compliments of the season.

Yours respectfully,
J. C. ANDERSON

H. R. H. THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT WILL SOON HOLD A BIG LEVEE

His Arm Will No Doubt be Tired After the Handshaking Ordeal

Ottawa, Dec. 31.—His Royal Highness, the Governor-General, will hold his New Year levee in the east block to-morrow. The levee will commence at noon and continue for an hour, during which time the Duke will receive all those who wish to present their New Year wishes to him. It is a trying ordeal for his Royal Highness' right arm, for he shakes with every body and his grip is always firm and cordial. Refreshments will be served in the ante-room during the levee.

His Royal Highness and his staff will review the Boy Scouts prior to the levee. He will be attended on both occasions by his Ministers, including Premier Borden and Hon. Messrs. Rogers, Burrell, Doherty and Reid. Sir Wilfrid Laurier as a member of the Privy Council will also be present.

Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Railways, has left for Sudbury, where he will spend New Year's Day. He is expected back on Friday.

HANGS HIMSELF AFTER JOKING

Tom Grady Lives Fast Life and Pays the Price

New Orleans, Dec. 31.—Tom Grady got a flying start at life; he lived fast and ended it all on Christmas day.

If the stinging assaults of remorse upon a melancholy mind; if being self-accused and impeached in the high court of conscience of the indiscretion of a wasted youth; if being without work, without money, without health; if a man can fight the battle to a successful issue against the conspiracy of these things—then it would have been a Merry Christmas for Tom Grady.

If youth, when the pulse beats quickly, and years are in their morning; if the knowledge that one has a home and friends and kin who are willing to forgive and forget and nurse the [illegible] body back to health; if the knowledge that one is loved and remembered despite faults which are trivial and thoughtless at worst—if these things can always outweigh the depressed spirit, then, too, it would have been a Merry Christmas for Tom Grady.

HANGS HIMSELF WITH WIRE.

But Tom Grady, 21 years old, is dead at the home of his sister, Mrs. Katie Hanedy, at 1923 Poydras st.,

He hanged himself with a wire in the washhouse in the rear of the [illegible] Thursday night. He thought he had played the game and lost and was willing to pay the price.

Everyone who knew Tom Grady liked him. When [illegible] settled [illegible] upon his spirit, he covered his [illegible] with a smiling face.

Only once did the role become too much for the actor.

Strolling near the first precinct police station his melancholia became more than he could bear.

Patrolman Joseph Corcoran was near. He thought he saw Grady stagger.

"What's the matter, Tom, are you sick?" the officer inquired.

IS LOCKED UP.

"Yes, I am, Joe; lock me up for a while," he replied.

The patrolman took his friend to the station. He was detained on his own request, but when he recovered his composure he was released.

He took no more chances. He walked straight home went into the washhouse, uncoiled the wire rope, placed the noose around his neck, climbed on a box, secured the rope to the ceiling and sprung his own death trap. Mrs. Hanedy found him there early Friday morning.

A TRICK IN FENCING

One Highly Distressing to an Accomplished Swordsman.

TURNS A DUEL INTO A FARCE.

Used by a Weak or a Timid Opponent It Renders His Adversary Practically Helpless—A Case of Two Playing at the Same Game.

A long and interesting chapter might be written on the humors of duels which never came off or which in some way fell short of deserving the name. A case which occurred a few years ago in Paris, the particular home and harvest field of the habitual duelist, merits mention.

A peaceable looking gentleman was walking down one of the boulevards with a lady on his arm when out of a cafe sprang a man, who dealt him a violent kick. The victim turned, only to meet the servile apologies of the aggressor, who begged to assure him that it was wholly a mistake in identity. Instead of insisting upon an exchange of cards and the other customary forms, the kicked man answered with much warmth, but admirable self control: "I cannot, sir, accept your expression of regret as sufficient. Your action may have been a mistake, as you say, but acquaintances of mine may have witnessed it and will go away and spread the news that I have submitted to an insult without avenging it. I must therefore and instantly slap your face with equal publicity." The other most [illegible] consented, the first sufferer administering a ringing blow on his ear, and the affair ended with entire satisfaction on both sides.

Weak or timid fencers are sometimes taught by their masters to keep a more skillful antagonist busy by fixing the sword in one position, aimed straight at his sword hand, and then not moving except to retreat when pressed too hard. It is highly distressing to an accomplished swordsman to have to face a learner so instructed, for it means a great outlay of energy and wind to little purpose.

Comte de Dion once thus chased a retreating adversary across plowed fields for a mile and a half and finally under the wheel of a cab for the poor satisfaction of giving him a slight prod in the back. Dr. Clemenceau in his famous duel with M. Deschanel, after a swift and wearisome pursuit, halted, shouldered his rapier like a walking stick and strolled back to his original place, throwing the contemptuous remark over his shoulder, "And now, monsieur, I will await you here."

Catulle Mendes had a similar run after Lugne Poe through the forest of St. Germain, which he ended by flinging his own sword into the bushes, with the angry exclamation, "I am willing to die from exhaustion by the roadside, if need be, but not from running after a poltroon."

A yet funnier incident was that which occurred in Toulouse, where a lawyer of some note named [illegible] was called out by a landed proprietor whom he had offended by a speech in court. He repaired at once to a fencing master, as he knew nothing whatever about handling a sword. This teacher gave him the above advice about keeping his adversary at arm's length with the pointed and immovable rapier, but strongly enjoined him not to retreat. It so happened that the landed proprietor, being equally ignorant, applied to the same master for instruction. The master, who was somewhat of a wag, gave him the lawyer's lesson in duplicate.

When the two men met and their seconds had duly placed them a long and tedious stillness ensued. For more than five minutes each fencer stood with his sword arm extended at full length, waiting for the other to advance. Then the seconds intervened, claiming that both had proved themselves men of honor and courage and that nothing further was necessary but to shake hands and be reconciled.

And this recalls the occasion when Lieutenant Randolph Ridgely of our army while in the Mexican war was sought by two young officers who had quarreled and each of whom wished the lieutenant for his second. It was finally arranged that he should act as second for both. On the field, where the adversaries were armed with shotguns, Ridgely measured off a line of ten paces and placed them respectively at its two terminal, cocked his own revolver and announced that he would give all the orders himself and in his own way and that he would shoot down whichever of his principals disobeyed him in the slightest particular.

Then came the orders, very deliberately uttered: "Present arms!" "Carry arms!" "Shoulder arms!" "Take aim!" They took careful aim and waited almost breathlessly for some minutes for the command to fire. It never came. Instead came the orders: "Present arms!" "Carry arms!" "Shoulder arms!" "Right about face!" "Front!" "Forward march!"

They recognized his [illegible] as given in [illegible] it would be [illegible] [illegible] marched [illegible] [illegible] them and [illegible] [illegible] till they had [illegible] on the folly of [illegible] made their [illegible] [illegible] words of praise for the [illegible] they had shown in [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

THE NEW YEAR

Here's wishing our readers and the public in general a very Happy New Year. This city, one of the most progressive in Canada to-day has a great future. It might not be stretching the perogatives of a prophet too hard to foretell that Peterborough, within a few years, will have a population of five times our present number. We have the power, we have the railway facilities, we have the Trent Canal, with its unforseen possibilities, we have a righ agricultural surrounding and we have the class of men here who can, and probably will, hew a rich and important city out of our present comparatively indifferent surroundings.

Have faith in Peterborough's future, is our advice.

Again we wish the Canadian world at large a Happy and Prosperous New Year!

Our Point of View

Owing to the high price the average citizen can no longer afford to decorate his chin with the yolk of a soft-boiled egg.

—o—

It will be a happy New Year for the Hon. Bill Taft. He has lost enough flesh during the year to enable him to look down and see his feet.

—o—

It is about time for chronic kickers to realize that Peterborough's income tax is a mere trifle compared to that imposed by old Santa Claus.

—o—

It is pathetic at this holiday season to see poor little children standing before the shop windows looking with wistful eyes at the toys they would like to have but will never get.

—o—

A statistician informed The Times that were it not for cold storage, eggs would be selling for a dollar a dozen. We shudder to think what the price would be if it were not for the hens.

—o—

The British government has issued an official proclamation forbidding the importation of arms into Ireland. A foolish procedure, of course. When an Irishman wants to arm himself he cuts a blackthorn stick and then hunts for a head to hit.

—o—

It is said that President Wil-

Bright, Ruddy Cheeks For Pale Girls

NO LONGER ANY NEED TO BE PALE, WEAK AND ANAEMIC.

By Following the Advice of Miss McEwen You Can Quickly Become Strong Again.

The pallid girl always lacks appetite. What little she eats is badly digested.

At night she is restless, she dozes, but doesn't sleep soundly.

Vital force must be increased, new blood must be supplied and a general rebuilding take place before she will feel like she ought.

Dr. Hamilton has invaluable experience in these cases and found nothing so prompt in building up young women as his vegetable pills of Mandrake and Butternut.

Dr. Hamilton's Pills begin by cleansing the system and purifying the blood; they also improve indigestion and render food ready for absorption. Additional nourishment is quickly supplied and the patient is fast strengthened and invigorated.

Full of spirit, ruddy and strong is the girl that assists her system by the use of Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

The following recent letter from Miss Etta McEwen, of Kingston, speaks for itself:

"In using Dr. Hamilton's Pills I find my system is wonderfully built up. It is certainly the most effective remedy I ever used. I have now a good appetite, sleep more soundly, and awaken in the morning feeling quite refreshed.

"Formerly I felt tired and depressed. I looked as if a severe illness were hanging over my head.

"Nothing could give quicker results than Dr. Hamilton's Pills and I strongly advise every young woman to use them."

All dealers sell Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c per box or five boxes for $1.00, by mail from The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Ont.

son had no trouble in finding a young lady's back comb when she was thrown from her horse in a Washington park. Being the father of several daughters he probably has had a good deal of experience in chasing up those things at home.

TRADE POTENTIALITIES

It was an interesting message that J. Joyce Broderick, British vice-consul at New York brought to Canadians through his addresses before public bodies in Eastern Canada. With the full approval of his superiors in the consular department Mr. Broderick tendered to Canada the fullest aid of the foreign service in extending Canadian trade.

At the present time Canadian manufacturers are chiefly employed in meeting home demands, but as internal development continues it will be necessary to extend the cope of our market. In such extensions the services of the British consular agents throughout the world should prove of the utmost value, and will very probably be utilized by exporters.

Mr. Broderick's encouragement to Canada was of the most cordial character. He did not just state that the service is not only ready but anxious to assist Canada to the fullest extent in gaining a foothold in foreign markets.

The announcement is just another manifestation of the strength and value of the imperial bond.

Before Noah Built the Ark

He spent years telling the people of impending doom, but they would not listen; surely one example should be enough. We warn you again that if you have backache in the region of your kidneys, puffy swelling under the eyes, feel tired out, dizzy, swollen feet and ankles, darting pains in your body and limbs, excessive and painful urination, you surely have kidney or bladder trouble. Sanol warns you again—take heed and try wise—Sanol will surely cure you. Sold by all druggists—Manufactured by the Sanol Mfg. Co., Ltd., Winnipeg.

PUPLIC OPINION

The Times does not hold itself responsible for the opinions of its correspondents.

THE COST ENORMOUS.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—In view of the fact that under the Chairmanship of Alderman Johnston the City's bill for lighting its down town section has been increased from $450 a year to in the neighborhood of $8600 a year, is it not about time that the ratepayers should exercise more care in the choice of their representatives in the City Council? If the balance of the City of Peterborough were lit up one tenth as well as the business section of George St. then on the same basis the total lighting bill of Peterborough would be no less than about $42,500 as against the present lighting bill of $8250. There is no rate payer in the North ward who cannot justly complain of the fact that it is very poorly lighted and some of the streets are practically not lit at all and still Alderman Johnston, the representative of No. 4 Ward has seen fit to have the ratepayers taxed, to brilliantly light the down town section of No. 2 Ward. There are two candidates before the electors of the North Ward, namely, Alderman Johnston and Dr. Holloway. Those who know Dr. Holloway during this last seven years that he has been in Peterborough have justly sized him up as a careful and successful business man and possesses every qualification to properly represent the north ward in the City Council.

Yours, etc.,
G. B. Beecher.

IS THIS FAIR TO MR HARTLEY?

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—There has come into my hands an extraordinary communication from the City Temperance League, signed by H. B. Cowan, President, and A. B. Cunningham, Secretary. It is of the late date of Dec. 29th, and looks like a last-minute speech in feet and favor for Alderman Gillespie. It states amongst other things these words: "Mr. Hartley is a good man and is a temperance worker but he has not had the opportunity to assist us that Mr. Gillespie had had. * * * * " Then follows the following objection: "Under the circumstances your Committee has come to the unanimous conclusion that the candidate most entitled to receive the temperance vote is Alderman G. A. Gillespie."

I would like to ask why Mr. Hartley if he, as a good man and a temperance League? Is it not politics this underhand manner by the Temperance League? Is it not politics, Mr. Editor? Some people are training Mr. Gillespie for the future, and they do not hesitate to sacrifice Mr. Hartley when they admit that Mr. Hartley is in every way an acceptable man. Is this fair play, Mr. Editor? I say it is not.

Yours,
Citizen.

FREE TRADE AND PROTECTION

Letter Presenting Arguments in Favor of the Former.

Editor Morning Times.

Dear Sir,—I have been interested as I am sure, many of your readers, in the letters which have appeared from time to time from the pen of Mr. J. H. Burnham, on Free Trade and kindred subjects. One thing in them which pleases me much is the evidence which they show of independent thinking along progressive lines, and of an earnest attempt to understand present economic conditions. It is refreshing to find a party politician so absolutely independent in thought and so anxious to identify himself with the great movements of to-day that make for the redemption of the people from the economic wrongs of our civilization. I hope he will not be deterred from continuing his good work by the threats of those narrow bigots and politicians who set party above everything else, and would consign to political oblivion any man who did his own thinking and who refused to respond to the every crack of the political whip.

Having said this, I cannot help saying that I believe he is altogether wrong in what he has said on the subject of Free Trade. I have not his previous letters by me, but I take one statement out of his letter of Monday morning in illustration of what I say. That statement is where he tells us that Free Trade has driven the farmer in Britain off the land. It is true the farmer has been driven off the land; but was it Free Trade that did it? No one is free to make any such statement. The statement implies that farming is not profitable in Free Trade England. But this is not so. I am in close touch with farming conditions in the North of Ireland. The Irish farmer finds the same market for his produce as the English farmer. Both are under Free Trade. Now, what are the facts as to the condition of the Irish farmers? I could tell you of farmers in the North of Ireland who are MORE PROSPEROUS ON 25-ACRE RENTED FARMS THAN ARE THE MAJORITY OF CANADIAN FARMERS ON [illegible] ACRE FARMS OF FREE LAND UNDER PROTECTION. [illegible] principle of Protection? It is the principle that a man's chief concern in life is to look out for himself, to love himself first and his neighbour—well, he can go to Halifax. It is the principle that a man and a country must first, last and always look out for No. 1; that neither the one or the other can exchange a commodity on a free basis of love and brotherhood, but only on a basis of self-interest and personal gain; that a few men can forcibly appropriate the produce of the labors of others. Protection is a denial of the principle that the "riches of the world are for the common benefit of men, as created by the common Father of all."

Then there is the further charge to be brought against the principle of Protection. Protection does not equally, and, according to man's ability to bear it, distribute the burden of taxation. The burden of Protection falls nearly altogether on the poor man. Here is an illustration: Thirty years ago a statistician, himself well-to-do, showed that out of every dollar of possible savings the laborer was paying through a protective tariff 83 cents in taxes, the average rich man 30 cents and the richest 3 cents. It is such facts as these brought to light by a little careful thinking, that condemns, in the eyes of every man who believes in justice, in the law of Christ, in human brotherhood, the whole principle of Protection and makes him an ardent Free Trader.

Free Trade.

Peterborough, Dec. 31st, 1913.

MR. HICKS' DENIAL.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—You reported Mr. J. B. McWilliams to have said at the nomination that I was brought out by the power interests in the city.

Kindly give this statement a denial, as Mr. McWilliams made no such statement, and such a statement if made by any person or newspaper, would be absolute untrue. My support of Hydro-Electric is well known in the city.

TWO MEN.

Bill Brown is dead! Upstairs in grief
His widow weeps, while down below
The neighbors now in charge of things
Are softly moving to and fro.
And now and then some man to speak
Their word of sympathy and cheer,
To sound the praises of poor Brown
And place their roses on his bier.

Across the street Tom Green plods on,
Alone, unaided in his fight.
To keep his wife and children clothed
He has to hustle day and night.
A word of praise would do him good.
He's hungry for a bit of cheer,
But all his neighbors take their flowers
To decorate a dead man's bier.

Brown doesn't know what's going on,
But poor Tom Green across the way
Turns to his wife and sadly says:
"I'll have a lot of friends some day.
Some day you'll hear my praises sung,
And men will bring me roses red,
They'll all rush up to boost poor me
The minute that they hear I'm dead."

[illegible]

TO THE ELECTORS OF PETERBOROUGH:

Ladies and Gentlemen:—

Last year a large number of ratepayers requested me to be a candidate for Water Commissioner in opposition to Mr. Moore. I not only declined to be a candidate but did what I could to prevent opposition. The Commissioners at that time had law suits on with the contractors where about thirty thousand dollars of the people's money was at stake. Mr. Moore being a lawyer I considered he should be the best posted man on the Commission to fight the contractors and in the interest of the City it would be a mistake to remove him.

This year I have again been waited upon by a large representation of the ratepayers who believe that with my thorough knowledge of all the waters in this district and my many years experience as alderman I should be a capable man for the position. I have consented to be a candidate and my past record in the Council I think is proof that if elected will give you faithful and honest service.

The taking over of the Hydro-Electric system will require a great deal of time—more than any man who has a large business to attend to can spare. Not being in business I can give all the time required, and if necessary will make a personal inspection of every house in the city and see that rich and poor are treated alike.

I can see no reason, with the large body of ready made reservoirs of the Otonabee River there should be any shortage of water for either household or lawn service, or why there should not be a reduction in the water rates. A good supply of good water is a necessity in every house and should be available for the people at a low rate.

To the ratepayers who are now residents of the City and not personally acquainted with me, would say that for a number of years I occupied the position of alderman, and always stood at the head of the poll both as a representative of No. 3 Ward and also after the Ward system was abolished.

General street railway extension and cheap transportation, like cheap light and water, should be the goal of our municipal government. When a working man can have his house and garden anywhere, and is not tied to locality his prospects are greatly improved.

Trusting that the ratepayers who want good service in the future as have given the past will give me their hearty support.

I am, yours very truly,

J. B. McWILLIAMS

To The Electors of The North Ward

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,—

In making an appeal to you for your support in the coming municipal elections, I fully realize the handicap I am under in being a stranger to quite a number of you, even though I have been practising my profession here for seven years. My policy briefly is this:

An honest endeavor to show a dollar's value for every dollar expended, and the most economical and efficient government of the city's affairs. To attain this I have acceded to the wishes of a large number of the ratepayers [illegible]

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

I desire to heartily wish you and all the citizens of Greater Peterborough all the compliments of the season.

As a representative in the City Council; elected by the good people of the North Ward, I have had the honour of representing the people generally in carrying out their wishes for the introduction of the Hydro-Electric system into Peterborough, and I respectfully ask you for a further renewal of the confidence by again re-electing me to that very responsible position.

I stand for a principle that I believe to be in the interests of the masses of the people.

Notwithstanding the opposition offered to the honest work of your Council of 1913 I will continue to help to carry out that work until light and power are in the hands of the municipality and being run in the interests of the people, and not in the interests of a monopoly.

Business Management of City's Business to the ELECTORS OF CENTRE WARD

In voting for A. H. STRATTON for Alderman for Centre Ward you are voting for a live-headed man who has the interests of Peterborough at heart. He is a large taxpayer and will use his best efforts to keep your taxes down to the lowest mark. At the same time he is sure to encourage existing manufactures and endeavor to bring in a new industry. In regard to the important matter of Hydro Electric, while he favours it he is especially in favour of business-like management of the enterprise, of seeing that the people, who voted so almost unanimously for it, get the greatest benefit from it at the least possible cost consistent with efficiency. He is a good business man by the test of success in his own business and knows that to encourage the working man and find employment for them at good wages, helps the business men and thereby help to make a BIGGER AND BETTER CITY. Confident Appeal to the Electors

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

Most of you are already familiar with my brief election address, and my further public statements made on nomination day, and if any additional explanations of my views are desired on any of the live questions affecting the interests of the City, I will be glad to give them to anyone between now and polling day. But as I will not be able, personally, to wait upon the whole electorate before the day of voting, I desire to use this medium of soliciting your support.

The very encouraging indications of your support, coming so generally from all classes, has served to strengthen my confidence in the result.

With a clear comprehension of the work that lies before the coming Mayor of your city, begotten of close attention to the City's affairs during the past five years as your Alderman and a conscientious desire to contribute a further share of service, I now leave the campaign confidently in your hands.

Wishing one and all a Happy and Prosperous New Year,

STARTLING STATEMENT REGARDING THE CITY'S FINANCIAL POSITION

Covering a Period of Six Years, in Which it is Contended That Annual Tax Bill Has Increased Out of All Proportion to the Increase in Population

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I have taken the trouble to go into the financial position of the city as thoroughly as it is possible to do, and give the following facts from the printed auditor's reports of the city, which I wish you would be good enough to have appear in your paper.

City's Debts and Liabilities.

Debenture debt on December 31, 1912	$1,562,969.34
Debentures issued during 1913	75,971.42
In addition to this money borrowed and spent during 1913	75,000.00
Liability incurred in expropriating Peterborough Light and Power Co.	600,000.00

Total debts incurred and liabilities contracted to date $2,314,940.76

To this must be added liabilities pressingly in sight, such as sewage disposal system insisted upon by the Provincial Board of Health, which will probably cost $110,000.00; new bridge across river at Dalhousie Street now before the people for their approval, $70,000.00; additional fire equipment now before the ratepayers for approval, $10,000.00; street paving completion and new lighting system for the whole city; new elevated bridge across Hunter Street, etc.

It is quite apparent that another half million dollars will be added to the city's indebtedness in a very short time.

Past Rate of Increase in Debt.

The city's debts and liabilities at the close of 1912	$2,314,940.76
The city's debt at the beginning of year 1908	916,787.51
Increase in debts and liabilities in six years	$1,398,153.25
Average annual increase in city's debts during this last six years	233,025.54

The city's debts and liabilities have increased two and a quarter times more than they were six years ago.

During same period the population of Peterboro increased from 16,000 to 20,150, thereby showing increase in population during last six years of 4,150; that is to say during last six years our population has increased 25 per cent., and at the same time the city's debts and liabilities have increased 225 per cent., or to put it in another way, the increase in our population of 4,150 during this last six years has meant an increase in the city's debts and liabilities during this same period of $1,398,153.25

City's Assessment.

The assessment for the year 1913 is	$11,887,194.00
The city's assessment for the year 1907 was	7,627,231.00
Showing an increase in the assessment of	$4,259,963.00

during six years; that is to say, the city's assessment has increased 60 per cent. during this last six years, while the population has increased 25 per cent.

Ratepayers' Annual Tax Bill.

The city's taxes for the year 1912 amounts to	$251,278.25
The taxes for the year 1907 were	112,192.92
Showing an increased tax bill during this last six years of	$139,185.33

That is to say, during this last six years the ratepayers' annual tax bill has increased 123 per cent., while the city's population during the same period has only increased 25 per cent.

City's Annual Interest Bill.

The city's annual interest bill for the year 1912 (underestimated)	$[illegible],946.00
The interest bill for the year 1907 was	[illegible],792.86
Increase in amount of interest to be paid by the ratepayers in the last six years	$28,153.14

That is to say, the annual interest charges now paid by the city are 137 per cent. greater than they were six years ago, while during the same period the city's population has only increased 25 per cent.

Rate of Interest Paid.

The city has $000,000.00 borrowed at as low a rate as 3 per cent., 3½ per cent., and 3¾ per cent., but as these old loans are being paid off, the city has to replace them with other bonds bearing interest at the rate of 5 per cent. In some cases the city's bonds are disposed of at a discount which makes the rate still higher. Even if the indebtedness of Peterborough stood still there will be an annual increase in the rate of interest. If the city is compelled by the Peterborough Light and Power Company to carry out the purchase of its property in Peterborough in accordance with the city's agreement and taking expropriation proceedings, then the city would be forced to borrow an additional $700,000.00 to pay for the lighting plant and other outstanding obligations. The city's credit decreases in inverse ratio to its increasing debts and like all other debtors who are going behind, the rate of interest the city has to pay increases with its increasing debts.

Extravagance.

It is idle to say that the present members of the City Council for the past six years have not been extravagant. Their record of increasing the city's debts and liabilities 225 per cent. during this last six years and in increasing the ratepayers' taxes 123 per cent. during this last six years, and in increasing the city's annual interest charges 137 per cent. during this last six years, while our population has only increased 25 per cent., is in itself the strongest condemnation that could be urged against the present City Council and those for five years previous. It is usually difficult to give instances of extravagance because they are covered up and concealed by a compact family of Councillors that mutually admire each other and hermetically seal to the city vaults the evidence of their [illegible] and general extravagance.

An Instance of Extravagance.

The statement has been made publicly, and not contradicted, that the present down town part of the city has been lit for this last ten years at an average cost of $400.00 per annum by nine lamps placed on nine poles. The present Council have replaced those poles and substituted in their place 100 lights, which cost this city $4,500.00 a year to maintain. This statement has been made publicly and has never been contradicted by any member of the Council. If, therefore, one mile of our down town section costs $4,500.00 a year to light, then what will it cost to light the remaining 65 miles of the city's streets if the ratepayers of Peterborough leave it in the hands of the present Council, who do not know the value of other people's money. Either one of two things will happen—the cost of street light will be excessively high and the annual rate of taxation will increase or else the cost of domestic lighting will have to be increased to pay for the extravagance in street lighting.

Ratepayers, Examine Your Tax Bills.

If any ratepayer desires to verify any of these figures regarding his increased taxation, let him look at the amount of his tax bill for the year 1907, and compare it with his tax bill for the year 1913, and let him ask the question, "WHAT BENEFIT AM I GETTING FOR THIS INCREASE IN MY TAXATION THAT I DID NOT GET IN THE YEAR 1907?"

Is it not about time that the ratepayers of Peterborough in their own interests ought to have new men placed in the Council who are pledged to economize and adopt business methods in our expenditures?—Yours,

A [illegible] TAXPAYER.

DAILY SHORT STORY

The Affair of the Count.

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Copyrighted, 1913, by Associated Literary Press.

"Of course I do not wish to marry the count," said Miss Bernard petulantly. "If Aunt Dorinda gave you to understand"— She paused significantly.

"She did give me to understand that the affair was settled," muttered Emery, his gloomy eyes fixed on the flashing sails in the harbor. "In fact, she intimated that Americans cut no ice in the matter."

"Poor auntie loves a title," sighed Jean, ruffling her pretty hair distractedly. "Why couldn't she marry the count herself?"

Emery got upon his feet with sudden alacrity. There was fire in his red brown eyes and determination in the lines of his strong jaw.

"If Miss Leigh marries the count, will you marry me, Jean?" he asked delightedly.

Miss Bernard stared; then she laughed merrily.

"Why not? With auntie's craving for a titled position satisfied, I believe I might— Don't—not yet!" She warded off Emery's impulsive movement and sought refuge behind a high backed chair. "And now be off about your business, Mr. Marriage Broker!"

"WHY—WHY," STAMMERED MISS LEIGH CONFUSEDLY—"WHY NOT?"

She smiled derisively at him. Emery picked up his hat and ran down the steps.

"What are your engagements for this evening, Jean?" he asked calmly.

"The dance at the Bicknells', of course!"

"And Miss Leigh—and the count?"

"They dine with Mrs. Fyske and come to the dance afterward."

"I will see you at Bicknells', Jean. Come early, dear," he said tenderly.

"Run away, you bold, bad, mere American!" retorted Miss Bernard saucily; then she watched him as he strode down the path and on to the shore road, a warm light in her gray eyes. "I wonder whether auntie married the count or not," she murmured mysteriously.

• • • • • • •

"Eet ees ze beautifulness of ze evening zat appeals to my lovaire soul," gurgled Count Leon Despagne as he joined Miss Dorinda Leigh on the veranda of the Fyske mansion.

Miss Leigh adjusted a lorgnette to her high bridged nose and peered up at the star jeweled sky and then over the moonlit bay, with its hundred anchor lights vaguely indicating the whereabouts of pleasure craft.

"It is very pleasant," she replied practically, "but of course it cannot compare with your own country! The romance, the beauty, the stateliness of the old chateaux"— She sighed luxuriously.

"Ah, eet ees glorious, ze vale de Loire, ze magnificent Chateau Despagne. Ah, mademoiselle, what ees all of eet without your beautiful niece? You haf been so kind, so gracious, you are quite—sure?" His voice quavered doubtfully.

"There is no doubt about it, count," returned Miss Leigh in a tone of decision. "Of course Miss Bernard is quite young, but I assure you she is not as thoughtless as she may appear, and I am quite sure that your affection is reciprocated."

The count grasped her thin white hand with an ecstatic cry. At that moment a servant approached them. "A note for Miss Leigh," he said.

Miss Leigh went to the drawing room window and perused the note in the stream of light that sifted through the lace draperies. When she turned her face was quite white and her hands shook tremulously.

"Order my car around, please," she said to the servant, and as he departed she whispered to the count: "This is frightful! I have just received news that my niece has eloped with that villainous young Emery! Will you join me in the pursuit, dear count?"

"Sacre!" muttered the count bitterly as he followed Miss Leigh to the drawing room to make their adieus. Five minutes later they were seated in the tonneau of the huge vehicle and whirling rapidly along the shore road toward the east.

As the miles reeled out from under the tires Miss Leigh gasped many particulars of the flight.

"It was an anonymous letter, from some friend, I suppose. They eloped from the Bicknell dance in his automobile, going toward the east."

"Here are so many cars," whimpered the count, turning up the collar of his light overcoat, "we cannot identify zo vehicle." His pale teeth chattered with fright.

"It is a [illegible]

[illegible] grim that precluded any further conversation.

Watchful and observant, Miss Leigh and her guest sank into silence, and an hour passed as they whirled their way through town and village, eluding vigilant constables with reckless daredeviltry on the part of Francois, who was drunk with a lust of speed. On the outskirts of the city Miss Leigh ordered him to slow down, and presently the machine panted motionless at the roadside while Miss Leigh and the count took counsel together.

At that instant, out of the darkness behind them, there shot a triangular ray of light, and a white car swooped down and stopped beside them.

"Oh, Aunt Dorinda! How could you?" came Jean's reproachful young voice.

"Count, I am sure you can make some explanation!" thundered Emery in stentorian tones.

"How could I what? What do you mean, Jean? Such impertinence on your part, Mr. Emery! Why—I understood—I received a note saying that you and Jean were eloping, and of course—of course—the count and I were pursuing you!"

"It didn't look like it, Miss Leigh," said Emery in a muffled voice. "It would be most ridiculous for Jean and me to elope, for Jean is going to marry me anyway, but as soon as we heard of your el—er—that is, as soon as we heard that the count had kidnaped you"—

"But eet ees a lie! I haf not done zat thing!" vociferated the count's voice out of the darkness. "But eet ees so young mademoiselle zat I lofe! Without her I am—despairing beggar for lofe!"

"You are making a scene, count," remonstrated Miss Leigh coldly. "As for you, Jean, you have broken my heart. I did not know you were so deceitful! When I spoke about the chateau and"—

"Mademoiselle," whispered the count with passionate intensity, "why not console my loneliness—and go wiz me? We will enjoy ze pleasure—ze beauty of Loire"—

"Why—why," stammered Miss Leigh confusedly—"why not?"

CURIOUS BLUNDERS

The Anachronisms That Crowded a Once Famous Poem.

The mediaeval romances are full of blunders, making contemporaries of men who were separated sometimes by hundreds, sometimes by thousands, of years, but as historical criticism had not then a being and the general information of the age was not superior in any particular to that of the novelist their plans do not amount to much from a literary point of view. Such an instance is the case of Ariosto, who might be supposed to know something at least of the truth of history, but whose once famous poem, "Orlando Furioso," is a tissue of historical absurdities from beginning to end.

In this poem Charlemagne and his peers are joined by Edward I. of England, Richard, earl of Warwick; Clarence and the Dukes of York and Gloucester; cannon are employed hundreds of years before the time of Monk Schwartz, and the Moors are represented as established in Spain in spite of the historic fact that 300 years elapsed after the death of Charlemagne before they crossed from Africa. In one place Prester John, who lived 400 years after Charlemagne, and Constantine the Great, who died five centuries before him, are introduced and hold familiar converse with the great Charles, while in another Saladin and Edward the Confessor are joined by the Black Prince.

STIGMA OF RESPECTABILITY.

People Who Continuously Prate About Being Extra Superfine.

Can anything worse be said about any people in these days than that they are respectable? Nothing that we can think of, except to say that they are eminently respectable.

To be respectable implies so much that is utterly undesirable and alien to our ideals that it almost always produces a shudder.

When a man has tried everything else and failed he then becomes respectable.

Respectability is in itself a badge of the commonplace, which, from the standpoint of society, is the unpardonable sin.

To be respectable implies that you may be honest, not necessarily that you are honest, because you may possibly be using your respectability as a cloak. The probability is that you are not doing this, however, as most people would rather be caught dishonest than to have the name of being respectable.

A respectable man is almost always hopeless. He is blind to his own condition.

The chances are that you cannot educate him out of it.

But there is always hope for every human soul.

For example, if, unconsciously, without realizing his danger, he has drifted into being respectable and is thoroughly ashamed of it he may be saved. Helping hands should immediately be extended to him. Life preservers and poker chips and rum bottles should be thrown at him. And the probability is that he will swim ashore.

But if he once admits that he is respectable he is lost.

Jails ought to be used exclusively to harbor respectable people, where they wouldn't be constantly boring us to death.

One reason why so much wickedness is perpetrated is because there are so many respectable people around, hounding others with their presence.—Life.

Redney and the Lady.

By FRANK HOWE.

Copyrighted, 1913, by Associated Literary Press.

Archibald Harris, better known to his one time friends as "Redney," in graceful allusion to his brightly colored thatch of hair, gazed disconsolately into the shop window while the warm, exciting odor of freshly baked bread came through the grating beneath the window.

He was debating whether to buy a loaf of bread and make an evening meal or to save his sole remaining dime for a bed after he should have had a cup of coffee and a thick slice of bread on the "bread line." The bread line did not open until 1 o'clock, and Redney decided in favor of supper immediately. He was used to sleeping in the open, but he was unused to going hungry.

He half turned to go inside the bakery when his attention was attracted to a girl who had joined him before the plate glass. She was not uncomely, in spite of a certain shabbiness, and something seemed to stamp her as one of the homeless. With quick sympathy Redney turned to her.

"You hungry, too, sister?" he demanded.

The girl sprang back at the sound of his voice and made as though to move on, but the "too" was a common bond of sympathy, and she nodded silently.

"Ain't had nothin' since last night," she affirmed. "The landlady threw me out because I owe three weeks' board, and there ain't a chance in town for a job."

"Come on in," he invited, leading the way to the door. The girl stood silent while Redney purchased a loaf of bread and half a dozen cakes, depositing the last dime. Then he led the way to one of the small parks and divided the loaf and the cakes with her.

Both devoured the bread ravenously and neither spoke until the last crumb

"Ridin' range," he answered, with a laugh, "ridin' cows."

"You are a cowboy?" she gasped. "Are a real cowboy?"

Redney nodded his head.

"I guess that's what," he assented.

"You can throw a lasso?" she demanded, her eyes growing bright. Redney nodded again.

"I ['ll] fit you up," she declared. "Got your lasso?"

"I'll show you," declared the girl. "You know amateur nights?"

to do anything that would permit him to enjoy the cheering society of the girl for a couple of hours.

They went over to the lodging house where Redney had stored the valise containing his spare shirt and his rope, all that was left of the outfit he had brought east. The rest had gone to the pawnshop.

"This is the manager of the show that's here this week," Redney explained. "He says he'll give us jobs with the show. You get eighteen in the chorus, and I get thirty-five for doin' my rope act. I'll give you five to help me out. Want to come?"

"Do I?" echoed the girl. "Watcher want t' ask me for? Why didn't yer say 'Yes' before he changed his mind?"

"I'm not going to change my mind," assured the fur coated one, with a laugh. "Come around at 11 tomorrow."

He turned away, leaving the two face to face. Redney looked into the girl's glowing eyes. There lay knowledge of privation and of toil and of the ways of the world, but they met his fearlessly, and Redney was satisfied.

"Thirty-five and eighteen makes fifty-three," he said softly. "Wouldn't you rather share the fifty-three with me, Bess?"

"Sure," was her assent, half laughing, half bashful. "The manager's eighteen and your five makes twenty-three, and that ain't no sort o' luck. Besides," she added, as her face grew tender, "you're a white boy, kiddo, an' yer ain't ever goin' t' be ashamed o' yer wife."

"You bet I ain't," was the fervent assurance. "I knew it was you I wanted out there in front of the bakery. Let's go and get somethin' real to eat, cow meat and coffee and sweet truck."

"Just as you say," Bess assented meekly. "It's up to you now." And she followed him toward the stairs up which they had climbed an hour before with such different feelings.

Holiday Announcement

We take pleasure in once more presenting to you our Annual Announcement in connection with the Holiday Trade, and would respectfully call your attention to the fact that we have secured from the leading markets of the world an up-to-date stock of holiday goods, suitable for Christmas and New Year presents, which we are selling at a bargain. This year we are better prepared than ever to cater to the wants of the public.

In both quality and prices, we defy competition. Our expenses are comparatively insignificant as compared with the other larger stores in the city, and the fact that we have not got to look to the profits from our bookstore trade to carry us through, but have a large printing and book manufacturing business as well, in addition to our rapidly expanding newspaper business.

We have made expensive preparations for the Holiday Trade, and invite the public to call and inspect our stock and get our prices before purchasing elsewhere.

Calendars, Handy Booklets, Christmas and Text Cards

We have in Calendars, Booklets, Christmas and Text Cards a stock of the latest designs, and a very large assortment to choose from. Special discounts to parties taking a number.

Fancy Goods

In Fancy Goods, as in every other line, our stock is up-to-date. We can supply you with presents for young and old, rich and poor, wives, husbands and sweethearts. We only give a mere hint here of the articles with which our shelves are laden:—Brush and Comb Sets, Manicure Sets, Writing Desks, Collar and Cuff Boxes, Glove and Handkerchief Boxes, Ladies' and Gentlemen's Travelling Companions, Jewel Cases, Photo Boxes, Albums, etc., etc. These goods are all new, and made in designs and of material not shown before.

Books for All

We ask an inspection of our stock and prices. We aim to give our customers the best possible value for the money. Dainty Gift Books, Padded Poems, and an endless variety of Cloth and Leather Bound Works. Also Bibles, Hymnals, Children's Illustrated Books, etc.

Games for Young and Old

Our stock in Games is very complete, including Fishpond, Flips, Game of India, Halma, The Century Ride, Lost Heir, Authors, Checkers, Dominoes, Nations, Lotto and all the popular 10 cent games.

New Souvenir Novelties and Small Wares

The following are but a few of the many very desirable articles suitable for Yuletide remembrances: Purses, Card Cases, Burnt Leather Blotters, Pen Wipers and Book Markers; Tea, Crumb, Pin and Ash Trays, Ink Wells, Bon-bon Dishes, Japanese Cups and Saucers, Bread and Butter Plates, Rose Bowls, Vases, Biscuit Jars, all kinds of bric-a-brac, etc.

For Dolls We Lead—Others Follow

We propose to lead this season in the Doll Trade, and are showing Dolls at prices that defy competition. Handsome Kid Dolls, Dressed Dolls in all sizes, Bisque and Composition Dolls, Wax and China Dolls, Rubber Dolls and Dolls that may be used for Fancy Pin Holders. Dolls from 10c up.

Please Remember

1.—That The Times Bookstore has everything marked close to cost.
2.—We can sell cheaper than any other house. The reason we can afford to do so is, because our expenses are practically nil compared with other concerns.
3.—We are large manufacturers of stationery supplies and books, employing about 50 persons, so that in these lines we have goods at first cost.
4.—We sell to the wholesale trade, who again sell to the bookstores and stationers throughout the country, so that by purchasing direct from us you save, in many cases, the profits of two "middle men."
5.—The Times Bookstore is confident that it can give you satisfaction, and would urge an early inspection of our stock before the rush begins. You only have to select what you want and have the goods put aside for delivery when required.

Soliciting the favor of your esteemed patronage, and wishing you the compliments of the season, we remain,

Very respectfully yours,

Fossils and Gold.

In Alaska the bones and often the entire bodies of extinct animals, such as the mammoth, the mastodon, the reindeer and the bison, are found most abundantly in layers of soil directly above gold bearing gravels. So intimate is this association between fossil animal remains and auriferous deposits that one scientist who has explored Alaska says fossils serve prospectors as indexes of the metallic richness of the soil. In ancient times both gold and the bones of animals were deposited at the bottom of valleys by action of rivers and smaller streams, many of which have now disappeared; consequently the appearance of fossils is, it is claimed, an almost certain indication that gold will be found in the neighborhood. The cabins of many miners are ornamented with huge tusks and antlers unearthed in the diggings.—New York Tribune.

Definite Instructions.

Telegraphers have their troubles, like the rest of mankind, and the men who follow the dots and dashes tell stirring tales based upon actual happenings that almost test the credulity of the hearer. A man now in charge of a Postal office is responsible for the following, which occurred to him when he was holding down a key in an obscure place in the suburbs:

"A farmer came in one day and handed me a message to 'Mrs. Smith, New York city.' I asked for the address, and my patron, looking at me with a pitying smile, replied:

"'Sonny, you just send it to Mrs. Smith, who keeps a boarding house in New York. Don't let any one know you don't know where her place is.'"—Philadelphia Times.

Followed Instructions.

She was a woman of very particular notions, and when she came into his room to kiss her little boy good night and found that he had not said his prayers she was very much shocked. "How was it, Willie," she asked, "that you neglected such an important duty?"

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for Addition to Refinery, Royal Mint, Ottawa, Ont.," will be received at this office until 4.00 P.M., on Wednesday, January 14, 1914, for the above mentioned addition.

Plans, specification and form of contract can be seen and forms of tender obtained at this Department.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made on the printed forms supplied, and signed with their actual signatures, stating their occupations and places of residence. In the case of firms, the actual signature, the nature of the occupation, and place of residence of each member of the firm must be given.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank, payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of Public Works, equal to ten per cent. (10 p.c.) of the amount of the tender, which will be forfeited if the person tendering decline to enter into a contract when called upon to do so, or fail to complete the work contracted for. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By order,
R. C. DESROCHERS,
Secretary.
Department of Public Works,
Ottawa, December 24, 1913.

Newspapers will not be paid for this advertisement if they insert it without authority from the Department.—[illegible]

TENDERS.

TENDERS addressed to the undersigned at Ottawa, and endorsed on the envelope "Tender for Old Buildings at Oshawa," will be received up to noon of the TWELFTH DAY of JANUARY, 1914 for the purchase of the TWO buildings contiguous to the breakwater in Oshawa Harbour, namely, the elevator standing at the shore end of the breakwater, and the remnant of the coal shed standing directly behind the elevator in a line northward from the elevator. These buildings are offered for sale on the following conditions:

The purchaser is to take down the buildings and remove the material and fittings from the Government Reserve within a reasonable time after the offer is accepted. The time required for removal to be specified by the tenderers and accepted by the Department. The material and fittings to become the property of the successful tender when removed from the Government Reserve.

The buildings are to be taken down by the Contractors at their own risk and expense, and the Department is not to be held liable for any accidents that may occur in connection with the removal of the buildings or material.

The ground occupied by each building is to be levelled off and left in good condition by the Contractor.

A separate price is to be made for each building and the Department reserves the right to accept the whole or any part of a tender. The Department further reserves the right to refuse the highest or any tender.

The purchase price to be paid in cash as soon as the successful tenderer is notified of the acceptance of his offer.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered Canadian Bank equal to 10 p.c. of the whole amount of the offer. [illegible]

A Fair Sized Trout.

The gentleman was strolling across a large estate when he came upon a man fishing. "What sort of fish do you catch here?" he said.

"Mostly trout," replied the man.

"How many have you caught?"

"About ten or twelve, sir."

"What is about the heaviest you have caught?" continued the gentleman.

"Well, I don't know the weight, but the water sunk two or three feet when I pulled it out!"

Dividing the Waters.

Situated exactly at the highest point of the divide of the Rocky mountains, on the Crow's Nest division of the Canadian Pacific railway, in British Columbia, is a hotel. When it rains in the mountains the water which falls on the eastern slope of the hotel roof trickles away to join a tiny rivulet, which in due time mingles its waters with the Atlantic. The water falling just beyond the ridgepole, on the other side of the roof, flows westerly and ultimately into the Pacific.

Lots of Them.

"What is that?"

"When money talks does it always talk cents?"—Baltimore American.

His Argument.

"Dear, I only play poker for fun."

"But you bet, don't you?"

"Well, there wouldn't be any fun without a little betting."—Pittsburg Post.

CENTER OF POPULATION.

The Spot is in Washington Township, Brown County, Ind.

An uneven field of rocks and scraggly trees partly covered with snow, a deserted water power mill beside a frozen creek, a quarter of a mile away a farmhouse of hewn logs, not a sign of life except a thin trail of smoke issuing from the chimney of the log cabin—a desolate scene, made more so by lowering clouds and a bitter north wind which whistled through the trees—such is the picture of the center of population of the United States, in Washington township, Brown county, Ind. A two hour drive due west from Columbus, Ind., on the county pike brought the writer to the spot. It was easy to find, for it was scarcely a stone's throw from where the road crosses a little creek at the county line.

Brown county is the wildest and least known part of the Hoosier State. Until three years ago no railroad crossed its borders, and even now the Indiana Southern cuts off only one small corner of this barren tract. Yet here is the center of population of the United States.

The center of population in 1900 was in Bartholomew county, about five miles southeast of Columbus, Ind. The great increases in population of some of the southwestern states as shown by the census of 1910 caused the center to move westward about twenty miles, bringing it just over the line into Brown county, which adjoins Bartholomew county on the west. The census department has located the center as close as a forty acre plat, and in course of time the exact point will be determined by astronomical experts, who will visit the tract and take observations, and in all probability it will be marked with a stone monument, such as marks the spot where the center of population was in 1900.—Karl K. Kitchen in New York World.

INSANITY IN THE NAVY.

Recruiting Methods Blamed For the Large Number of Cases.

A thorough study of [illegible] insane at the government hospital for the insane in Washington, says the [illegible], prompts Passed Assistant Surgeon Butts to comment vigorously on the methods of accepting recruits.

It is found that nearly one-quarter of the insanity in the navy and marine corps is furnished by privates in the latter service. This is held to be caused by the scant examination given by civilian physicians hired at marine recruiting stations.

Even the navy medical officers are censured for haste in this important matter, and it is suggested that some form of mental examination is desirable as well as a probationary service of six months to determine mental status and aptitude for service.

It is also deemed wise to inquire into family and personal history of candidates before accepting them.

It is found that among the foreign born the Germans have the best mental makeup. From January, [illegible], to June, [illegible], there was nearly 50 per cent of recoveries and less than 7 per cent of deaths. Over [illegible] per cent of the insane are between twenty and thirty years old.

He Sat.

It is related of the Rev. Matthew Clark that in the audience was once a young British military officer whose scarlet uniform far outshone any rival habiliments and so fixed the gaze of the young damsels present that the wearer, enjoying the impression he was making, not only stood through the prayer with the rest, but remained standing after all others had sat down until the pastor had proceeded for some time with his sermon, and at length, noticing a divided attention and its cause, the minister stopped, laid aside his sermon and, addressing his new hearer, said:

"Ye're a braw (brave) lad. Ye ha'e a braw suit of claithes, and we ha'e a' seen them. Ye may sit doon."

The lieutenant dropped as if shot.—From the "Autobiography of Horace Greeley."

WATERING THE STOCK.

Not in Wall Street, but in the Big Cattle Markets.

Water is the only thing in the marketing of live stock that figures clear profit. Feed corn at $1 per bushel, hay [illegible] a ton, the charges made by stockyards companies for yardage and the charge for selling made by commission companies tend to reduce the shipper's profit, but when he sees his bunch of cattle properly yarded, fed and quickly drinking at the water troughs he knows the amount of water the cattle drink will cost him nothing and will sell at as much per pound as the weight gained by expensive feeding.

If cattle at the big markets were yarded and sold without a chance to get water it would mean a large loss to shippers yearly.

The average steer or cow will drink twenty to fifty pounds of water at the marketing point, according to the distance it has been hauled and the length of time without water. The hog being much smaller and capacity for drink limited, the water fill seldom exceeds five pounds per head. Sheep drink little water at markets, but to get the proper fill due them the big sheepmen who cover several hundred miles with shipments bill their sheep to some feeding station near the market, hold them on feed and water several days and at the proper time resume the journey.

Dealers in live stock at the Kansas City yards say that weight gained by the use of water at the Kansas City stockyards in 1910 amounted to [illegible].—Kansas City Star.

THE STOLID BELGIANS.

Aviator Sopwith Thought He'd Startle the Peasants, but He Didn't.

Aviator Sopwith describes in the London Times how he landed in Belgium after flying across the English channel in twenty-two minutes:

"Making an aerial detour to avoid some hills, I endeavored to steer toward Chimay by the aid of a compass I carried with me, but I soon lost my way. Just as I was flying over a village about 800 feet high a very ugly gust caught my machine on one side and tilted it partly over. To my consternation the aeroplane refused to regain its normal position even when I exerted the full pressure of the small balancing planes fixed to the rear ends of the main planes. Just when I thought I should glide helplessly down through the air a field near a village presented itself. I planed down and sat still, quite exhausted.

"A Belgian peasant was working on the road near by. His nonchalance was amazing. He merely stopped his work in a leisurely way and gazed at me stolidly for several minutes. The apathy of the villagers, although they had never seen an aeroplane before, was indeed remarkable. Two old women to whose cottage I went did not appear at all astonished that I should have descended out of the air. All they wanted to know was what the weather was like in England."

A MAN'S WHISKERS.

They Should Not Be Regarded With the Shoebrush.

If men would devote as much loving care to their whiskers as women do to their hair they would contribute greatly to increasing the dignity of the sex.

A woman wouldn't think of coming downtown without having her hair properly arranged. She curls it, and fusses with it, and puts it out with rats, and puts wire cages under it, and runs ribbons through it, and she is a vision of loveliness when she appears in the busy haunts of men.

But a man gives his whiskers no attention further than to brush the eggshells or clam chowder out of them with the shoebrush. It never seems to occur to him that his whiskers might be made beautiful if he would devote one-half the time to them that a woman gives to her hair. He might easily have made a wire cage to attach to his chin, and then he could weave his whiskers around it in captivating styles and tie the ends together with a pink or blue ribbon.

The alfalfa editor gets tired of seeing the same old fashions in whiskers when it would be so easy to devise new and striking ways of wearing them.

There should be a whiskers club in Emporia. If such an organization were formed and the members held weekly meetings to exchange ideas and compare notes the results would soon be apparent. The town's whiskers would soon become distinctive, and their reputation would cover the country.

Let us have a new deal in spinach.—Emporia Gazette.

New Garbage Regulations.

Sanitary Inspector Spence has completed a new garbage regulation that will be greatly appreciated. As is generally known it is contrary to the by-law to have garbage out all night. The collectors have heretofore started on their rounds at 7 a.m. Thus scores of people who had not put out their cans in time had the garbage left. Hereafter the collectors will not begin their rounds until until 8 a.m.

Is Lindsay's Mayor Out?

Lindsay Warder: A message from Clerk Ray's office this afternoon came like a boomerang to the supporters of Mayor Beal, when it was claimed he could not qualify for the Mayor's chair, owing to his nomination not being properly signed. It appears that Mayor Beal was nominated by T. H. Davies, seconded by Stephen Oliver. The question has been raised that Mr. Oliver has not property in the town, consequently the nomination is disqualified.

STEALING A HORSE

A Bold Afghan Robber Who Had a Sense of Humor

An East Indian officer, writing of life in Peshawar in the early seventies of the last century, relates the following:

The medical officer of my regiment was informed one night that a valuable and favorite Arab steed of his had been stolen. Over the border, gone forever, he never expected to see his horse again, but next day, much to his surprise, there came to him a bearded ruffian riding bare backed the stolen steed.

He confessed that he had taken the animal, but, learning that it was the property of a hakim (physician), had brought it back. The horse had been tethered in line with others, with men, women and children sleeping in the open about them.

"How did you manage it?" asked the doctor.

"If the sahib will give the necessary order," he said, "I will show him."

The entire scene was reproduced, even to the night watchman asleep in a corner. Noiselessly the Afghan crawled toward the Arab, threading [illegible] through the prostrate forms to where it was standing at the end of the row. Softly hissing to attract the animal's attention without creating alarm, he gently raised himself with arm extended.

In his open palm were some lumps of goor (native sugar), beloved of horses, and while the Arab was enjoying these the man was caressing him with the other hand, whence suspended a watering bridle taken from his wallet. Quickly this was adjusted, and then, stroking soothingly, the robber passed his hand over the animal's back and down the hind quarters. Swiftly the heel ropes were unhitched, then the head gear released, and with a bound he was astride and away, his right hand backward flung, shouting triumphantly as he passed, "Thus was it done!"

The joke was that he never came back! A double restitution would have been too much of a wrench.

He always brings all his folks, including his wife, who came of a fine old southern family and never in her life did anything else, and their children, all of whom, even the harelipped one, are as merry and hungry as their parents, and generally another relative or two whom Cousin Raymond has generously invited to come along. This time Raymond writes that, though he has had a (ha, ha!) mortgage foreclosed on him lately and his (tee, hee!) Mexican rubber plantation stock didn't turn out quite as well as he expected and a few other little (haw, haw!) things like that have slipped a cog, the Lord is still with him. So possibly that's who he's bringing along upon this occasion.

"But, be that as it may, I've come down here to meet Raymond whenever he arrives and slip him a ten dollar bill and a hint and slide him and his [illegible] back on to the train before it [illegible] and shove them along to [illegible] and on to Third Cousin [illegible], who has [illegible]. Asks your support and influence to ensure his election as

J. J. HARTLEY

The Workingman's Candidate for

MAYOR

Unanimously Endorsed by the Trades & Labor Council

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY OF PETERBOROUGH:

Ladies and Gentlemen:—At the earnest request of a large number of the ratepayers I have consented to be a candidate for the position of Mayor for the year 1914.

Being born and having lived all my life in Peterborough, and my whole life's activities centred in Peterborough, I naturally have a deep interest in the welfare and prosperity of the city.

Should I be elected I promise you that I will guard to the very best of my ability, the interests of the ratepayers and will oppose all unnecessary expenditures. I will do my utmost to [illegible] the needs of a growing city.

I may say that I am in favor of Municipal Ownership, and am in favor of having all city work done by our own people instead of bringing in outsiders to do it.

I will endeavor to see that the ratepayers get value for every dollar that is expended.

I have had considerable experience in municipal matters, having served ten years in the Council and fourteen years on the Board of Education, being Chairman of that Board for two years. I was also Chairman of the Board of Health for several years, so that you will see that I am not without a fair share of experience.

Should you do me the honor to elect me as Mayor of my City I will do my best to serve you to the extent of my ability.

Yours respectfully,

J. J. HARTLEY

WATER POWERS TO BE CONSERVED FOR THE BENEFIT OF THE PEOPLE

No Longer Are They to be the Prey of the Speculator—A Great Resource

(Special to The Times.)

Ottawa, Jan. 2.—The action of the Dominion Government in regard to the Burleigh Falls power, in which it is stated that the lease of this valuable privilege is to be cancelled, and given back to the people, indicates the policy of the government. Realizing that cheap hydro-electric energy will be one of the most important factors in the progress and industrial development of Western Canada one of the first acts of the Borden Government was to create and organize a Dominion Water Powers' Branch, in the Department of the Interior, with the necessary expert engineering staff. Immediately on its organization this branch commenced a thorough investigation of the power situation in the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. Complete surveys have been made of all the known economic power sites. As a result of these surveys the Government will realize the maximum possible advantageous utilization of the power possibilities of the country. Furthermore, the Government has adopted a well-considered and cautious policy of water power administration, which even conservation experts claim to be consistent with the most approved tenets of that great movement, the "Conservation of our Natural Resources." The Water Power Regulations, under which all power concessions in the West are now made, provide for rights for limited periods only and afford reasonable protection to the public in the way of rentals with periodic revisions, control of rates by the Dominion Railway Commission, and a general complete control over the whole development in so far as its operation in extent and efficiency is concerned. At the same time the regulations provide sufficiently attractive opportunities to interest the capitalists in the development of western water powers as these may be a demand.

Consistent with this policy the Government has reserved all available land contiguous to known power sites or that may be required for storage sites in the future, such land to be disposed of only under the Public Power Regulations.

The Government has also taken a strong stand through the Water Powers' Branch, against the exploitation of the public by promoters interested in power projects of doubtful economic possibilities, and has even issued public warning against stock selling campaigns in connection with schemes that were found, after careful investigation, not to be feasible from a commercial or economic point of view.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND STIRRED TO DEPTHS BY HERESY CHARGES

Flood of Oratory and Columns of Type Over High Church Dispute

London, Jan. 2.—Battle among the Anglican Bishops over the alleged heresy of the Bishops of Uganda and Mombasa continued to-day to rage furiously. The Archbishop of Canterbury was still letting the controversy develop before pronouncing any judgment, but the Archbishop of York to-day warned Anglicans that the unity of the Church was endangered.

Dean Hensley Henson, one of the ablest living Anglican divines, said to-day that if the Church were to uphold the charges of heresy and rigidly exclude other Protestant Christians from religious fellowship then the only possible unity for English churchmen was unity with Rome.

Keep Traditions Intact.

On the other hand Mr. Athelstane Riley, the distinguished reader and high churchman, said to-day that it was essential that the Anglican Church keep intact the definite Catholic tradition of Episcopacy and holy orders, otherwise the Anglican church would jeopardize its friendly relations with the 120,000,000 Christians of the Greek-Russian churches, which really form the broadest bulwark against Rome.

To Meet Advance of Islam.

A leading Anglican Journal, The Guardian, urged some form of working agreement between the Church of England and the great Protestant bodies in order to meet the rapid advance of the Moslem Faith and said such a union against Islam would be the greatest religious event since the Reformation.

ALD. BULLER GIVES REASONS WHY HE SHOULD BE PETERBORO'S MAYOR FOR THE YEAR 1914

Seven Years' Active Record in the City's Interests—As Past Chairman of Important Committees is Closely in Touch with Momentous Unfinished Business. The Father of Street Paving and Aggressive Advocate of Hydro-Electric

TO THE ELECTORS OF PETERBOROUGH CITY:—

Ladies and Gentlemen:—On this the third morning of the year 1914, permit me to avail myself of the opportunity afforded by the press of extending my heartiest greetings to one and all for a happy and prosperous New Year, coupled with a lively hope that your votes on Monday next will return me to the position of chief magistrate of this city, which confidence I pledge myself to reciprocate by fostering, safeguarding and advancing the interests of Peterborough in general. As a business man of this city my interests are at stake in seeing to it that our municipal government is conducted on such lines as will assure progress and prosperity at a minimum cost to the ratepayer, and this has always been my policy, together with an earnest consideration for the welfare of the working men. In coming before you as a candidate for the Mayoralty I do so at the earnest solicitation of a large section of the community whose confidence evidently, I am happy to say, now culminates in the assurance that the People's Candidate for Aldermanic preference of seven years' standing is at this juncture the PEOPLE'S CANDIDATE FOR MAYOR. And I pledge myself that if elected to this, the most important municipal gift in the hands of an intelligent electorate, I will leave no stone unturned to advance such municipal legislation as will conserve the interests of all citizens alike, irrespective of class or creed. [illegible], THE PEOPLE'S INTERESTS shall be my interests at all times, and on all occasions.

SEVEN YEARS AN ALDERMAN

In the choice of a Mayor of an important city like Peterborough, experience in municipal government should have some weight, and especially at this time, when public measures, such as Hydro-Electric, street paving, sanitary sewerage, etc., have yet to be completed in detail; and I honestly feel that my active association with these public utilities would stand me and my fellow citizens in good stead, in my assuming the Mayor's responsibility for the consummation of these progressive measures left to a successor by his estimable worship, Mayor Bradburn. Since Peterborough's incipiency as a city, I enjoy the longest record as an Alderman, having served the people as THE PEOPLE'S CANDIDATE seven years in that honourable capacity.

PERMANENT FIRE BRIGADE

In my second year I held the office of Chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee, during which time we firmly established our present permanent fire brigade, assuring approved and modern fire protection and minimum insurance rates.

CITY PROPERLY LIGHTED

As Chairman of the Power Committee in my third year, much of that was devoted to enquiry into power possibilities for municipal owned utilities, resulting eventually in the present Hydro-Electric Scheme, now in course of development. What Hydro-Electric lighting means is evidenced on the streets in centre city each night, and the system is to be continued until the whole city is served industrially, mercantilely and domestically. In this connection I might add that, notwithstanding the present outlook of expropriation proceedings to the unitiated, the city will only pay for the Peterborough Light & Power Company's distributing system; the power plant must be taken over by the Hydro-Electric Commission, who are under contract to supply the city with power for distribution. And citizens may rest assured that in any event the city is quite safe for a happy consummation of the Hydro-Electric scheme on economic lines, and as brilliantly creditable to all concerned as is the recently acquired magnetite arc lamp service which stamps Peterborough to-day as the best lighted city in Ontario, not excepting even Toronto.

A POLICY OF EXPANSION

In my fifth Aldermanic year the chairmanship of the Manufacturers' Committee fell to my lot, when Council reached after new industries. During that year I conducted negotiations for the establishment here of the De Laval, Henry Hope and Bonner-Worth industries, all of which are now located in our midst, and generally conceded to be valuable acquisitions to industrial Peterborough. Incidentally it might be here mentioned that the Bonner-Worth people have doubled their capacity the past year, while the other concerns are well known as sound and substantial industries, for the securing of which competition with Peterborough by many important centres was very keen indeed. I might also add here that I took an active part in negotiating for the acquisition by Peterborough of the Vermont Marble Co., now located in East City.

A BIG WORK CALLING FOR BUSINESS METHODS

The last two years of my Aldermanic career found me officiating as Chairman of the biggest and most important of Council's Committees—the Board of Works—involving the expenditure of more personal time and labor than called for from any other member of the Council, excepting His Worship the Mayor. In this capacity, recognizing that the city's phenomenal growth demanded the conduction of this Committee's work in a most approved business-like manner, I inaugurated the new policy of meeting in business session regularly every Wednesday each week throughout the whole year, thereby securing strict and systematic attention to the important work for which the Board of Works is responsible. By this means, and with the co-operation of my esteemed colleagues, the work of the city's biggest committee has been carried out the past two years in a manner gratifying to all concerned, and the needs of ratepayers promptly considered, irrespective of personality, class or creed.

As Chairman of the Board of Works, I agitated for and secured the beginning of street paving in this city—the only modern road construction for a modern city. The benefit of this work is apparent to all; it meets with general approval and will be continued next spring.

A PLATFORM OF ELEVEN PLANKS

Every candidate for Mayor of this city should pledge himself to a full and comprehensive policy, so that the electorate may understand upon what principles he leaves himself in their hands. In brief, I am in favor of:

1. Cheap Hydro-Electric Power for the city.
2. A belt-line street railway and cheap transportation. Modern conditions for modern people.
3. Revised assessment and publication where requested.
4. Night inspection looking to the greater health and safety of our people from a sanitary standpoint.
5. The fullest publicity of work of Council, so that electors may keep in touch with what is going on.
6. Seeing that citizens get what they pay for, and only pay for what they get.
7. More and cheaper water.
8. Pure ice and plenty of it. Why should we condemn the poor to worse privations?
9. The freest possible market, encouraging lowest possible prices to the workingmen.
10. Further extension of the street railway system, and later and earlier service. With the Dalhousie street bridge built, a belt line could be established, making it possible for workingmen to live anywhere in the city or suburbs.
11. A medical dispensary where those unable to pay can get free medical service with nurses [illegible] to help out home conditions.
12. Continuation of street paving.

FOR THE PUBLIC ALWAYS

In coming before you, ladies and gentlemen, as a candidate for the position of Mayor, I offer myself as THE PEOPLE'S CANDIDATE first, last and always [illegible]

DONALD, WHAT HAVE I TOLD YOU ABOUT WIPING YOUR FACE WITH YOUR HAT AND COAT ON?

WATCHED DEATH APPROACH

Washington Man Beat the Grim Reaper by an Eyelash.

Washington, Jan. 2.—James D. Colcox, 68, got out of the hospital to-day after the unusual experience of watching the approach of death and beating the grim reaper by an eyelash. Colcox was reading at his home near a gas lamp. Suddenly he began to strangle. He tried to get up but found his legs paralyzed. Then he realized there was a leak in the lamp and that he was being asphyxiated. He finally summoned help by throwing books at the door of his room and lapsed into unconsciousness when aid came.

HOCKEY

Whitby Won From the Petes in a Fast and Exciting Game.

Last night Brock street rink was crowded to capacity with an enthusiastic crowd of fans, who saw the Petes go down to defeat on this, the first game of the season. Their opponents were the well trained Whitby bunch of artists, who won out by a score of 5—4. For the Petes Flowers did good work. Fred Giroux got a hard blow on the nose that made the claret fly. Kelly was there all the time.

HOCKEN RETURNED TORONTO'S MAYOR

Toronto, Jan. 2.—Following are the complete returns showing the votes polled by the candidates for Mayoralty and Board of Control:

FOR MAYOR.

HOCKEN	21,231
McBrien	16,550
Burgess	3,642
Birks	1,023

Hocken's plurality over McBrien, 4,681.

Hocken's majority over the two anti-purchase candidates, 1,039.

BOARD OF CONTROL.

SIMPSON	20,488
McCARTHY	17,550

FEDERALS CANNOT HOLD OUT FOR LONG; SUPPLIES LOW

Prospect of Wholesale Retreat to American Side Growing—Rebels Close in; U. S. Troops Wait

Marfa, Tex., Jan. 2.—General Ortega's 6,000 rebels besieging Ojinaga, Mexico, had approached nearer to the fortifications before daylight to-day and apparently the Federals could not hold out much longer against a forced retreat across the Texas border at Presidio. The last word received from Major McNamee, commanding the United States border patrol at Presidio, was that the desertions from the Federal army had slackened. The Federals received some of their back pay, Major McNamee said, and this had discouraged further desertions.

Restrain Fire into United States.

Major McNamee had the situation well in hand in preparing for an expected flight of the entire Federal army across the border. The danger of the Federals drawing the rebel fire closer to the border in case of a flight was considered, but the border patrol had received the promise of Gen. Ortega that the fire would be directed away from the river. Gen. Villa has more ammunition on the way from Chihuahua in the hope of replenishing the rebel supply at Ojinaga before it is exhausted. The rebels have no way of renewing their supplies.

ST. PAUL'S LADIES' AID ANNUAL MEETING

The annual meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society of St. Paul's church took place yesterday afternoon, the President, Mrs. Munroe presiding.

Reports were read from the secretary and treasurer, showing that the society had a successful year.

PETERBORO WIDOW GETS GOOD DAMAGE AMOUNT

Toronto, Jan. 2.—The widow of John James Collis, carpenter, who was killed when the Turnbull Building in Peterborough collapsed last year, will receive $1,800 with which to purchase a rooming house, and $700 will be paid into court to the credit of her two children, Collis's stepchildren.

KING KNIGHTS FIVE CANADIANS

Some Surprises in the List—Aubrey White the Only Torontonian Honored

London, Jan. 2.—The list of the King's New Year honors include five Peerages, four Privy Councillors, six Barons, and twenty-two Knights, and an enormous number of minor honors.

The following Canadians appear in the list. Their new titles are:

Sir Francis Langelier, K.C.M.G., Lieutenant-Governor of Quebec.

Sir D. C. Cameron, K.C.M.G., Lieutenant-Governor of Manitoba.

Sir Horace Archambeault, K.B., Chief Justice of Quebec.

Sir Henry Egan, K.B., Ottawa.

Mr. Aubrey White, Toronto, C.M.G.

Sir Charles J. Jones, Ottawa, C.M.G.

K.C.M.G. stands for Knight Commander of St. Michael and St. George, K.B. for Knight Bachelor, C.M.G. for Companion of St. Michael and St. George.

FOUGHT FIRE IN CHEESE

Firemen Had Some Trouble Quenching This Blaze.

New York, Jan. 2.—Struggling through tons of sticky, melting cheese, firemen fought for hours early to-day against a fire in the five-storey warehouse of O. Roth and Company, cheese importers, at 15 Jay street. The firm's stock was turned into a huge rarebit by the fire.

At the Hudson hospital nearby, a panic among the patients was averted by the superintendent and nurses, who went through the building, closed all windows to keep out the smoke, and assured their charges there was no danger.

LINDSAY HOSPITAL GETS PROCEEDS OF A WAGER

Toronto, Jan. 2.—Through the loss of a wager, the Ross Memorial Hospital at Lindsay will benefit to the extent of $1,000. The statement was made in Toronto that during last year, one Toronto firm of liquor dealers shipped into the local option town of Orillia 60,000 bottles and 7,000 gallons of intoxicating liquor. Mr. Miller, of Orillia, disputed the statement which by inspection of the company's books has been proved to be correct. He will be correct. He will therefore have to hand over the $1,000 to the hospital as he attached the provision that if he was wrong he would pay this sum to any charity.

UNCONSCIOUS HUMOR.

The Way It Sometimes Crops Out In Examination Papers.

"About the driest thing in the world is the reading of a lot of examination papers," said a young University of Pennsylvania English instructor recently, "but occasionally the monotony of an evening of such work is relieved by a bit of humor. Frequently students try to be funny, thinking, perhaps, that they will in this way get on the right side of the man who marks the papers, but such attempts are usually flat failures. It's the unconscious bits of humor that are the gems.

"A short time ago I gave as a subject for an essay to one of my freshman classes 'My Impressions of Pennsylvania.' One youth wrote his name at the top of his paper and then sat through the entire hour, gazing at the ceiling, apparently unable to get a start. Then at the end he handed in the blank piece of paper. As a piece of satire it would have been excellent, but I am sure he had no such intention. The blank paper merely represented his inability to get his impressions in writing and not the lack of impressions.

"A short time ago a history professor asked the question, 'What caused the French rebellion of 1830?' One of the replies was merely, 'Too much Bourbon.' If this answer had come from an ordinary student he would have given the writer credit for a witty answer, but it was written by a serious minded youth from the country, who, he was sure, was incapable of such an effort and probably did not even know there was a whisky by that name. Truly the unconscious are the gems."—Philadelphia Record.

THE LOT OF HARDSHIP.

It Is Ever the School In Which Greatness Is Taught.

There is a purpose in circumstance. Nothing in our lives is for naught. All things which have been given us, even our chains, are meant for our making—meant for the working out of our goodly destiny. Bunyan in prison, apparently cursed by endless hours of solitude and loneliness, was a greater Bunyan than if he had been free to roam afield. The walls which shut his body in could not confine his soul. It escaped them and went out into all the world to lift to higher levels the hope and vision of mankind. The log cabin in which Lincoln was born lent its ruggedness and simplicity to the man himself and has become a shrine which men approach with reverent feet as to some holy place which love and truth have glorified. The hard lot is ever the school in which greatness is taught, and the best scholars are those who perceive the purpose of difficulty and do not grow bitter as they grapple with it. The very genius of progressive living consists in a capacity to appreciate the day and what the day holds, to find in all contacts and events a divine conspiracy to refine the soul and make it a greater soul, to hail hardship with grim gladness and bless the hills which must be climbed, to look with kindly eyes upon every human thing, to accept with complacence the small circle of opportunity until it has been shown that we are worthy to move in a wider one. Along no other path may we come to our best and largest estate of being and serving.—Richard Wightman in Metropolitan Magazine.

THE SPIRAL DIP.

Brookins Says It's One of the Most Risky Feats of Aviating.

The spiral dip is undoubtedly one of the most difficult feats of aviating. It is something which requires the utmost confidence and skill on the part of an aviator to perform.

I worked out the stunt myself. For a number of weeks before attempting it I had the spiral idea. I knew what I wanted to do, but I did not know how to go about it. Finally I went to Orville Wright, explained my proposition, or rather my idea, to him and asked his advice. He heard me through and then pronounced the idea an impossibility. Still I was not convinced. I believed it could be done, and I kept puttering around with it until finally I struck upon the solution and made my first spiral.

With all frankness I will admit that it is, to say the least, a bit scary. Before going into it one must tip the machine straight downward, dropping toward the earth to secure momentum enough to make the spiral. Somehow, no matter how often one performs this, you never get used to it. The terrible falling sensation is there, always there. If the first spiral does not go off just as it should I always come out of it instead of attempting the second circle. It is the best plan.—Walter R. Brookins in Los Angeles Herald.

Explosive Chewing Gum.

The British soldier loves to chew gum—not, however, the gum known to America, but the army explosive cordite, which contains 60 per cent of nitroglycerin, a sweet concoction of agreeable taste. Chewers of cordite assert that when taken in small doses it greatly stimulates the nervous system and causes a slight intoxication. Chewed in larger quantities, it produces [illegible] and [illegible]. The habit of chewing cordite has become so common in the British army that the military authorities have taken measures to prevent the misuse of the explosive. Cordite so used does not explode, because nitroglycerin is exploded only by a formidable shock or by [illegible], but it is [illegible] that under certain conditions it might be exploded—by, for instance, [illegible].—Harper's Weekly.

Prof. Mulveney Known All Over the World

Proprietor of World's Famous Tape Worm Exterminator

Tape worm is bred from a parasite. It is of pear shape, having two, four and six suckers. It lays the eggs, which are connected together. They develop and form a body, which is the worm. Each section is an individual, having a mouth or [illegible]. The worm grows much longer than the bowels where it is located, and sometimes a whole colony of them are found, enough to fill a quart of solid worm, and when put in a bottle of water would apparently fill it. It is the hardest task in the world to destroy this parasite, without doing injury to the individual who may be so unfortunate as to have it, as the parasite clings to the bowels, feeding itself from the body of the victim, or it remains there to breed another. It is an internal [illegible], and causes its victim to suffer all the symptoms of [illegible]. The [illegible] physicians are led to believe the patient is suffering from some other disease, as nearly every person has different symptoms. Some have been treated for cancer of the bowels, consumption of the bowels, consumption of the lungs, chronic dyspepsia, nervous prostration, melancholia, hypochondria, hysteria, inflammation of the bowels, appendicitis, and other complaints, when one or more of these worms were eating their lives away.

Prof. Mulveney has made the discovery to free the victim without injury to the system, destroying the parasite as well as expelling the worm with one dose of medicine without any previous starvation. Visit his office, where he has in his possession the most wonderful collection of these parasites which have been expelled from hundreds of people by his famous remedy, some bottles containing colonies of worms, and anyone seeing them cannot imagine how a person could possibly live with them in his bowels. It is surprising the number of people that have them. Thousands have them and are not aware of the fact. The letters and testimonials the professor has in his possession are enough to convince [illegible] of this alarming fact. Some of the most prominent symptoms are ravenous appetite, dizzy spells, backache, cramps in the bowels, a feeling of something moving in the bowels. [illegible] [illegible]

Our Point of View

The Examiner says the Liberal party will get together. Perhaps so, after the whereabouts of what is left of it is discovered.

—o—

"Huerta needs more money" reads a headline. As most of us are in the same fix we feel like extending him a sympathetic hand.

—o—

The discovery of the existence of a lemon trust no doubt was brought about by the generous way in which it has been handing the fruit to the Liberals.

—o—

A Toronto scientist declares that excessive talking is a dangerous disease. This may bluff his wife and some other wives, but we doubt it.

—o—

When the municipal candidates recover from the effects of the present campaign, they will be able to tell the old time politician a few things about the strenuous life.

—o—

The Globe says that the fashionable girl nowadays conceals her ears. This is encouraging, for it inspires the hope that she may decide to conceal some more of herself.

—o—

Sir Wilfrid Laurier talks like a man who has been amputated from a good public job and feels that it is his duty to say something and about the direction in which the country is heading.

—o—

Somebody rises to remark that a hen cackles because, like all females, she is vain. Well, she has something to be vain about when in some parts of the country her eggs bring as much as six cents each.

—o—

The latest British battle cruiser is the swiftest and most powerful in the world. Germany will also produce a swifter and more powerful one. Then England will build a still swifter and mightier one, and so on to the end of the chapter.

WILL THERE BE AN ELECTION?

The Toronto World says:

Down at Ottawa some people are saying that the coming session will be the last, and that an election may be looked for in the summer or fall of 1914. The bill providing for the redistribution of parliamentary seats will be brought down at an early date and can be put through the house, no matter how unanimously the minority may object. The senate might throw out the bill, but this would only expedite an appeal to the country.

The western provinces are entitled to increased representation, and would, therefore, be inclined to resent a senatorial veto, which deprived them of a score of seats in the popular chamber.

Unquestionably a party long in power, suddenly turned out of office, does not fully realize what has happened until it experiences another defeat. Many Conservatives scarcely believed that Sir Wilfrid Laurier was really prime minister until after the general elections in 1900, and no doubt Mr. Borden would gain in strength and prestige by carrying another election. Of course a bird in the hand is worth two in the bush, but a good many of the supporters of the government are said to be in favor of an election in the near future, before their opponents have entirely recovered from the confusion into which their ranks were thrown by the electoral battle of 1911.

"I Sleep Soundly, Feel Like New"

ALL WHO LACK VIGOR, THOSE WHO ARE DISPIRITED AND WORN OUT SHOULD READ THIS CAREFULLY.

Proof That Health and Renewed Vitality Quickly Return When Remedy is Used.

"I am only thirty years old, yet almost two years I have felt more like seventy-five. I have found it difficult to sleep at night, and in the morning felt so depressed and heavy that effort was difficult. My hands were always clammy and the perspiration on slight effort would break out all over me. It was not unnatural that I should begin to brood over the chance that I should be unfit to do my work, and this dread made my sleepless nights perfect misery. After repeated trials of medicines and mixtures, Dr. Hamilton's Pills gave me the first gleam of hope. From the very first I could see they were different in action from other pills. They didn't gripe and acted as naturally as if nature and not the pills were cleansing my clogged-up system. My spirits rose. I felt much better. The sluggish action of the system gave way to normal activity. Dizziness and headaches ceased, appetite, good color and ambition to work returned, and have remained. I am like a new man, and I thank Dr. Hamilton's Pills for it all."

This was the experience of J. E. Parkhurst, a well known grocery dealer in Jefferson. Follow his advice, use Dr. Hamilton's Pills for your stomach, kidneys and liver, and you'll enjoy long life and robust good health. All druggists and storekeepers sell Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. per box, 5 boxes for $1.00, or postpaid from the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

A FINAL MESSAGE FROM ROBERT HICKS

Ladies and Gentlemen,—As it will be quite impossible for me to personally interview the whole of the electors before polling day, I take this means of soliciting your voluntary support for the important position of Water Commissioner for 1914.

Let me just add that to my mind the spirit in which the Water Commissioners in the past have thought to accomplish every problem which has confronted them, has been most exemplary, and that it will be my aim, if elected, to do my best to assist in solving every new problem of the future and to render the best public service in the interest of our rapidly growing City.

The valuation placed upon a public man in the midst of a campaign and an impartial review of his business ability, conduct, and stake in the City should enter into his fitness for office.

Your faith in me must be the strongest incentive to my usefulness, and if I am favoured with your confidence I will see to it that that faith has not been misplaced.

With best wishes of the season, I remain,

At Your Service,
ROBERT HICKS.

PUPLIC OPINION

The Times does not hold itself responsible for the opinions of its correspondents.

MR. STRATTON'S POSITION DEFENDED.

Dear Sir,—In reply to the letter which appeared in the Review of December 31st, signed by ratepayer and referring to my position in regard to Hydro-Electric, I wish to say that I have always advocated a municipal lighting system, and also municipal ownership of public utilities and therefore of necessity be in favor of hydro-electric. My nominator, Mr. F. Mason, is a strong advocate of municipal ownership and is fully cognizant of my position in respect to hydro-electric. My policy is such as to justify the vote and influence of every elector in the Centre Ward.

I might also state that my election card which has been before the public for several days, substantiates my claim as a supporter of this important measure.

Hydro-electric can hardly be characterized as an issue in the present election as it was unanimously endorsed by the ratepayers one year ago, therefore it devolves upon subsequent Councils to see that the wishes of the people are carried out to a successful conclusion. If elected I will do my best to see the wishes of the electors are fulfilled.

Yours truly,
A. H. Stratton.

SOME GOOD SUGGESTIONS.

Editor Morning Times.

Dear Sir,—Happening to pick up a late issue of your journal I note the following two statements by the Mayoralty candidates, the first by Ald. Gillespie, saying he is in favor of publishing the assessment rolls. I am sure a great many of the ratepayers would not object. Councils have often spent money more foolishly. The money would be spent locally amongst our city printers, and if any parties are escaping paying their just share of the taxes, they could soon be located. True, the assessment rolls are open to all during office hours, but the ordinary man is too busy during the day, hustling around to make the wherewithal to meet necessary expenses to go to the city clerk's office and dig through the rolls, whereas if published in a neat pamphlet he could easily peruse the same at home during his leisure in the evening, and if anyone was getting the better of him in tax assessment we would soon hear of it.

Alderman Buller speaks of "equalization of assessment." This looks like an admission that at present there is no equality about our city system.

Now along comes Mr. J. B. McWilliams, Water Commission candidate, and gives figures showing where the city is overlooking values, that if assessed in the same way that some of us are treated, and at our present rate, should give the city at least $2500 annual additional revenue. I submit that the job of city assessor be made elective and Mr. J. B. McWilliams be induced to become a candidate for the office. He should head the polls. It is not every candidate that can show a saving to the city of over the value of the salary of the office right at the start off.

Observer.

A MAN OF THE PEOPLE IN THE PEOPLE

Editor Morning Times.

Dear Sir,—Permit me at this time of the year to encroach upon your valued space respecting the Mayoralty election. With every respect for all three candidates alike, I still must think that an unwarranted effort is being made by the Trades and Labor Council unthinkingly perhaps, to supersede with their endorsed candidate, the man who has for the past seven years run on the workingman's ticket, and foster the working man's interests—Ald. Buller. As a matter of fact all three candidates should be judged on their merits and record, irrespective of any society endorsation. Trades unionists are intelligent enough to make their own choice without coaching, and Messrs. Hartley, Gillespie and Buller are in one sense in the same class—employers of labor.

Ald. Buller is of the people and for the people, and during a long residence in this city, his life has been open, exemplary and above board, and his everyday consideration for, and aid at time of need to subordinates and the distressed, won for him the honorable cognomen of The People's Candidate for municipal preference. As the head of his present business he has for the past 25 years employed on a daily average 40 men, and his help always speak with respect of Ald. Buller, to whom they can at all times look for friendly consideration and brotherly treatment. As an Alderman, he has always legislated in the interests of all citizens as a people, and never lost [illegible] advancing the welfare of the laboring class. He is still the People's Candidate and if elected will be the People's Mayor in very truth. Of course, my sympathies go with Ald. Buller in this election, but at the same time I highly respect both the other candidates, and regret that they are opposed—friendly it is true—at this era in Peterborough's history. I am not one to endeavor to force my opinions upon the working men, who are quite capable of making their own choice. But I do say that in Ald. Buller the community has seeking its confidence, one of nature's truest gentlemen, with the courage of his convictions, broad-minded, generous and open hearted—an ideal People's Candidate thoroughly in touch with the people's needs, and with our civic government's progressive policy.

THE NEW SENATOR.

He Found Fashionable Washington Life Too Rich For His Blood.

A newly elected senator came on early to Washington to arrange for rooms and had an object lesson furnished him on "the high cost of living." He wanted to start in "with the swim" and be at the center of things, so he priced the "Tecumal" hotel.

"We make it $650 per month, two rooms and bath, to you, senator—without meals," said the clerk dreamily. When the senator caught his breath he was two blocks up the avenue.

He tried another hotel, a moderately exclusive house, whose lobbies were a sort of eddying pool of statesmen and "influential" lobbyists. To him the attendant flamen of this gilded shrine remarked: "Now, we have a choice of two rooms with bath at $350 per month"—

"Without eating—just for a sleeping place!" broke in the senator. "Why, I'd burn up with fever if I had to sleep at that price!"

The salary of a senator is $7,500, and it is figured on the high level of "simple" living in Washington that he ought to part with that much for assured rest at a good hotel. But the new senator didn't feel that way about it. Finally it was suggested that he might take a room at the simple hotel of the old days, at $1 per twenty-four hours, and save money, using the parcel room for baggage when away over Sunday. Then he could take a peep at Peacock alley and meet friends in the "lobby" which the more wealthy statesmen and tourists support.—Joe Mitchell Chapple in National Magazine.

THE DIVER'S DRESS.

Evolution of the Devices Used For Submarine Work.

Among pioneer inventors to whom the diving dress in its present perfected form owes so much was William Hannis Taylor. The previous hit or miss attempts were superseded by the Taylor patent of June 20, 1838, in which the essential feature was the valve allowing the emission of consumed air without an influx of water.

Previous to this time there had been the diving chests and the diving bell, of which the latter, introduced by Smeaton in 1778, was the safest and most practical device for submarine exploration. The diving bell has been developed alongside of the diving dress and is still in use.

The general appearance of Taylor's diving armor was like that of a knight's suit of mail, except for a prominent bulge in the body piece. A large pipe coming down from the surface and penetrating the body piece at the bulge supplied the fresh air, while a short pipe entered the body piece on the other side and was provided with a valve which carried off the exhaust. Although diving armor has now reached its perfected state, this valve has never been materially improved upon. —Scientific American.

A Mistaken Sign of Generosity.

The young son of a Germantown man who lives up to every cent of his income heard a compliment for his father the other day and passed it on, thinking to please the parental heart and win future favors perhaps from the parental purse.

"Heard something nice about you, dad," he announced over the dinner table.

"Ah, that's pleasant!" murmured father modestly.

"Heard 'you was awful good to mother,'" went on the boy.

"I hope I treat your mother as a man should treat the person he cares most for," responded father evenly.

"Heard you were so generous to her that every one in town knew about it. Heard a man say every one was talking about it too. He said everything you had was in your wife's name."

The father's countenance underwent a sudden change. He spluttered for a moment painfully. Then he spoke.

"You go to bed!" said papa.—Philadelphia Ledger.

"THE GRAND" TO OPEN IN MOTION PICTURES.

Commencing on Tuesday next, January 6th, The Grand Opera House will open with High Class Motion pictures, commencing each evening at 7.30. A new "Simplex" the latest and most expensive moving picture machine on the market has been installed as well as a new curtain of the latest type so as to insure the best pictures it is possible to show. The Grand Opera House orchestra will be in attendance at every performance. The famous universal Pictures will be shown and the program for each performance will be six full reels and these will change every night. The performance, which will be a continuous one, will commence each evening at 7.30 and the price of admission has been fixed at 10c. for adults and 5c for children. The travelling road attractions will be played in the usual way but the Pictures will be shown on every open night so that the theatre will be running every night. With its unexcelled equipment, large roomy entrance, comfortable seats, splendid ventilation, and requisite exits, "The Grand" should make a strong appeal to lovers of the Motion Picture.

TO THE ELECTORS OF PETERBOROUGH:

Ladies and Gentlemen:—

Last year a large number of ratepayers requested me to be a candidate for Water Commissioner in opposition to Mr. Moore. I not only declined to be a candidate but did what I could to prevent opposition. The Commissioners at that time had law suits on with the contractors where about thirty thousand dollars of the people's money was at stake. Mr. Moore being a lawyer I considered he should be the best posted man on the Commission to fight the contractors and in the interest of the City it would be a mistake to remove him.

This year I have again been waited upon by a large representation of the ratepayers who believe that with my thorough knowledge of all the waters in this district and my many years experience as alderman I should be a capable man for the position. I have consented to be a candidate and my past record in the Council I think is proof that if elected will give you faithful and honest service.

The taking over of the Hydro-Electric system will require a great deal of time—more than any man who has a large business to attend to can spare. Not being in business I can give all the time required, and if necessary will make a personal inspection of every house in the city and see that rich and poor are treated alike.

I can see no reason, with the large body of ready made reservoirs of the Otonabee River there should be no shortage of water for either household or lawn service, or why there should not be a reduction in the water rates. A good supply of good water is a necessity in every house and should be available for the people at a low rate.

To the ratepayers who are new residents of the City and not personally acquainted with me, would say that for a number of years I occupied the position of alderman, and always stood at the head of the poll both as a representative of No. 3 Ward and also after the Ward system was abolished.

General street railway extension and cheap transportation like cheap light and water, should be the goal of our municipal government. When a worker can have his home and garden anywhere, and is not tied to locality his prospects are greatly improved.

Trusting that the ratepayers who want good service in the future as have given the past will give me their hearty support.

I am, yours very truly,

J. B. McWILLIAMS

To The Electors of The North Ward

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,—

In making an appeal to you for your support in the coming municipal elections, I fully realize the handicap I am under in being a stranger to quite a number of you, [illegible] I have been [illegible] here for seven years. My policy briefly is this:

An honest endeavor to show a dollar's value for every dollar expended, and the most economical and efficient government of the city's affairs. To attain this I have acceded to the wishes of a large number of the ratepayers to offer myself as a candidate for Alderman in the North Ward. Should I find it impossible to see you all personally before election day, I wish to make a most urgent appeal for your vote and influence, and can assure you that I will do my duty to help merit your confidence.

[illegible] T. HOLLOWAY

J. M. GREENE
Board of Education

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN;

Having been requested by a number of ratepayers, I have consented to be a candidate for the Board of Education. I here ask for your vote and support and will assure you that my best service and ability will be given and used if honored with election.

Yours very truly,
J. M. GREENE

BOARD OF EDUCATION

To the Electors of the City of Peterborough

Ladies and Gentlemen:

At the request of a large number of the ratepayers of the city, I have consented to be a candidate for the Board of Education, and respectfully solicit your support.

If elected I will do my best to serve you faithfully and well.

Yours very truly,
JOHN H. SMITH,
The People's Candidate.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

A vote for me is a vote for Hydro-Electric. Wishing you the Compliments of the Season,

Yours respectfully,

JOSEPH W. WORTH

Hydro—Johnston
To the Electors of NORTH WARD

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

I desire to heartily wish you and all the citizens of Greater Peterborough all the compliments of the season.

As a representative in the City Council, elected by the good people of the North Ward, I have had the honour of representing the people generally in carrying out their wishes for the introduction of the Hydro-Electric system into Peterborough, and I respectfully ask you for a further renewal of the confidence by again re-electing me to that very responsible position.

I stand for a principle that I believe to be in the interests of the masses of the people.

Notwithstanding the opposition offered to the honest work of your Council of 1913 I will continue to help to carry out that work until light and power are in the hands of the municipality and being run in the interests of the people, and not in the interests of a monopoly.

Yours in the good work,

W. J. JOHNSTON

To the Electors of the City of Peterboro

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,

Your vote and influence is solicited for Re-election on your Board of Education.

J. E. MIDDLETON

Business' Management of City's Business to the ELECTORS OF CENTRE WARD

In voting for A. H. STRATTON for Alderman for Centre Ward you are voting for a live go-ahead man who has the interests of Peterborough at heart. He is a large taxpayer and will use his best efforts to keep your taxes down to the lowest notch. At the same time he is able to encourage existing manufacturers and endeavor to bring in a new industry. In regard to the important matter of Hydro Electric, while he favours it he is especially in favour of business-like management of the enterprise of seeing that the people, who voted so, almost unanimously for it, get the greatest benefit from it at the least possible cost consistent with efficiency. He is a good business man by the test of success in his own business and knows that to encourage the working man and find employment for them at good wages, helps the business man and thereby help to make a BIGGER AND BETTER CITY. Be sure and vote for

Confident Appeal to the Electors

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

Most of you are already familiar with my brief election address, and my further public statements made on nomination day, and if any additional explanations of my views are desired on any of the live questions affecting the interests of the City, I will be glad to give them to anyone between now and polling day. But as I will not be able, personally, to wait upon the whole electors before the day of voting, I desire to use this medium of soliciting your support.

The very encouraging indications of your support, coming so generally from all classes, has served to strengthen my confidence in the result.

With a clear comprehension of the work that lies before the coming Mayor of your city, begotten of close attention to the City's affairs during the past five years as your Alderman and a conscientious desire to contribute a further share of service, I now leave the campaign confidently in your hands.

Wishing one and all a Happy and Prosperous New Year,

G. A. GILLESPIE

To The Ratepayers of CENTRE WARD

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

Should not your Council for 1914 have your support, without reservation, on the City's light and power enterprise? It is to your interest.

Have your candidates pledged to this? Let no man in who, so far as you can judge, will trifle with the question or flirt with the opposition.

Get the candidate's assurance that he is right. If he isn't, leave him at home.

I am fairly and wholly in favor of the City's Hydro-Municipal operation as planned out. It will turn out all right in the end; temporary blocking will not hinder the result.

Yours respectfully,

FRANK H. DOBBIN.

STARTLING STATEMENT REGARDING THE CITY'S FINANCIAL POSITION

Covering a Period of Six Years, in Which it is Contended That Annual Tax Bill Has Increased Out of All Proportion to the Increase in Population

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I have taken the trouble to go into the financial position of the city as thoroughly as it is possible to do, and give the following facts from the printed auditor's reports of the city, which I wish you would be good enough to have appear in your paper.

City's Debts and Liabilities.

Debenture debt on December 31, 1912	$1,463,969.34
Debentures issued during 1913	75,971.42
In addition to this money borrowed and spent during 1913	75,000.00
Liability incurred in expropriating Peterborough Light and Power Co.	600,000.00
Total debts incurred and liabilities contracted to date	$2,214,940.76

To this must be added liabilities pressingly in sight, such as sewage disposal system insisted upon by the Provincial Board of Health, which will probably cost $110,000.00; new bridge across river at Dalhousie Street now before the people for their approval, $76,000.00; additional fire equipment now before the ratepayers for approval, $10,000.00; street paving completion and new lighting system for the whole city; new elevated bridge across Hunter Street, etc.

It is quite apparent that another half million dollars will be added to the city's indebtedness in a very short time.

Past Rate of Increase in Debt.

The city's debts and liabilities at the close of 1912	$2,214,940.76
The city's debt at the beginning of year 1908	916,787.51
Increase in debts and liabilities in six years	$1,298,153.25
Average annual increase in city's debts during this last six years	216,358.54

The city's debts and liabilities have increased two and a quarter times more than they were six years ago.

During same period the population of Peterboro increased from 16,000 to 20,150, thereby showing increase in population during last six years of 4,150; that is to say during last six years our population has increased 26 per cent., and at the same time the city's debts and liabilities have increased 225 per cent., or to put it in another way, the increase in our population of 4,150 during this last six years has meant an increase in the city's debts and liabilities during this same period of $1,298,153.25

City's Assessment.

The assessment for the year 1912 is	$11,297,194.00
The city's assessment for the year 1907 was	7,037,231.00
Showing an increase in the assessment of	$4,259,963.00

during six years, that is to say, the city's assessment has increased 60 per cent. during this last six years, while the population has increased 26 per cent.

Ratepayers' Annual Tax Bill.

The city's taxes for the year 1913 amounts to	$251,375.25
The taxes for the year 1907 were	112,192.92
Showing an increased tax bill during this last six years of	$139,182.33

That is to say, during this last six years the ratepayers' annual tax bill has increased 123 per cent., while the city's population during the same period has only increased 26 per cent.

City's Annual Interest Bill.

The city's annual interest bill for the year 1913 (undebentured)	$65,940.00
The interest bill for the year 1907 was	27,782.86
Increase in amount of interest to be paid by the ratepayers in the last six years	$38,157.14

That is to say, the annual interest charges now paid by the city are 137 per cent. greater than they were six years ago, while during the same period the city's population has only increased 26 per cent.

Rate of Interest Paid.

The city has $368,000.00 borrowed at as low a rate as 3 per cent., 3½ per cent., and 3¾ per cent., but as these old loans are being paid off, the city has to replace them with other bonds bearing interest at the rate of 5 per cent. In some cases the city's bonds are disposed of at a discount which makes the rate still higher. Even if the indebtedness of Peterborough stood still there will be an annual increase in the rate of interest. If the city is compelled by the Peterborough Light and Power Company to carry out the purchase of its property in Peterborough in accordance with the city's agreement and taking expropriation proceedings, then the city would be forced to borrow an additional $700,000.00 to pay for the lighting plant and other outstanding obligations. The city's credit decreases in inverse ratio to its increasing debts and like all other debtors who are going behind, the rate of interest the city has to pay increases with its increasing debts.

Extravagance.

It is idle to say that the present members of the City Council for the past six years have not been extravagant. Their record of increasing the city's debts and liabilities 225 per cent. during this last six years and in increasing the ratepayers' taxes 123 per cent. during this last six years, and in increasing the city's annual interest charges 137 per cent. during this last six years, while our population has only increased 26 per cent., is in itself the strongest condemnation that could be urged against the present City Council and those for five years previous. It is usually difficult to give instances of extravagance because they are covered up and concealed by a compact family of Councillors that mutually admire each other and harmoniously seal in the city vaults the evidence of their joint and several extravagances.

An Instance of Extravagance.

The statement has been made publicly, and not contradicted, that the present down town part of the city has been lit for this last ten years at an average cost of $450.00 per annum by nine lamps placed on nine poles. The present Council have replaced these poles and substituted in their place 100 lights, which cost this city $6,500.00 a year to maintain. This statement has been made publicly and has never been contradicted by any member of the Council. If, therefore, one mile of our down town section costs $6,500.00 a year to light, then what will it cost to light the remaining 65 miles of the city's streets if the ratepayers of Peterborough leave it in the hands of the present Council, who do not know the value of other people's money. Either one of two things will happen—the cost of street light will be excessively high and the annual rate of taxation will increase or else the cost of domestic lighting will have to be increased to pay for the extravagance in street lighting.

Ratepayers, Examine Your Tax Bills.

If any ratepayer desires to verify any of these figures regarding his increased taxation, let him look at the amount of his tax bill for the year 1907, and compare it with his tax bill for the year 1913, and let him ask the question, "WHAT BENEFIT AM I GETTING FOR THIS INCREASE IN MY TAXATION THAT I DID NOT GET IN THE YEAR 1907?"

Is it not about time that the ratepayers of Peterborough in their own interests voted to have new men placed in the Council who are pledged to economize and adopt business methods in our expenditures?—Yours,

A BURDENED TAXPAYER.

Audubon and His Hair.

Audubon, the great naturalist, early in his career wore his hair very long. He wrote in his diary one day: "I wear my hair as long as usual. I believe it does as much for me as my paintings." However, in 1827 his friends succeeded in persuading him to get his hair cut according to the prevailing fashion. On March 19 of that year he wrote in his diary: "This day my hair was sacrificed and the will of God usurped by the wishes of man. As the barber clipped my locks rapidly it reminded me of the horrible times of the French revolution when the same operation was performed upon all the victims murdered by the guillotine. My heart sank low." Further to express his grief, the margin of the page on which this entry was made he painted black about three-quarters of an inch deep all around.

TERROR'S CRY CHANGED TO JOY—KIDS SAVED

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 1.—Rushing through flames and smoke time after time until they had carried over ten people to safety, Patrolmen Michael Driscoll and George Macht, of the Franklin street station, proved themselves heroes in an early morning blaze at No. 112 Dante place to-day.

Ten other persons were awakened by the officers in time to get out without injury.

The fire, caused by an overheated stove, started in the living rooms of Carmello Vattiato, who runs a grocery store in the front part of the building.

The flames were discovered by the patrolmen as they were walking their beat shortly after two o'clock this morning and while Driscoll ran to awaken the inmates of the house, Macht rushed to the nearest box.

The people of the first floor were easily gotten out and then Driscoll with Macht at his heels, fought his way through the thick smoke in the hallway and aroused two families on the second floor.

Several of the older people managed to carry a few of the children to safety, but the patrolmen, making their way through the flames and smoke that grew more intense each trip, brought out nearly ten children.

Vito and Mary Ruscondo, three and five years old, were sleeping in a rear room on the second floor. During the rush to get out they were forgotten by their parents and only when Driscoll asked them if all their family were safe were they found to be missing.

Then with a cry of terror Mrs. Ruscondo attempted to get back into the building, the front part of which was now an inferno, but the deed probably would have cost her life as well as that of the children, was prevented by the officers, and then, risking their own lives, they fought their way up the narrow stairway whose boards were already beginning to smoulder.

DAILY SHORT STORY

IRONCLAD CASTE.

Its Rule Among the Hindus Absolute and Unchangeable.

THE POWER OF THE BRAHMAN

All the Wealth of the World Would Not Enable a Lower Caste Hindu to Wed Into His Family or Touch His Hand—Tyrannical Social Divisions.

Caste distinction in India is a thing difficult for a foreigner to understand. All the racial or religious distinctions which separate European nations from each other and divide them within themselves do not equal the number of classes into which the Hindus are divided by what is known as "caste."

The 200,000,000 Hindus are made up of diverse racial elements and speak about nineteen developed languages and over 100 dialects. They are again divided into over 3,000 castes, most of them with subcastes. One of these castes, the Brahmans, is split up into more than 100 subcastes, of which none will intermarry and few will eat together.

The term "caste" includes so many things that it is difficult to define it. There are, however, two properties essential to a true caste—first, there is no entry except by birth; second, marriage outside the caste is absolutely forbidden. To preserve the purity and maintain the exclusiveness of the society many minute rules of conduct, many restrictions on food and many ceremonial observances are imposed on the members and enforced by penalties which cannot be evaded, against which there is no appeal and which in extreme cases follow the offender beyond the grave.

But that is not all. The relations of castes to each other are as much a matter of religious observance as the rules for their internal regulation. The Brahmans are the highest admittedly and undoubtedly superior to all the rest. After them come those who are acknowledged to be twice born. The less honored follow in a graduated descent until the untouchable and unspeakable are reached at the lowest depth.

It may be urged that the separation between the Brahman and, let us say, the Kurmi market gardener is no wider than that between the peer of the United Kingdom and the coal miner. There is this essential difference that it is impossible for an Indian to change his caste. The coal miner may be elected to parliament, may become a cabinet minister and if he can make money enough may marry his son to a duke's daughter.

The Kurmi must remain a Kurmi. All the wealth of Croesus will not enable him to make an alliance with a Brahman family or to touch a Brahman's head. The members of a caste may and in some cases do raise themselves in the sight of other castes by adopting more elaborate ceremonies and more scrupulous observances.

A half civilized Gond, for example, may find himself brought into contact with Hindus as the plow encroaches on the forest. He tries to raise his position and add to his self respect by adopting the exclusiveness of his Hindu neighbors. He will even outdo them if he can, and if the Hindu is scrupulous about his food the convert will wash the very wood with which his dinner is cooked.

No endeavors of this kind, however, will avail to lessen by a hair's breadth the distance between him and the caste Hindu or even to induce the Hindu barber to look upon him as a client whose chin he may shave and whose toe nails he may pare without degradation.

Another point connected with caste which has a very practical bearing and must be taken into account is the power of coercion which it gives to the brotherhood. If a man is excommunicated by his caste fellows nobody in the caste will marry him or will accept water from his hands or will eat with him.

If he is married his wife will not touch him or speak to him. He is dead to his family. The priest will not perform ceremonies for him. The village barber will not shave him, and the washerwoman will not wash his clothes. These are the methods of bringing pressure on the man. The strictest boycott which Irishmen have invented is mild compared to the final sentence of a caste panchayat.

A system like this is a stern fact which has to be faced. There is not a police case or a civil case or a trial at the sessions, there is hardly an appointment to an office in India of whatever degree, in which the matter of caste has not to be considered. It forces itself into every assessment of land revenue, into every adjudication of rent. It affects the administration of justice, the proceedings of municipal and district councils.

The influence and power of the Brahmans and the idea that he is above the law and is not to be punished as other people are still alive, although a century of British justice has done something toward eradicating them. On the other hand, the suggestion that a man of a lower caste might rise to an equality or nearer to an equality with members of a caste above him is unthinkable. Where the low caste men are, there they must remain. If they behave themselves it will be made up to them in a future existence.—London Spectator.

Politeness is a locksmith and opens many difficult doors.

MARITIME EXPRESSIONS.

Used In a Metaphorical Sense They Are Quite Common.

Maritime expressions used metaphorically are, in fact, very common. We say a couple are "spliced," a young man is the "mainstay" of his family, an intruder "puts his oar in," a man is "hard up," sometimes "taken aback" or has "the wind taken out of his sails," a toper is "stewed," a leader "spins a yarn," sometimes "tries the other tack," and a ruler "steers the ship of state" through troublesome times.

This last metaphor is extremely ancient, by the way. Horace refers to Rome as a ship at sea, and Plutarch says the Delphic oracle referred to Athens in the same way. A Tamil saying embodies a like metaphor, "The soul is the ship, reason is the helm, the oars are the soul's thoughts, and truth is the port." An old collection of English proverbs contains this one: "The tongue is the rudder of our ship." A Malay maxim says, "The boat which is swamped at sea may be bailed out, but the shipwreck of the affections is final."

Aristophanes, Plautus and others use an expression which comes down to us as an English saw, "To row one way and look another." An old English proverb (814) was, "It is not good to have an oar in every one's boat."

WHERE THE WHEAT GOES

ELABORATE MACHINERY THAT RECEIVES IT AT LONDON.

Strange Barge Interviews the Wheat Laden Vessels on Their Arrival and by Means of Ingenious Devices Relieves Them of Their Burden—All the Old System of Lightening Is Done Away With.

Grain flows in a vast stream from Canada to London.

How is it handled on its arrival there?

Five years ago there was towed across the Thames from Millwall to the Surrey Commercial Docks a curious vessel, rather larger than a Thames sailing-barge; the hull low in the water, a great square iron tank at both ends; above her iron decks were no masts and spars, neither had she at all the appearance of an ordinary steamship. But instead two enormous towers and three funnels or chimneys reared themselves high into the air.

All other craft drew aside, as slowly and making heavy weather of the running tide, this strangest of all vessels passed from bank to bank and made its first and only voyage in safety.

This was the new pneumatic elevator for grain built by the East Ferry Engineering Works. Arrived in the Surrey Docks, she caused a feeling almost of consternation and alarm, so peculiar was her appearance.

Captains of liners, masters of sailing ships, seamen who had visited every clime—none in any port had seen a vessel such as this, even the Cockney wit for once was silenced. Foreign sailors were given to understand this was the latest torpedo-boat, for, as the engineer said, "You can see all the tubes!"

But very soon speculations were set at rest, as the leviathan was towed alongside one of the grain steamers in dock. Somewhere from the upper part of each tower four six-inch tubes of metal or flexible hose-pipes were let down into the grain in the steamer's hold, barges were brought up to each side of the elevator at the base of each tower [illegible]

Holiday Announcement

WE take pleasure in once more presenting to you our Annual Announcement in connection with the Holiday Trade, and would respectfully call your attention to the fact that we have secured from the leading markets of the world an up-to-date stock of holiday goods, suitable for Christmas and New Year presents, which we are selling at a bargain. This year we are better prepared than ever to cater to the wants of the public.

In both quality and prices, we defy competition. Our expenses are comparatively insignificant as compared with the other larger stores in the city, and the fact that we have not got to look to the profits from our bookstore trade to carry us through, but have a large printing and book manufacturing business as well, in addition to our rapidly expanding newspaper business.

We have made expensive preparations for the Holiday Trade, and invite the public to call and inspect our stock and get our prices before purchasing elsewhere.

Calendars, Handy Booklets, Christmas and Text Cards

We have in Calendars, Booklets, Christmas and Text Cards a stock of the latest designs, and a very large assortment to choose from. Special discounts to parties taking a number.

Fancy Goods

In Fancy Goods, as in every other line, our stock is up-to-date. We can supply you with presents for young and old, rich and poor, wives, husbands and sweethearts. We only give a mere hint here of the articles with which our shelves are laden:—Brush and Comb Setts, Manicure Setts, Writing Desks, Collar and Cuff Boxes, Glove and Handkerchief Boxes, Ladies' and Gentlemen's Travelling Companions, Jewel Cases, Photo Boxes, Albums, etc., etc. These goods are all new, and made in designs and of material not shown before.

Books for All

We ask an inspection of our stock and prices. We aim to give our customers the best possible value for the money. Dainty Gift Books, Padded Poems, and an endless variety of Cloth and Leather Bound Works. Also Bibles, Hymnals, Children's Illustrated Books, etc.

Games for Young and Old

Our stock in Games is very complete, including Fishpond, Flips, Game of India, Halma, The Century Ride, Lost Heir, Authors, Checkers, Dominoes, Nations, Lotto and all the popular 10 cent games.

New Souvenir Novelties and Small Wares

The following are but a few of the many very desirable articles suitable for Yuletide remembrances: Purses, Card Cases, Burnt Leather Blotters, Pen Wipers and Book Markers: Tie, Crumb, Pin and Ash Trays, Ink Wells, Bon-bon Dishes, Japanese Cups and Saucers, Bread and Butter Plates, Rose Bowls, Vases, Biscuit Jars, all kinds of bric-a-brac, etc.

For Dolls We Lead—Others Follow

We propose to lead this season in the Doll Trade, and are showing Dolls at prices that defy competition. Handsome Kid Dolls, Dressed Dolls in all sizes, Negro and Composition Dolls, Wax and China Dolls, Rubber Dolls and Dolls that may be used for Fancy Pin Holders. Dolls from 15c up.

Please Remember

1.—That The Times Bookstore has everything marked close to cost.

2.—We can sell cheaper than any other house. The reason we can afford to do so is, because our expenses are practically nil compared with other concerns.

3.—We are large manufacturers of stationery supplies and books, employing about 60 persons, so that in these lines we have goods at first cost.

4.—We sell to the wholesale trade, who again sell to the bookstores and stationers throughout the country, so that by purchasing direct from us you save, in many cases, the profits of two "middle men."

5.—The Times Bookstore is confident that it can give you satisfaction, and would urge an early inspection of our stock before the rush begins. You only have to select what you want, and have the goods put aside for delivery when required.

Soliciting the favor of your esteemed patronage, and wishing you the compliments of the season, we remain,

Very respectfully yours,

MENTAL DISCORD.

An Uncompromising Enemy to Happiness and to Health.

It is a law that every state of mind, whether good or bad, affects every cell in the system and is outpictured in the body, says Orison Swett Marden in Success Magazine. We are thus the arbiters of our fate through our thoughts, emotions and passions.

The time will come when we shall know how to refresh ourselves by mental chemistry—that is, by holding in our minds the antidotes of the things that have wearied us or vexed us, by holding the mental attitude which will neutralize the thought enemies that have thrown our bodies into confusion.

There is nothing so deadly to happiness as mental discord. It paralyzes the thinking ability and destroys the power of concentration and effectiveness.

All disease and sickness of whatever kind are the outpicturing of some form of discord. If the mind is kept as happy as possible it is difficult for discord to get a foothold in the body. A happy mind is the best possible health producer, disease killer and discord destroyer.

For centuries man's happiness was looked upon by many unthinking people as a condition largely beyond his control. They seemed to think that it depended mostly upon the temperament one happened to develop and that there were other things of so much more importance that we should not consider it too seriously or take precious time to cultivate it directly.

We are beginning to find, however, that even as an economical investment it pays immensely to make a business of being happy and being just as good to ourselves as possible, although not in a selfish way. We could not be good to ourselves in the higher sense by being selfish.

A Hero of the Charity Bazaar Fire.

Jean Georges, a Parisian cab driver who received the Legion of Honor medal for his heroism at the charity bazaar fire on May 15, 1897, when he saved the lives of fifteen women, lost his life by drowning recently near Bordeaux. For some years after the exploit he and his carriage were in constant demand in the boulevards of Paris, especially by English and American tourists, but the advent of the automobile ultimately forced him out. He then came to this country to seek his fortune, but failed utterly, his return home being paid for him by private subscription. Georges took up his old trade in Bordeaux after that and became lost to sight until his tragic death, which was purely accidental.

Subsidized Theaters.

In Germany there are twenty subsidized court theaters and nearly a hundred theaters subsidized by municipalities. In many cases the theater is granted to its director rent free; in others a subsidy is also given. In some cases the cost of the orchestra, the scenery, costumes and the heating and lighting is borne by the town. There is great variety in method and in degree, but the result is that throughout Germany the art of the drama is officially recognized, and the theater is regarded as an essential factor in the town's life, resulting in splendid theaters giving varied classical and modern plays throughout the German empire.—Consular Reports.

His Inspiration.

"Isn't inspiration a queer thing?"

"I suppose so. What about it?"

"Why, a few weeks ago I had a red-hot squabble with my wife over a dressmaker's bill, and when I came down to the office I was mad enough to chew spikes. Then I sat down at my desk and wrote a little poem on 'Help the Erring Brother with a Single Kindly Word!' And, say, those verses, born of bitterness and nourished by anger, have been copied in the leading newspapers all over the country! How's that?"

"Fine. Why don't you improve on the idea?"

"How?"

"Why, get mad enough to beat up your wife, set fire to the house, shoot a policeman—and then write an epic that will go thundering down the ages."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A Picture of Eternity.

The negro preacher is noted for his enthusiasm and his picturesque, almost poetic, way of expressing things. In "Life in Old Virginia" J. J. McDonald tells about a colored minister who was conducting a revival without much success. At last, however, he awakened his congregation by asking:

"Does yo' know what eternity is? Well, I tell yo'.

"If one of dem li'l sparrows what yo' see round yo' garden bushes was to dip his bill in de 'Lantic ocean an' take one hop a day an' hop 'cross de country an' put dat drop of water into de 'Cific ocean an' den he hop back to de 'Lantic ocean—jes' one hop a day—an' if he keep dat hoppin' up twell de 'Lantic ocean was dry as a bone, it wouldn't be break o' day in eternity."

"Dat, now," said one of the brethren, "yo' see for yo'se'f how long eternity is."

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS.

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at the office of any Local Agent of Dominion Lands (but not sub-agency), on certain conditions.

Duties.—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres on certain conditions. A habitable house is required in every case, except when residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3 per acre. Duties—Six months residence in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and 50 acres extra cultivation. The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land after report by Homestead Inspector on application for patent.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. [illegible]

PERSISTENT BEGGARS.

The More Egyptian Mendicants Get the More They Demand.

In Egypt one should never give baksheesh except for actual services rendered. Resist calmly but firmly every attempt at extortion. Never pay till the stipulated service is finished; then, after you have paid a little more than the bargain called for, turn a deaf ear to the protestations and entreaties that always follow. Bear in mind that the more baksheesh you give the more clamorous becomes the applicant. Real thanks and gratitude must not be expected for gifts.

A friend of mine once broke one of these rules just to see what would happen. As we passed through a little mud village twenty miles from Cairo he gave a sturdy beggar a millieme (half a cent). This beggar, accompanied by others, followed us to the edge of the village, asking for more. My friend then gave him a piaster (5 cents).

They followed us a hundred yards or so and were more persistent than before. When they showed a disposition to go back he gave them 5 piasters. They followed us half a mile and became very clamorous. I was afraid we should get into trouble and wanted him to stop it, but when they began to lag he gave them 20 piasters.

They followed us two miles, and the experiment might have ended seriously had we not met a company of travelers with a dragoman, who sent the beggars about their business. This may help you to understand Egyptian character.—Christian Herald.

LAPLAND BABIES.

For Their First Few Months They Live in Wicker Baskets.

Little Laplanders spend the first few months of their existence in baskets of wickerwork provided at the top with a conical framework too close for the baby to fall through and yet giving the infant plenty of light and air.

Before commencing her work for the day the Lapp mother places her child in the basket and hangs it on the limb of some nearby tree, occupation being found for the little one by stringing toys under a cord passed across the top of the basket.

Thus provided the child spends the entire day in the open and yet at the same time is guarded from the troubles and dangers of outdoor child life in other countries.

The basket idea curiously parallels the Indian idea of strapping the papoose into a carrying case, but the Lapp baby has the advantage over its Indian fellow in that its limbs are unconfined and a certain amount of liberty of movement is afforded.

The child is carried from place to place in the same basket, the cord by which it is attached to a tree being slung over the shoulder.

POET OF MANY VERSES.

An Anecdote of Pellegrin, an Eighteenth Century Bard.

The impecunious French poets of the middle eighteenth century used to congregate at the cafes, where sometimes they would pick up customers. One of the worst and at the same time the most facile of the bards was Pellegrin, of whom a characteristic story is told in "An Eighteenth Century Marquise." One day a newspaper entered the cafe and began complaining that he was going to be married and had no epithalamium for his wedding. Pellegrin hastened to offer one of his own compositions. A deal was soon arranged, and the price agreed upon was 10 sous a verse. The poet disappeared. The bridegroom was presently accosted by a stranger, who began a conversation on various subjects and suddenly said:

"By the by, my friend, what price are you paying Pellegrin?"

"Twenty sous a verse."

"Oh!"

"Is that too dear?"

"Why—decidedly—not if you fixed the length of the poem."

"I never thought of doing that."

"When is he to bring your epithalamium?"

"Tomorrow morning."

"Tomorrow morning!" cried the stranger. "Why, you must be rolling in money!"

"What do you mean?"

"That you will have to pay for at least a thousand verses."

"Oh, what a fool!" exclaimed the bridegroom and rushed off to find Pellegrin in his attic. [illegible]

GERONIMO IN ACTION.

The Indian Chief's Story of How He Whipped the Mexicans.

About noon we began to hear them speaking my name with curses. In the afternoon the general came on the field, and the fighting became more furious. I gave orders to my warriors to try to kill all the Mexican officers. About 3 o'clock the general called all the officers together at the right side of the field. The place where they assembled was not very far from the main stream, and a little ditch ran out close to where the officers stood. Cautiously I crawled out this ditch very close to where the council was being held.

The general was an old warrior. The wind was blowing in my direction, so that I could hear all he said, and I understood most of it. This is about what he told them: "Officers, yonder in those ditches are the red devil Geronimo and his hated band. This must be their last day. Ride on them from both sides of the ditches. Kill men, women and children. Take no prisoners. Dead Indians are what we want. Do not spare your own men; exterminate this band at any cost. I will post the wounded to shoot all deserters. Go back to your companies and advance."

Just as the command to go forward was given I took deliberate aim at the general, and he fell. In an instant the ground around me was riddled with bullets, but I was untouched. The Apaches had seen. From all along the ditches arose the fierce warcry of my people. The columns wavered an instant and then swept on. They did not retreat until our fire had destroyed the front ranks. After this their fighting was not so fierce, yet they continued to rally and readvance until dark. They also continued to speak my name with threats and curses. That night before the firing had ceased a dozen Indians had crawled out of the ditches and set fire to the long prairie grass behind the Mexican troops. During the confusion that followed we escaped to the mountains.—From "Geronimo's Story of His Life," by S. M. Barrett.

CHAMPAGNE BARRELS.

Bismarck Demanded 5,000 From France, but Got Only Five.

Germany's governmental policy is to encourage the exports of brain, labor, machine, air and water. There is nothing in sugar, in alcohol, but carbon, gathered from the air, but hydrogen and oxygen, gathered from the rainwater, transformed by the sun into beet plants, grown in fields, tilled and winded by hand, the beet pulp being transformed by other hands and skilled knowledge into sugar and alcohol.

Denmark and Holland export butter, which takes nothing from the soil. The French import Asiatic silk, weave it at Lyons and export the finished product. They export wine by analysis 87 per cent water, 10 per cent alcohol and 0.04 per cent aroma and bouquet. Water and alcohol take nothing from the soil, but the aroma makes the wine worth from $10 a pound down.

In the peace negotiations between Bismarck and the French in 1871 it was not the money indemnity, it was not the loss of territory, that prolonged negotiations. Bismarck bethought himself to demand 5,000 empty old champagne barrels impregnated with the aroma, the bouquet producing ferment, and this the French refused. They had consented to pay $1,000,000,000; they broken heartedly gave up Alsace and Lorraine, but the bouquet of their priceless wines Bismarck should not have, and in the end they compromised on five barrels.

The French were instinctively governed by supernal common sense.—Harrington Emerson in Engineering.

The Kaiser's New Opera.

Elaborate preparations are being made, according to the Hamburger Nachrichten, for the production at Berlin "early next spring" of an operetta entitled "Der Liebe [illegible]," for which "the best talent in Europe has been engaged." The names of the composer and librettist are not given, but the knowing ones say that the Crown Prince Frederick William composed the score and that the libretto was written by the emperor. The setting will cost about 1,000,000 marks, but this sum will not come out of the imperial purse, as did the stage expenses for "Sardanapalus," but will be privately contributed.

To Prevent Railway Collisions.

A successful demonstration has been made at Sydney, Australia, of a device for preventing railway collisions. An engine in entering an already occupied section automatically whistles and if the engine driver fails to [illegible] automatically applies the brakes. The invention [illegible] prevents accidents between trains going either in the same or in opposite directions and whether on single or on double lines. The inventor claims that the controller also deals with deficiencies at points or current and completely eliminates the human factor from accidents.

If Breathing is Difficult, If Nostrils are Plugged, You Have Catarrh

At Last a Remedy That Already Has Permanently Cured Thousands.

Perhaps you haven't heard of the new remedy—it's so pleasant to use — fills the nose, throat and lungs with a healing balsamic vapor like the air of the pine woods. It's really a wonderful remedy—at times that [illegible] antiseptic only found in the Blue Gum tree of Australia.

The name of this grand specific is Catarrhozone, and you can't find its equal on earth for coughs, colds, catarrh or throat trouble. You see it's not longer necessary to drug the stomach—that spoils digestion—just simply inhale the balsamic essences of Catarrhozone, which are so rich in healing that they drive out every trace of Catarrh in no time.

"I look upon Catarrhozone as the most valuable medical discovery of recent years," writes R. V. Potter, of Prince Albert. "As a long sufferer from nasal and throat catarrh I was obliged to take considerable medicine, and, although it helped me, my digestion was always disturbed and the catarrh didn't go away. With Catarrhozone it was different. It cleaned my nose and throat of all phlegm and discharges, enabled me to breathe freely, relieved a stuffy feeling in my nose and frontal headaches. To-day I am entirely free from catarrh, and I use my Catarrhozone Inhaler a little every day in order to prevent the disease from returning."

With Catarrhozone experimenting ends. A permanent curative action begins. Lasting relief from Catarrh results. The large size costs $1.00, last two months and is guaranteed. Small size 50c.; sample size 25c. All storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Found His Whisky in Cutter

At yesterday's police court Thomas Tucker, a blacklister, pleaded guilty to having been drunk. He was fined $10 to be paid forthwith. When asked, under oath, where he got his liquor, the defendant said he found a bottle of whisky in the bottom of a cutter. The partly filled flask was produced in court.

John Was Penitent.

At yesterday's police court, John Donohue was charged with having been drunk. John, whose locks have been silvered by many a passing year was let go on suspended sentence. John remarked, when asked by the magistrate, "is not this a poor way to start the new year for a man so near heaven or the other place." "Yes Sir, it certainly is."

New Year's Surprise Party

On New Year's night a very successful surprise party was held at the residence of Mrs. B. Lee, 213 Charlotte street. Over forty guests gathered and enjoyed a very pleasant evening with dancing, music and refreshments. The party, which came as a complete surprise to the hostess, was organized by Miss Rebecca Dewart of the Quaker Oats Co. staff.

Charged With Serious Crime

At the police court yesterday John Burns, represented by Mr. Gordon, was charged with indecently assaulting Lizzie Kelly. The prisoner was remanded for a week and was granted bail in the sum of $500 cash or two sureties of $1000.

It is said that the Kelly girl was driven out in a livery rig to an adjoining township, assaulted and left on the roadside where she was found in an unconscious condition by a passing farmer.

New Year's Drunks.

At the police court yesterday a Winnipeg man pleaded guilty to having driven a horse whilst drunk, i.e., the man, not the horse. He was assessed $5.75. Jas. Hegle pleaded not guilty to having been drunk. P. C. Hayward said he arrested the defendant who was drunk, after telling the latter twice to go home.—$5.75.

Louis Le Bar was called thric but did not show up. Louis is said to have celebrated New Year's too freely. He will appear this morning.

Water Destroyed Books

Mr. R. J. Sturgeon, the Charlotte street plumber, sustained a heavy loss by water on New Year's morning. It seems that a water pipe upstairs, that had been installed previous to Mr. Sturgeon's occupancy of the house, burst early in the morning. The leak was only discovered as the family arose at about 8 o'clock. The escaping water had seeped thru the floor and falling into the parlor destroyed forty or fifty expensively-bound books, including a complete set of Shakespeare's works.

ARMY HERE 30 YEARS AGO

The Times of January 2nd, 1884, or thirty years ago yesterday says "The Salvation Army considered Christmas an extra day. They held meetings several times and marched to the market square with drums and fifes and banners flying. The army continues to increase. We learn that a local barracks is being considered and plans are now being considered by the officers. It is to be erected after the manner of an English soldiers' barracks.

A Clever Piece of Driving.

On New Year's night as Mr. Ernie Lawrence, the well known hack-driver was driving a wedding party to the C.P.R. station, one of the horses took fright at a street car. The team took their bits in their teeth and ran away south on George street. The pole of the hack broke, and, as usual in such cases, the conveyance threatened to run into the heels of the steeds. Mr. Lawrence, however, kept his head and steered his team into Hunter street where he stopped them and transferred the happy couple to another hack, from which they caught their train and entered into a new life of connubial bliss.

Lindsay Man Blamed.

Lindsay Warder: Mr. John Lynch, of Hogan's Island, Ops, was in town yesterday looking up a canoe which was stolen from the west shore of the Scugog river near Cross Creek last Sunday, Dec. 28. Mr. Lynch accuses one or more of the party of Lindsay skaters who were up the river on that day of the offence and he is quite positive that the canoe was taken towards Lindsay as he traced marks made by the boat from where it was stolen to the Ops swing bridge. At this point the purloiners of the craft must have taken to the roadway as their tracks disappeared and were lost sight of.

Successful Bal Poudre.

The third annual charity bal poudre, under the auspices of the King's Daughters, in the Conservatory of Music Hall, was most successful. Mr. G. K. Rankham, the honorary secretary of the affair, is to be congratulated upon the success of the event. The stewards were: Messrs. W. O. Bridger, G. R. Cameron, A. F. Field, C. E. [illegible], F. D. To The Electors East Ward

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,—

I am again a candidate for alderman in No. 5 Ward, and respectfully solicit your support on my record in Council.

I have served you for the past three years as alderman, and in that time I have gained a knowledge of city affairs, city finances and the various matters which come before the Council, which fits me to deal with them in a thorough and intelligent manner.

I have given close attention to my duties and have carefully looked after the interests of the East Ward, in particular and the city as a whole.

I trust that my services in the past meet with your approval, and if so I ask your hearty support.

Wishing you the compliments of the season.

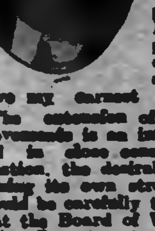
ALD. DUFFUS STATES HIS PLATFORM

To the Electors of the West Ward:

Ladies and Gentlemen,—There are several subjects which would receive the especial attention of the City Council during 1914, in addition to firm efforts to keep the general expenditure down to the lowest figure consistent with good service. To these subjects, if you honour me with re-election, I will give closest attention.



It is in the highest degree in the interest of the people that the Hydro - Electric project should be carried through, and this will receive my earnest support.

The extension of permanent improvements is an important subject, and in close connection with this question, the desirability of the city owning its own street paving plant should be carefully taken up, in order that the Board of Works and Engineering Departments may do as much of this work as is in the best interests of the city, and at such time as is most suitable in order that we may have all the work done by our own ratepayers.

The extension of sewers and sidewalks, and the subsequent grading and water-tabling of same on such streets as may be requested by the ratepayers living thereon.

A more adequate system of surface drainage, in order to improve the general appearance and sanitary condition of our streets.

I have already asked for a report from the Engineering Department on the advisability of adopting civic conduits, in order that all wires may be placed therein, thus eliminating the undesirable necessity of having poles placed in front of the people's property. Space in these conduits to be rented to the different companies at such charges as will pay the cost and maintenance of same. If a favorable report is received this matter will have my further attention.

A better and more extensive system of street lighting and police protection for the outlying districts will receive my attention, in the interest of the general and moral welfare of the city.

I will give all the time and assistance necessary to endeavoring to secure further new industries, of such character and upon such terms as will be in the best interests of the city.

Owing to the orders of the Provincial Board of Health, sewage disposal works will have to be constructed, and my object will be to have this done in the most economical and efficient manner.

Every question that will come before the Council will receive my best attention with a view to serve the best interests of the ratepayers, and my experience in the Council will, I believe be of advantage in their consideration.

Upon these grounds I solicit your support for re-election.

Yours most respectfully,

JOS. J. DUFFUS.

J. J. HARTLEY

The Workingman's Candidate For

MAYOR

Unanimously Endorsed by the Trades & Labor Council

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY OF PETERBOROUGH:

Ladies and Gentlemen:—At the earnest request of a large number of the ratepayers I have consented to be a candidate for the position of Mayor for the year 1914.

Being born and having lived all my life in Peterborough, and my whole life's savings being invested in Peterborough, I naturally have a deep interest in the welfare and prosperity of the City.

Should I be elected I promise you that I will guard to the very best of my ability, the interests of the ratepayers and will oppose all unnecessary expenditure. I will do my utmost to keep down the ever increasing rate of taxation consistent with needs of a growing City.

I may say that I am in favor of Municipal Ownership, and am in favor of having all city work done by our own people instead of bringing in outsiders to do it.

I will endeavour to see that the ratepayers get value for every dollar that is expended.

I have had considerable experience in municipal matters, having served ten years in the Council and fourteen years on the Board of Education, being Chairman of that Board for two years, I was also Chairman of the Board of Health for several years, so that you will see that I am not without a fair share of experience.

Should you do me the honor to elect me as Mayor of our City I will do my best to serve you to the extent of my ability.

Yours respectfully,

MAYOR BRADBURN CHARACTERIZES LATE ATTACK AS MOST UNFAIR

"A Burdened Ratepayer" Does Not State the Fact in His Letter to the Press

The Times is in receipt of the following letter from Mayor Bradburn, for publication:

I have seen in the local papers a letter from one who signs himself a "Burdened Ratepayer" in which he savagely and most unfairly attacked the members of the City Council for the past six years.

He magnifies the debt of the city, and the way he does it is cool. He is not satisfied with taking the amount of the outstanding liabilities, but assumes that $800,000 for the Peterborough Light and Power Company and a number of other large items will be added, and then counts them as if they were already added. He has great confidence in the Power Trust as well as a liking for it, although he has little or no confidence in the Council or City, and assumes that everything the Trust says must be true and be carried out. On such assumptions as he has made, as to what will or may be done, the debt could be easily stated at any figure he pleases.

He takes 1907 as a starting point. Very well. The items in the increase of the debt, including work done for which debentures are not yet issued, since the close of the year 1907 are as follows:

Waterworks	$200,000.00
Schools	161,923.24
Sewers	90,583.60
Concrete Walks	117,956.65
Bridges	42,000.00
Isolation Hospital	12,500.00
Protestant Home	10,000.00
Street Paving	22,382.21
Incinerator	10,000.00
Industries	55,000.00
Parks	3,000.00
Street Extensions	21,000.00
	$776,795.19

Have these not all been expenditures for the benefit of the ratepayers? Some might question the expenditures for industries, but these were all voted upon by the people and carried by very large majorities, so that very few will find fault.

Of the increase in debt given above the $200,000 for waterworks is carried by the business of that department, both as to interest and sinking fund and it is "no burden" to the ratepayer. $12,000 of the amount expended under the head of Industries will be returned, as it was a loan. These two items should be deducted to make a fair statement, and the result shows that the writer overstated the percent of increase in the debt by 125 per cent.

Another misstatement is that as the debentures issued at three, three and one half and three and three quarters per cent. are being paid off, the city has to replace them with bonds bearing five per cent. All these debentures are taken care of by the sinking fund and will not have to be replaced but will be paid off as they mature. To give the impression that there is not a proper sinking fund to meet these debentures is a most unfair attack upon the standing and the credit of the city.

"The city's credit decreases in inverse ratio to its increasing debts" says this writer. Suppose we take him at his word, and compare the standing of Peterborough's credit with that of other cities? This week a Toronto brokerage house advertised Peterborough's debentures to net the purchaser five per cent., and in the same advertisement offered debentures of Belleville and other cities to net the purchaser five and one-quarter per cent and over. These men of the money markets understand finance, and they rate Peterborough's credit high, in spite of the knock of irresponsible critics.

But a debt to provide for an investment that is revenue producing does not injure credit. The purchase and improvement of the waterworks system increased the city's debt, but the revenue from the waterworks pays both interest and the sinking fund, and its possession, notwithstanding the increase in the debt, improves the credit of the city.

In the same way the Hydro-Electric debt will be carried by the Hydro-Electric business, as to interest and sinking fund, and will improve the credit of the city as well as giving cheap light and power.

In making an estimate of the interest paid by the city, this writer includes, as he does in the debt, the interest paid on the debentures issued to pay for and improve the waterworks and which is paid by the waterworks business.

This "ratepayer" also says: "It is usually difficult to give instances of extravagance because they are covered up and concealed by a compact family of Councillors that mutually admire each other and hermetically seal in the city vaults the evidences of their joint and several extravagances."

There is only one fitting way to characterize that statement; it is a malicious falsehood, born of the malice and meanness of the person who wrote it. Every document is open to any ratepayer and always has been.

What spite this person, who in a cowardly manner hides behind a nom de plume, has against myself and Mr. W. G. Morrow and Mr. H. Bush and others who have served in the city's Council in the past six years, I do not know certainly, but I believe the attitude of the Council in regard to Hydro-Electric Power is at the bottom of his malicious work.

Yours truly,
W. H. BRADBURN,
Mayor.

Hon. Dr. Pugsley Ill

A telegram from high sources in Ottawa declared that Hon. Mr. Pugsley was dangerously ill at his home in St. John, N.B.

Wire troubles in the eastern provinces, caused by severe winter storms, made it impossible to get confirmation from the eastern city.

ALDERMAN DUFFUS SHOULD BE ELECTED

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I am glad to note that Ald. Duffus continues to be such an ardent supporter of the Hydro-Electric system, and that one of the planks in his platform is that this important matter will have his earnest support towards a speedy completion.

On the other hand, it is a positive fact that Mr. Worth of the Bonner-Worth Company, Limited, journeyed to Toronto last spring together with the other sympathizers of our local power companies, who opposed before the Private Bills Committee, the granting of the Private act which the city got allowing them to expropriate the Peterborough Light & Power Company's plant, and therefore to block and injure the scheme outlined by the Hon. Adam Beck, which the ratepayers of Peterborough endorsed so highly at the polls last January.

Ald. Duffus is doing good work in the West Ward. If it had not been for his support there would not have been areas restricted from the building of stores, livery stables, boarding stables, etc., which has made this section worth thousands of dollars more as a residential centre. He has always been a very active member of the city council, and it will need just such a man as he to give the West Ward its fair share of attention and assist in solving the important questions which will come before the Council of 1914.

Yours truly,
West Ward.

COMMISSIONER REES FAST RECOVERING

The members and friends of the Salvation Army will be pleased to learn that Commissioner D. M. Rees, head of the Salvation Army in Canada, has made a most marvelous recovery from the serious illness which befell him about ten weeks ago. Since then his many personal friends, the members, as well as the admirers of the organization he represents, have watched his progress with eager and anxious concern. Many churches throughout the Dominion united with the Salvation Army in offering special prayer for his recovery. They will now be glad to learn that the Commissioner is able to leave his room and acting upon the advice of his physicians, will take further treatment at a sanitarium.

Messages of sympathy have reached Commissioner Rees and his family from all parts of Canada, including all classes of people. For these, they desire herewith to convey their sincere appreciation and gratitude.

A GOOD CLEAN RECORD

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—In the evening papers Saturday, a letter appeared signed "Nuff Sed," blaming Ald. Duffus because a sewer had not been built on McDonnel street, where an outbreak of disease occurred. But I have heard that a number of people in that locality claimed that the dye from the Bonner-Worth factory running into the creek, together with a bad spring near Jackson Park, from which water had been used for drinking.

The curb on Gilmour or any other streets have to be built by the people and not the Council.

As for conduits on George street, where the pavement has been laid, it is a well known fact that Ald. Duffus together with Ald. Green and Anderson were three men who fought and hung out to the last to have all wires placed underground and have no poles placed in the back yards.

Therefore Ald. Duffus is not to blame for any of these three arguments against him, and if this is all that can be raked up against him after four years in the City Council, he has a pretty clean record.

Yours,
Citizen.

MR. WORTH REFUTES UNTRUE STATEMENT

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—Allow me to refute a few statements made by a correspondent in the evening newspapers of Saturday, signing himself "West Ward."

Firstly, he says that Mr. Worth, of the Bonner-Worth Co., last summer went with a deputation to Toronto to oppose the Hydro-Electric. He leaves it to the electors to believe that I am the Mr. Worth referred to, whereas it was my brother Mr. E. Worth.

If that deputation was supposed to oppose Hydro-Electric, it is more than was known at the time by most of the gentlemen. My brother, along with most of the others, as a big power user, was interested in seeing in what shape the bill would get through the committee. That some on the spur of the moment got up and mentioned some facts derogatory to the bill, does not commit the whole.

I do not exactly admire the courtesy of the writer in waiting with his letter until the eve of election, and thereby hindering me from answering him in the evening papers also. An unknown stab in that manner will no doubt be taken at its proper value.

Yours respectfully,
Jas. W. Worth.

SMUGGLE "SECRET" SOUL MATE AWAY

Monticello Authorities Start Miss Branes on Way to New Oblivion

Monticello, N.Y., Jan. 3.—Adelaide M. Branes has gone from Monticello, where she lived so long in a secret room in the office of the late Melville H. Couch. She was smuggled out of the jail early this morning, taken by a liveryman to a railroad station and started on her way to Liberty, whence she probably went on up state. It is supposed here that she is in communication with her half-brother, Herbert O. Branes, postmaster at Hartwick.

The unfriendly attitude of the villagers has made it impossible for Miss Branes to dispose of her two mortgages, amounting to $650, so when she went this morning she took the mortgages with her. She left assuring the sheriff that she would go to the almshouse before she would accept any of the various tempting theatrical offers made to her.

KAISER, KINGS AND PRINCES MUST HELP RAISE HEAVY WAR TAX

Two Hundred and Fifty Millions for War Lord's Military Establishment Heavy New Year's Burden on German People

Berlin, Jan. 5.—Every man, woman and child in Germany with an income of more than $250 or a fortune in excess of $2500 is deeply engrossed this new year in brooding over the new army taxes which are now in effect. Although the tax affects the middle class and others of modest means only slightly and gives them three years in which to pay, there was never a more unpopular burden imposed upon the people of the fatherland.

The sum of $250,000,000 must be raised for the increase of the Kaiser's military establishment, and declarations must be turned in not later than Jan. 20. High hopes are expressed by the treasury department that more taxpayers than ever before will tell the truth on this occasion. A general amnesty has been extended upon all persons who have, [illegible], unconsciously or otherwise, cheated the imperial exchequer.

The "contribution to defence," which is the sugar-coated title of the new tax, is no respecter of persons. The Kaiser, kings and princes must pay their full quota. Royalty has hitherto been exempt from taxation in Germany. The army tax law does not specifically assess them, but the government gave an informal pledge to the country that the ruling sovereigns would pay the same proportion as the humblest subject.

German economic authorities say the Kaiser's subjects are chronic grumblers and few of them will ever realize that they have paid the "defence contribution." It is declared that the National fortune has risen by such leaps and bounds in the past decade that the raising of $250,000,000 for a fresh sacrifice on the altar of militarism involves no difficulties worth mentioning.

ATTLEBORO MAN HAS DISAPPEARED

Wife Scouts Theory of Suicide of Henry F. Smith, a Bookkeeper

Attleboro, Jan. 3.—Henry F. Smith for the last few months bookkeeper in the employ of the S. O. Bigney Company, jewelry manufacturers, who was informed by his employer that his services would be no longer required after Jan. 1, has disappeared.

Smith, who is 21 years of age, left behind him a wife and all his effects with the exception of the revolver the selectmen of the town of Mansfield granted him permission to carry last May. Besides his work as bookkeeper, Smith was interested in the promotion of a mail order business for the marketing of a patented fork. Rumors of suicide are scoffed at by his wife.

MANY UNFOUNDED RUMORS ARE ANSWERED BY MR. GILLESPIE

Makes Final Appeal to the Electors for Their Support in To-day's Contest

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—In view of a number of unfounded rumors that are afloat intended to affect my election, I desire to make the following brief but emphatic denials of the same:—

1st.—Subscribing money to the Home Rule Fund.

2nd.—Monopolizing the milk trade of the city.

3rd.—Entering into a Butter Combine.

4th.—Controlling the Cheese market.

To each and every one of these charges I desire to publicly record my emphatic denial; and in order to substantiate my denial, I hereby offer $100 to any Charitable Institution in the City if any ratepayer can be found who can furnish proof that any of the above charges are correct.

Let me say with regard to these rumors:

1st.—I have never been approached regarding Home Rule in any way. In fact I have been entirely ignorant of any such Fund as a Home Rule Fund.

2nd.—I confess that I am responsible for introducing an up-to-date sanitary system of handling milk, such as is being demanded by all cities in the Dominion; but if I have been the pioneer of this blessing to Peterborough citizens, I am not guilty of creating a monopoly thereof. There are some forty other milk vendors in the city delivering the raw milk at seven cents per quart, while my price for the pasteurized milk is only one cent more. Had it not been for my being in the milk business, the citizens of Peterborough would to-day be paying eight cents for raw milk. No one is compelled to buy milk from me. We have some four hundred customers and I will let them say whether or not I have not given them perfect satisfaction.

3rd.—I know of no butter combine existing in this city. The Peterborough Creamery has always been able to dispose of all its products at a price entirely controlled by supply and demand. There are a dozen other Creameries shipping butter into Peterborough in competition with me and many of our City grocers do not buy a single pound of butter from the Peterborough Creamery.

4th.—It is true I am a heavy buyer of cheese for export; but the local demand and retail price of cheese does not in any way come under my control. The charge that I control the Peterborough Cheese Market is pure imagination.

Any intelligent ratepayer must see that none of these charges can have any bearing upon my actions as Alderman, or, if elected, as Mayor, but that they are only intended to influence the electors against me.

I again appeal to you on my past record; as Alderman for five years, and as a citizen of Peterborough for ten years, confidently believing that the ratepayers are intelligent enough to [illegible] and vote for the man they [illegible] best qualified to fill the [illegible] of chief magistrate for the City of Peterborough.

Respectfully yours,
G. A. GILLESPIE.

Here's to You and Me and POSTUM

—the pure food-drink that meets the desire of young and old for a palatable table beverage which is wholesome and satisfying.

Postum is made only of clean, hard wheat and a small per cent of New Orleans molasses. It has a delicious, snappy flavour, but is absolutely free from caffeine, the drug in tea and coffee which causes so much headache, sleeplessness, indigestion, nervousness and heart trouble.

Tea and coffee drinkers can learn something of value by a ten days' change to Postum.

Then as the poison, caffeine, is eliminated from the system, the brain works clear, nerves become steady, and the gradual return of peace and comfort will show plainly

"There's a Reason" for POSTUM

Postum now comes in two forms:

Regular Postum—must be boiled 15 to 20 minutes.

Instant Postum—is a soluble powder. A level teaspoonful stirred in a cup of hot water dissolves instantly.

The convenience of Instant Postum is apparent. But, when prepared according to directions, both kinds are exactly the same. The cost per cup is about equal.

—Grocers everywhere sell both kinds.

HIGH PRICED EXPERTS.

Specialists Who Charge Enormous Fees For Their Services.

A great many people cannot understand why professional experts charge such enormous prices for their services—why an eminent surgeon, for example, says Orison Swett Marden in Success Magazine, should charge $5,000 or even $10,000 for a single operation or a great law specialist like Elihu Root $2,000 for a few hours' work in cross examining a witness.

They do not take into consideration that the surgeon has spent years in learning how to perform quickly and efficiently the difficult operation which saves a life that might have been lost in less skilled hands.

Much of the training of the specialist is to enable him to meet the unusual, the unexpected demand. The surgeon trains for the rare operation, the possible emergency. He knows that there are times when it is knowing what the ordinary surgeon did not think it worth while to learn that may save a life. There are surgeons now living who never had a dozen emergency cases in all their experience which called into play the utmost power and skill of which they are capable, but it was these few extremely dangerous operations which gave them their great reputation and enabled them to get enormous fees.

It is not the good surgeon, but the superb operator, the man who knows a little more about anatomy, who has a little steadier nerve, a more acute touch, a little better education, that is sought to perform the delicate operation in the emergency when life hangs by a thread.

MONTE CARLO'S RULER.

His Subjects Vote Not, Neither Do They Pay Taxes.

In Monaco, as in Russia, the ruler is supreme. It is an absolute hereditary monarchy. Even Russia has its douma, but in the dominions of Prince Albert voting is unknown. Yet the Monegasques cannot raise that historic cry of taxation without representation, for if they are not permitted the one they are not burdened with the other.

Albert I., the reigning prince, has devoted his life to scientific research, so the money which the spendthrifts throw away answers some useful purpose after all. He is one of the foremost authorities on marine zoology, his solutions of the gulf stream problem have been recognized by the Institute of France, and the oceanographic museum which he has founded has no equal. He is sixty-one years old, has been twice married and twice divorced—first to the Lady Mary Douglas-Hamilton, whose story is a romantic and a pathetic one, and twenty years later to the dowager Duchess of Richelieu. He tired of them both. He has one child, the Crown Prince Louis.

Prince Albert divides his time between his yacht, with its remarkable scientific equipment, his Paris residence in the Avenue Trocadero and the pink and white palace perched on a rock above the gaming hall which supports him.—Metropolitan Magazine.

HER MUSICAL TASTE.

I cannot wear the old songs
I wore a year ago.
My last year's hat was in B flat
And sounds like "Old Black Joe."
My husband says to change it
And pitch it now in F.
I tell him that a last year's hat
Appeals but to the deaf.

I cannot wear the old tunes,
Although they're not worn out.
My dinner gown would make you frown
Without the slightest doubt.
It's too [illegible]
The higher notes are starved.
The [illegible] skirt I used to flirt
No longer can be heard.

I dote on modern music.
To me it is sublime.
In last year's waist there can be traced
"The Good Old Summer Time."
And so I will not wear it,
Though it's as good as new.
I know you'd mock a ragtime frock
If one dawned on your view.

My new hat's a cadenza
Of wondrous turns and trills.
My husband swears in minor airs
When he looks at the bills.
There is a charm in music
To soothe the savage breast,
But men have hearts which music's darts
Find armor plate at best.

Still, I've made out my program
From overture to end.
For [illegible] I've made some debts,
But all the chords must blend.
I cannot wear the old songs
I wore a year gone by.
They're now as old as "Threads of Gold"
Or "Comin' Thro' the Rye."

Our Point of View

Dr. Michael Clark, of Red Deer, has arrived at Ottawa. The blockade may now begin.

—o—

As a rule the man who thinks twice before he speaks never has a great deal to say.

—o—

The municipal elections are getting so close to some of the candidates that they are taking a nerve tonic.

—o—

The Examiner asks: "What is a politician?" In reply, this g. f. j. would say that the best answer can't be printed.

—o—

Hon. Frank Cochrane is back in Ottawa as well as ever, and thereby putting another crimp in the reputation of the Grit prophets.

A PUBLIC UTILITY

The coming into being of the Canadian parcel post system is less than one month away. After the beginning of the year residents of the Dominion may avail themselves of the advantages of a service that will make possible the shipment of parcels much more cheaply than under the present express company tariffs.

No announcement has yet been made regarding the scale of charges. Mr. Pelletier and his assistants have been working on the plan for a year, and the system will no doubt be operated on a narrow margin in order to give the people the greatest possible benefits.

In the United States the introduction of the parcels post system cut express rates to the extent which caused the companies to assert that the government would lose a 'mint' of money trying to conduct the business on the tariffs originally put into force. Instead of operating at a loss the government this year estimates a surplus of many millions of dollars, perhaps thirty millions, from this source.

The experience of the big republic gives us confidence in the future of the Canadian service. It may be, from time to time necessary to improve the primary plans, but there is no reason why the system cannot be operated successfully, and Mr. Pelletier is the very man to carry out the undertaking.

The Duke of Connaught, as Chief Scout, addressed a New Year's message to Boy Scouts, hoping for a substantial increase in numbers and efficiency.

That Terrible Fatigue Can Be Overcome

A Simple Home Remedy Now Cures Lack of Energy, Loss of Ambition, and a Feeling of "Don't Care

Successful in Nearly Every Case.

That miserable nervousness and half-sick tired-all-the-time condition is due nine cases in ten to a clogged-up system. You grow irritable and despondent, you lack ambition, energy seems all gone. Surest road to health is by the frequent use of Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they will make you feel like new all over in a short time.

Writing from his home in Barcelona, Mr. Frederick G. Meyer states: "I think no one ever suffered as severely as I did for nearly six months. So many serious symptoms were developing as a consequence of this evil condition of my system that I realized I must find a remedy. The strong pills of various kinds I tried seemed after their first effects were over to make me far worse and I did not know which way to turn for relief. I saw Dr. Hamilton's Pills advertised, and the first box used satisfied me. I found a true remedy. Instead of griping with undue activity, Dr. Hamilton's Pills acted as naturally as if physic had not been taken. I never had to increase the dose and indeed, within a month I reduced it, and when the system finally acted of its own accord as a result of Dr. Hamilton's Pills, I took a dose twice a week only just to make sure the old condition would not come back."

No other remedy cures constipation and biliousness so easily or safely as Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they are an ideal family remedy for all diseases of the stomach, liver and bowels. Sold in 25c boxes, five for $1.00, all druggists and storekeepers or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Ont.

PUPLIC OPINION

The Times does not hold itself responsible for the opinions of its correspondents.

MR. BURNHAM ANSWERS.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—As your correspondents who have commented upon my letters on Economics are quite plainly genuine workingmen, I will with your permission briefly explain.

1. The world moves and society develops. If it did not we might well say "God help the underdog." People who are fully satisfied with any trade theory are hard to find nowadays.

2. Britain, since the forties, has been "free trade." ALL the other great powers are high protection. What are we to make out of that? It proves nothing absolutely, I admit. It is just a sign to take note of. If, however, Protection is fatal, and Free Trade what we used to think it was, why have the other powers done so well and why has Britain not out-distanced them? The answer is that she did so until they compelled home development by Protection when they at once drew abreast of her, great as she is, and great as she ever will be. Free Trade clearly develops a country on one side, Protection by putting up a wall compels home commerce and balance.

3. These things, however, are not what I wished to dwell upon. What I wished to say is that what alone will make a great and happy people is that the lowest order of Labour shall be paid a regular and LIVING WAGE and others accordingly. It is not necessary I hope to dwell upon the present unbalanced condition of modern life. We have times of extraordinary bounty becoming the direct cause of scarcity. Over-production surely should not produce starvation, misery, riots, strikes, etc., etc. That is plain. What would you do? "Let things alone" (free trade) as they are, or try to learn the best way to correct them? Is it not plain that nation-wide governmental management is the best way to correct these absurdities? But Control (management) and FREE TRADE are opposites. The very moment you interpose to prevent the NATURAL flow of trade and labour, that moment you violate the whole principle of free trade. Protection is not a remedy. I did not say it was. It is not a remedy for the distress above-named but, as I showed in paragraph two, it was used to promote the development of nations since become great, and appears to have succeeded. How then you ask does it improve upon free trade? Only in this: Protection is a phase of Control (management). It admits the principle. Free Trade by its very name and history defies and denies that principle. Is that not true? We are on the eve of a great change. Those who oppose any change have been preparing for some time. If you think that they are right then help them to shout "Laissez faire." (Let things alone); let trade alone, let the labour-market alone, let money alone, let waste alone. But if you are in favor of the most far-reaching advance of both Industry and Labour ever known, you will take a bird's-eye view of the situation as from a great height. You will see how easy it really ought to be to feed the hungry, adequately to pay the worker his hire, fully recompense the capitalist, the captain of industry, the doctor, the artist, etc., etc. It is all done by putting the nation on the same basis of management as a great industry. It has taken centuries for the world to rise to this conception, but it is nearing it rapidly. No more starvation because of over-production. No more slums because of having to live under absolutely unnecessary conditions of torture. No more waste. That is the word. "WASTE"—waste of life, waste of energy, waste of money, waste of production.

It is plain then that we have immense opportunities for improvement. Don't you think so? If you do think so, sink your party prejudices and face the facts. No one has a monopoly of improvement, but we can all try unless hopelessly "wedded to our idols" and cruelly contemptuous of the ever-increasing world of the slums.

J. H. BURNHAM.

ANOTHER LETTER FROM MR. COLLIER.

Editor Morning Times.

Dear Sir,—We, the ratepayers of Peterborough, have been assured by three of our public men that we will secure the exact measure of the Hydro-Electric scheme that we authorized the council to obtain for us a year ago.

His Worship, Mayor Bradburn, our Provincial member, E. A. Peck, and City Solicitor, E. H. D. Hall,—are all very able men and worthy of the high offices they respectively hold. They are unanimous in declaring that (to quote from Mr. Peck's letter of Dec. 30th) "the matter will at no distant date be arranged in accordance with the wishes of the people and with no undue expense to them." We are, therefore, in the opinion of these three able men, "to obtain possession of the pole line and other distributing equipment of the Peterborough Light and Power Company for an approximate sum of $94,000 and upon payment thereof the company's franchise will cease."

I am delighted, Mr. Editor, at these prospects and I can assure Mr. Peck that I will be the first to congratulate the council and the other officers of the City when this has been accomplished.

It may be presumptuous on my part to express an opinion differing from these three worthy officials but, much as I hope they are right, I am convinced from the facts I have been able to gather that we will have to take over the Auburn Dam and all their other property before the company's franchise will cease, AND THAT IS NOT THE EXPRESSED WISHES OF THE PEOPLE. THE RATEPAYERS OF PETERBOROUGH WILL NEVER CONSENT TO PAY $600,000 FOR THAT PROPERTY UNLESS WE ARE COMPELLED TO DO SO THROUGH SOME "TANGLE OR MUDDLE" NOW EXISTING.

But Mr. Hall assures us that there is no "tangle or muddle" however he is careful to explain that the Private Bills Committee of the Legislature materially altered the draft bill as submitted by our council and he wishes us to believe that the said committee is to blame if, through some "tangle or muddle" we do not get what we authorized our council to obtain for us. I would like to ask Mr. Hall if Section 4, Chap. 114 of the Statutes of Ontario, 1913, is now as his original draft? This is the important section of the amended act and I quoted it in my letter of Dec. 22nd, but this section contained the words "as at present used and operated within the City of Peterborough" instead of "so used and operated, etc." then the company could not have forced us to take over the Auburn Dam and all that "other extra property" which Mayor Bradburn assures us the company have acquired since the act was passed. Again, the amended Act was passed on May 6th, 1913, and had the council immediately thereafter passed their by-law expropriating the property the company then owned we would have secured what we wanted. But the expropriating by-law did not pass the council until Oct. 21st, 1913, and with the Act wide open it gave the company plenty of time to fill in the Auburn Dam and other property.

Both Mr. Hall and Mr. Peck think that at this juncture it is not advisable to have the facts given to the ratepayers through the public press. Mr. Peck censures for my letters and admonishes me as a citizen of Peterborough, "to back up the council in their effort to carry out the instructions given them," whether their efforts have been full of fault or not, I suppose. Mr. Peck, like Cassius, believes but he should remember the answer Brutus gave

"A flatter's would not though they do appear
As huge as high Olympus."

Since I am in this discussion, Mr. Editor I will show with your permission, in a subsequent letter why the ratepayers of Peterborough will never agree to pay any $600,000 for the Auburn Dam and other property connected therewith.

Yours very truly,
W. H. Collier.

A FINAL MESSAGE FROM ROBERT HICKS

Ladies and Gentlemen,—As it will be quite impossible for me to personally interview the whole of the electors before polling day, I take this means of soliciting your valuntary support for the important position of Water Commissioner for 1914.

Let me just add that to my mind the spirit in which the Water Commissioners in the past have thought to accomplish every problem which has confronted them, has been most exemplary, and that it will be my aim, if elected, to do my best to assist in solving every new problem of the future and to render the best public service in the interest of our rapidly growing City.

The valuation placed upon a public man in the midst of a campaign and an impartial review of his business ability, conduct, and stake in the City should enter into his fitness for office.

Your faith in me must be the strongest incentive to my candidature, and if I am honored with your confidence, I will see to it that that faith has not been misplaced.

With best wishes of the season, I remain,

At Your Service,
ROBERT HICKS.

To the Electors of NORTH WARD

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

I desire to heartily wish you and all the citizens of Greater Peterborough all the compliments of the season.

As a representative in the City Council, elected by the good people of the North Ward, I have had the honour of representing the people generally in carrying out their wishes for the introduction of the Hydro-Electric system into Peterborough, and I respectfully ask you for a further renewal of the confidence by again re-electing me to that very responsible position.

I stand for a principle that I believe to be in the interests of the masses of the people.

Notwithstanding the opposition offered to the honest work of your Council of 1913 I will continue to help to carry out that work until light and power are in the hands of the municipality and being run in the interests of the people, and not in the interests of a monopoly.

Yours in the good work,

To The Electors East Ward

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,—

I am again a candidate for alderman in No. 5 Ward, and respectfully solicit your support on my record in Council.

I have served you for the past three years as alderman, and in that time I have gained a knowledge of city affairs, city finances and the problems now before the Council, which fits me to deal with them in a capable and intelligent manner.

I have given close attention to my duties and have carefully looked after the interests of the East Ward in particular and the city as a whole.

I trust that my services in the past meet with your approval, and if so I ask your hearty support.

Wishing you the compliments of the season.

Yours respectfully,

A. H. STRATTON ON PUBLIC QUESTIONS

A Final Word to the Electors

The chief need in an efficient alderman is business ability. We should have as good business methods employed in running the enterprise of civic government as in running any other business. One of the best tests of a man's business ability is the success he makes of his own business. Business ability, sound business judgment, applied to city government, the expenditure of the people's money, are what is needed. If the electors think I possess these qualities, and without boasting, I think I do, I on my part, if elected, will do my very best to deserve their confidence, and give them satisfactory representation.

A Heavy Taxpayer

Need I remind the ratepayers that my taxes are much above the average, that I am deeply interested in the conduct of civic affairs. An increase in the tax rate would affect me just as materially as any of my neighbours.

For years I was engaged as a George street business man. I know the problems of the merchant, and I understand his needs, a fact which, I believe, should not be overlooked by the ratepayers of the Centre Ward.

Furthermore, I have spent my life in Peterborough, and I am familiar with every ward. There are some details of civic business which I suppose I have to learn, but my executive experience should counter-balance minor matters with which every new alderman must acquaint himself.

True Economy

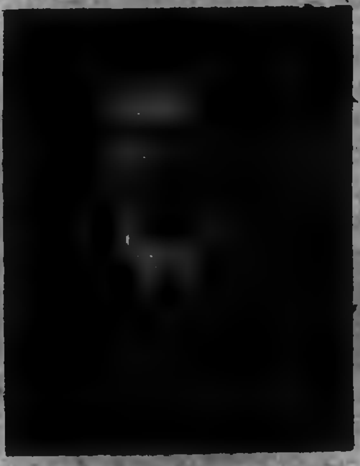
The economy desired by the ratepayers is not merely the refusal to spend money. In the handling of large sums economy is largely a matter of education derived from experience. What is required is the application of sound business judgment in the handling of the city's finances. My experience in my own business taught me a meaning of economical values, when to buy, and when to turn aside a purchase. This is the spirit of economy that I promise the ratepayers to apply in civic business if I am elected.

By the word expression "economy" I do not allude to parsimony which is a totally distinct thing. I refer to the orderly arrangement and management of the community directly concerned with its maintenance and productiveness.

Hydro Electric

The Hydro-Electric scheme can hardly be regarded as an issue in the coming election. It was not left to the Council to decide whether the measure should be adopted in Peterborough, but rather to the people who on two successive occasions signified the approval of the scheme, by an overwhelming vote. Upon subsequent Councils then devolved the responsibility of carrying out the wishes of the people, as instanced by the inauguration of the present street lighting system. Hydro-Electric is a going concern and it remains for the incoming Council to keep it going, and push it through to a successful conclusion.

I am heartily in favour of the measure, and as a member of your City Council, would do all in my power to see that the wishes of the people are fulfilled.



Civic Abattoir

The solution to the problem of assuring to the citizens a wholesome meat supply, lies in the erection of a civic abattoir, where every animal intended for consumption will be slaughtered under the supervision and inspection of a qualified veterinarian. At present the public have no protection beyond what is afforded by the Sanitary Inspector, and it is impossible for him to inspect every carcass brought into the city. When it is remembered that tuberculosis may be contracted by eating the meat of a tubercular animal, and that a large percentage of cattle are infected with the disease, it will be readily acknowledged that this question is of vital importance to the public.

If elected I will advocate the establishment of a municipal abattoir.

Street Paving

Steam up and move ahead—is one maxim that I would apply to street-paving, and such local improvements as would tend to place the city on a plane where it properly belongs. Street-paving not only constitutes a benefit to the district which it serves, but to the whole community. The money that in the past, has been expended in the maintenance of the streets in the business section of the city, can be used to better advantage in the residential parts of the city. This applies to street-watering and other works incident to the maintenance of our public streets.

I am also an advocate of the removal of all poles and other encumbrances from the city's streets, and the substitution of conduits. The conduits could be constructed by the city and a revenue derived therefrom, in the form of a rental, based on the number of ducts used by the lessees.

Dalhousie Street Bridge

One of the most important matters to a city is communication, involving bridges and streets. If the electors approve of the Dalhousie street bridge, and if I am given the power, I shall give my best attention to carry their wishes into effect with the greatest possible economy. If the by-law is defeated and I am elected I shall feel it my duty to work for some means of improving connection between the two parts of the city as a matter of justice to East City, and of advantage to our merchants and business men. In regard to our city streets I believe that some system can be adopted that will secure much better value for the money expended, with greater permanency of result.

In Conclusion

I trust the electors will see that I have a fair appreciation of some of the prominent needs of the city, and that I possess the business and executive ability and the energy, as I have the time, to give them effect. I humbly submit that my past business career will prove that if I undertake a responsibility I will do my best to meet it. I recognize that the position of alderman is not an ornamental one, but one charged with a good deal of hard work, and if I am honoured with the confidence of the electors, I shall leave no stone unturned, no effort unemployed, to justify the choice of the electors of Centre Ward.

Confident Appeal to the Electors

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

Most of you are already familiar with my brief election address, and my further public statements made on nomination day, and if any additional explanations of my views are desired on any of the live questions affecting the interests of the City, I will be glad to give them to anyone between now and polling day. But as I will not be able, personally, to wait upon the whole electors before the day of voting, I desire to use this medium of soliciting your support.

The very encouraging indications of your support, coming so generally from all classes, has served to strengthen my confidence in the result.

With a clear comprehension of the work that lies before the coming Mayor of your city, begotten of close attention to the City's affairs during the past five years as your Alderman and a conscientious desire to contribute a further share of service, I now leave the campaign confidently in your hands.

Wishing one and all a Happy and Prosperous New Year,

To The Ratepayers of CENTRE WARD

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

Just a last word. Monday you poll your votes.

The most important matter for the City this year is the Municipal-Hydro-Electric work. You should see that your Council is a unit on this. I am with the city and Council unreservedly.

To your other public wants I will give every careful attention. I believe I can be helpful and serve you well.

ALD. BULLER GIVES REASONS WHY HE SHOULD BE PETERBORO'S MAYOR FOR THE YEAR 1914

Seven Years' Active Record in the City's Interests--As Past Chairman of Important Committees is Closely in Touch with Momentous Unfinished Business. The Father of Street Paving and Aggressive Advocate of Hydro-Electric

TO THE ELECTORS OF PETERBOROUGH CITY:—

Ladies and Gentlemen,—On this the third morning of the year 1914, permit me to avail myself of the opportunity afforded by the press of extending my heartiest greetings to one and all for a happy and prosperous New Year, coupled with a lively hope that your votes on Monday next will return me to the position of chief magistrate of this city, which confidence I pledge myself to reciprocate by fostering, safeguarding and advancing the interests of Peterborough in general. As a business man of this city my interests are at stake in seeing to it that our municipal government is conducted on such lines as will assure progress and prosperity at a minimum cost to the ratepayer, and this has always been my policy, together with an earnest consideration for the welfare of the working man. In coming before you as a candidate for the Mayoralty I do so at the earnest solicitation of a large section of the community whose confidence evidently, I am happy to say, now culminates in the assurance that the People's Candidate for Aldermanic preference of seven years' standing is at this juncture the PEOPLE'S CANDIDATE FOR MAYOR. And I pledge myself that if elected to this, the most important municipal gift in the hands of an intelligent electorate, I will leave no stone unturned to advance such municipal legislation as will conserve the interests of all citizens alike, irrespective of class or creed. In brief, THE PEOPLE'S INTERESTS shall be my interests at all times, and on all occasions.

SEVEN YEARS AN ALDERMAN

In the choice of a Mayor of an important city like Peterborough, experience in municipal government should have some weight, and especially at this time, when public measures, such as Hydro-Electric, street paving, sanitary sewerage, etc., have yet to be completed in detail; and I honestly feel that my active association with these public utilities would stand me and my fellow citizens in good stead, in my assuming the Mayor's responsibility for the consummation of those progressive measures left to a successor by his estimable worship, Mayor Bradburn. Since Peterborough's incipiency as a city, I enjoy the longest record as an Alderman, having served the people as THE PEOPLE'S CANDIDATE seven years in that honourable capacity.

PERMANENT FIRE BRIGADE

In my second year I held the office of Chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee, during which time we firmly established our present permanent fire brigade, assuring approved and modern fire protection and minimum insurance rates.

CITY PROPERLY LIGHTED

As Chairman of the Power Committee in my third year, much of time was devoted to enquiry into power possibilities for municipal-owned utilities, resulting eventually in the present Hydro-Electric Scheme, now in course of development. What Hydro-Electric lighting means is evidenced on the streets in centre city each night, and the system is to be continued until the whole city is served industrially, mercantilely and domestically. In this connection I might add that, notwithstanding the present outlook of expropriation proceedings to the uninitiated, the city will only pay for the Peterborough Light & Power Company's distributing system; the power plant must be taken over by the Hydro-Electric Commission, who are under contract to supply the city with power for distribution. And citizens may rest assured that in any event the city is quite safe for a happy consummation of the Hydro-Electric scheme on economic lines, and as brilliantly creditable to all concerned as is the recently acquired magnetite arc lamp service which stamps Peterborough to-day as the best lighted city in Ontario, not excepting even Toronto.

A POLICY OF EXPANSION

In my fifth Aldermanic year the chairmanship of the Manufacturers' Committee fell to my lot, when Council reached after new industries. During that year I engineered negotiations for the establishment here of the De Laval, Henry Hope and Bonner-Worth industries, all of which are now located in our midst, and generally conceded to be valuable acquisitions to industrial Peterborough. Incidentally it might be here mentioned that the Bonner-Worth people have doubled their capacity the past year, while the other concerns are well known as sound and substantial industries, for the securing of which competition with Peterborough by many important centres was very keen indeed. I might also add here that I took an active part in negotiating for the acquisition by Peterborough of the Vermont Marble Co., now located in East City.

A BIG WORK CALLING FOR BUSINESS METHODS

The last two years of my Aldermanic career found me officiating as Chairman of the biggest and most important of Council's Committees—the Board of Works—involving the expenditure of more personal time and labor than called for from any other member of the Council, excepting His Worship the Mayor. In this capacity, recognizing that the city's phenomenal growth demanded the conduction of this Committee's work in a most approved business-like manner, I inaugurated the new policy of meeting in business session regularly every Wednesday each week throughout the whole year, thereby assuring strict and systematic attention to the important work for which the Board of Works is responsible. By this means, and with the co-operation of my esteemed colleagues, the work of the city's biggest committee has been carried out the past two years in a manner gratifying to all concerned, and the needs of ratepayers promptly considered, irrespective of personality, class or creed.

As Chairman of the Board of Works, I agitated for and secured the beginning of street paving in this city—the only modern road construction for a modern city. The benefit of this work is apparent to all; it meets with general approval and will be continued next spring.

A PLATFORM OF ELEVEN PLANKS

Every candidate for Mayor of this city should pledge himself to a full and comprehensive policy, so that the electorate may understand upon what principles he leaves himself in their hands. In brief, I am in favor of:

1. Cheap Hydro-Electric Power for the city.
2. A belt-line street railway and cheap transportation. Modern conditions for modern people.
3. Revised assessment and publication where requested.
4. Rigid inspection looking to the greater health and safety of our people from a sanitary standpoint.
5. The fullest publicity of ways of Council, so that electors may keep in touch with what is going on.
6. Seeing that citizens get what they pay for, and only pay for what they get.
7. More and [illegible] water.
8. Pure ice and plenty of it. Why should we continue [illegible] by many jobbers?
9. The finest possible market, encouraging lowest possible prices to the workingmen.
10. Further extension of the street railway system, and later and earlier service. With the Dalhousie street bridge built, a belt line could be established, making it possible for workingmen to live anywhere in the city or suburbs.
11. A medical dispensary where those unable to pay can get free medical service with nurse-inspectors to help out home conditions.
12. Continuation of street paving.

FOR THE PUBLIC ALWAYS

In coming before you, ladies and gentlemen, as a candidate for the position of Mayor, I offer myself as THE PEOPLE'S CANDIDATE, first, last and always, with an aim at determination, if elected, to carry out the above policy in the fullest possible manner, and I pledge myself to see to it that local conditions generally are maintained in the best interests of ALL CITIZENS ALIKE. As to Hydro-Electric, the system in Eastern Ontario is but in its early stages, and is naturally being keenly contested by financiers on every hand. This scheme means a vast deal to the comfort and welfare of the public, both individually and at home. It is, therefore, absolutely necessary that Peterborough's Mayor should be in aggressive sympathy with the movement, and such sympathy has been and always will be found in

Yours truly,

ALDERMAN WILLIAM H. BULLER

FOLLOWERS OF EVERY RELIGION CAN WORSHIP

New York, Jan. 2.—A church in which followers of every religion will be free to worship on terms of friendly equality opened its doors here for the first time last night. The Daily Temple is the name of the new church and as is suggested by it, the doors will be open at all times. The structure, formerly a stable, is small and of red brick construction. The furnishings are simple and on the whitewashed walls are hung several printed texts of universal appeal. Seats are provided for 200 worshippers.

The opening exercises were as unpretentious as the building itself. There was no music, nor was there any formal dedication ceremony. First a young Hindu named Acharia, a graduate of Columbia University, read from the teachings of Buddha, with comments showing the parallels between the Buddhist and those of other races and times. A Chinese journalist student at Columbia read and commented upon passages from the writings of Confucius. Then Mrs. H. R. Creighton, secretary to Miss Elizabeth Knopf, the patroness of the temple, read a passage from Isaiah. A young Turkish student read a passage from the Koran.

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE TOWNSHIP OF SMITH

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

Having been nominated as candidate for the Council for 1914, I beg to solicit your votes and influence. If elected I will endeavour to serve you faithfully and well, doing everything possible to promote the best interests of the ratepayers and of the Township.

ALDERMAN BULLER IS SEVERELY CRITICIZED

Editor Morning Times.

Dear Sir,—Of all the errant nonsense that was ever unloaded upon the public, Ald. Buller's [illegible] in The Review Saturday night, takes the prize. You would think there was not another man in the Council who ever did anything except Ald. Buller, when as a matter of fact, if it had not been for the Mayor and the other members of the Board of Works keeping watch on him for the whole year, the Board of Works would have been further behind than it is already in taking the work assigned to it.

Ald. Buller's chief asset is procrastination, in promising "to attend to matters."

The De Laval, the Henry Hope Co. and the Vermont Marble Company were not brought to the city when Ald. Buller was Chairman of the Manufacturers' Committee, but he tries to take the credit for them.

Ald. Buller says he has been in charge of the biggest spending Committee in the last two years, and this committee had charge of the roads and bridges in the city. All you need to do is to take a look at the roads and you will find a certificate of Ald. Buller's fitness.

Ald. Buller also takes credit upon himself for the street paving, in which there are four holes already on George street, and which will have to be torn up to what extent, it is not known. At all events, some parts of the pavement are absolutely rotten, and Ald. Buller was Chairman of the Board of Works, under which this pavement was laid.

He will have a fine time getting a belt-line railway and cheap transportation. My recollection is that he opposed the printing of the assessment list, which he now promises to print, and he has been the one who desired most, the secret meetings of the Power Committee.

He promises to get an ample supply of cheap water. How can he get this? Will he promise to give an ample supply of CHEAP COAL AND SUPPORT A MUNICIPAL COAL YARD?

He is now supporting a [illegible] police officer. Will he also support a by-law to lessen the number of bars in the city? How much will be spent for a free medical dispensary, with nurses inspecting, $20,000.00?

Why did Ald. Buller vote against the by-law prohibiting whistling by railway engineers in the city and always in favor of the C.P.R.? WHY?

Why did Ald. Buller straddle the fence when the vote was first taken to restrict an area in the West Ward from the building of stores, [illegible], etc.?

Yours truly,

[illegible] SCIENCE.

The Use of Signals and the Efficacy of Team Work.

Writing on the efficacy of team work and signals in baseball, Hugh S. Fullerton in the American Magazine says: "Now watch this play closely. See whether or not you can discover what is going on. Pat Moran stoops behind the batter and hides his right hand back of his mitt. Ed Reulbach, pitcher, shakes his head affirmatively. Johnny Evers stoops, puts his hand in the dirt, touches it to his knee and rests it upon his hip. Jimmy Sheckard trots twenty feet across left field, angling in toward the diamond. Steinfeldt creeps slowly to his left. Tinker moves toward second base, and Evers takes four or five steps back and edges toward Chance, who has backed up five feet. Reulbach pitches a fast ball high and on the out corner of the plate. Mike Mitchell hits it. The crowd yells in sudden apprehension. The ball seems a sure hit, going fast toward right field. Evers runs easily over, stops the ball, tosses it to Chance, and Mitchell is out.

"Now, this is what happened: When Moran knelt down he put the index finger of his right hand straight down, then held it horizontally on the top of his mitt. Evers saw that Moran had signaled Reulbach to pitch a fast ball high and outside the plate. He rubbed his hand in the dirt, signaling Tinker, who patted his right hand upon his glove, replying he understood. Then Evers rested his hand upon his hip, signaling Sheckard, the outfield captain, what ball was to be pitched. Sheckard crept toward the spot where Mitchell would hit that kind of a ball ninety-five out of a hundred times. While Reulbach was 'winding up,' swinging his arm to throw the ball, Evers called sharply to Chance (whose good ear is toward him), and Tinker called to Steinfeldt. While Reulbach's arm was swinging every man in the team was moving automatically toward right field, in full motion before Mitchell hit the ball. The gaps at first base, between first base and second, over second base and between third and short were closed hermetically, while the gap between Steinfeldt and the third base line was opened up twenty-two feet. The ball if hit on the ground had no place to go except into some infielder's hands unless Reulbach blundered and Mitchell 'pulled' the ball down the third base gap. Every man on the team knew if Reulbach pitched high, fast and outside Mitchell would hit toward right field. The only chance Mitchell had to hit safe was to drive the ball over the heads of the outfielders or hit it on a line over seven feet and less than fifteen feet above the ground. If Reulbach had been ordered to pitch low and over the plate or low and inside or a slow ball the team would have shifted exactly in the opposite way."

Slashed the Tapestry.

The apparently motiveless criminal who delights in damaging ancient works of art is a psychological mystery. The last exploit of this modern form of vandalism was performed recently at the Cluny museum in Paris. The object of attack was an ancient tapestry, dating from the end of the sixteenth century and depicting the battle of Jarnac, when the Duke of Anjou defeated the Huguenots under Condé and Coligny, March 13, 1569. The piece, much deteriorated by time, was to be found in the old chamber of the Order of the Holy Spirit, near the case showing the mantles and insignia of this body. The miscreant, who wished to place his mark on the tapestry, did so by making a downward cut about six inches in length with a sharp knife. He accomplished his design undetected, and the damage was only discovered during the final tour of inspection, after the museum had been closed for the day.—Dundee Advertiser.

Buddhists in Europe.

The Buddhist priest Bhikkhu Nyanatiloka, the author of several works and translations in German of the works of Buddha, has founded the first Buddhist colony in Europe at a mountain resort, Novaggio, overlooking Lugano. He has taken a house in the middle of the forest, commanding a view of Lake Maggiore, and will shortly be joined by a Buddhist priest named Bhikkhu Silacara from Rangoon and three European converts, an Englishman, a Dutchman and a German. The Swiss authorities on learning that the Buddhists make no active propaganda have placed no obstacles in the way.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Holiday Announcement

WE take pleasure in once more presenting to you our Annual Announcement in connection with the Holiday Trade, and would respectfully call your attention to the fact that we have secured from the leading markets of the world an up-to-date stock of holiday goods, suitable for Christmas and New Year presents, which we are selling at a bargain. This year we are better prepared than ever to cater to the wants of the public.

In both quality and prices, we defy competition. Our expenses are comparatively insignificant as compared with the other larger stores in the city, and the fact that we have not got to look to the profits from our bookstore trade to carry us through, but have a large printing and book manufacturing business as well, in addition to our rapidly expanding newspaper business.

We have made expensive preparations for the Holiday Trade, and invite the public to call and inspect our stock and get our prices before purchasing elsewhere.

Calendars, Handy Booklets, Christmas and Text Cards

We have in Calendars, Booklets, Christmas and Text Cards a stock of the latest designs, and a very large assortment to choose from. Special discounts to parties taking a number.

Fancy Goods

In Fancy Goods, as in every other line, our stock is up-to-date. We can supply you with presents for young and old, rich and poor, wives, husbands and sweethearts. We only give a mere bare list here of the articles with which our shelves are laden:—Brush and Comb Setts, Manicure Setts, Writing Desks, Collar and Cuff Boxes, Glove and Handkerchief Boxes, Ladies' and Gentlemen's Travelling Companions, Jewel Cases, Photo Boxes, Albums, etc., etc. These goods are all new, and made in designs and of material not shown before.

Books for All

We ask an inspection of our stock and prices. We aim to give our customers the best possible value for the money. Dainty Gift Books, Padded Poems, and an endless variety of Cloth and Leather Bound Works. Also Bibles, Hymnals, Children's Illustrated Books, etc.

Games for Young and Old

Our stock in Games is very complete, including Fishpond, Flips, Game of Bells, Halma, The Century Ride, Lost Heir, Authors, Checkers, Dominoes, Nations, Lotto and all the popular 10 cent games.

New Souvenir Novelties and Small Wares

The following are but a few of the many very desirable articles suitable for Yuletide remembrances: Purses, Card Cases, Burnt Leather Blotters, Pen Wipers and Book Markers; Tea, Crumb, Pin and Ash Trays, Ink Wells, Bon-bon Dishes, Japanese Cups and Saucers, Bread and Butter Plates, Rose Bowls, Vases, Biscuit Jars, all kinds of bric-a-brac, etc.

For Dolls We Lead—Others Follow

We propose to lead this season in the Doll Trade, and are showing Dolls at prices that defy competition. Handsome Kid Dolls, Dressed Dolls in all sizes, Bisque and Composition Dolls, Wax and China Dolls, Rubber Dolls and Dolls that may be used for Fancy Pin Holders. Dolls from 1c up.

Please Remember

1.—That The Times Bookstore has everything marked close to cost.

2.—We can sell cheaper than any other house. The reason we can afford to do so is, because our expenses are practically nil compared with other concerns.

3.—We are large manufacturers of stationery supplies and books, employing about 60 persons, so that in these lines we have goods at first cost.

WISDOM'S COMPROMISE.

Wear Good Clothes and Laugh at the World's Folly.

"O sage," said the young man, "I am surprised, almost grieved, to find that one who has such a reputation for wisdom as you should pay so much attention to his clothes. You are as immaculate and as nobby as a young lover."

"And why not?" asked the elder man.

"Why not, indeed?" rejoined the young man. "I am afraid I cannot explain. Many people have told me it is foolish to pay so much attention to clothes. That's all I know."

"It is a common error," spoke the sage, "but it is nevertheless an error and one which once possessed me. When I was young as you are I was attracted by the external things only, and of these external things clothes were by far the most important. When I was a little older I underwent a reaction. I had a revulsion of feeling. Somehow I gained the idea that clothes were an absurdity in toto. I thought that the inner spiritual man was everything. According as my thoughts became introspective I neglected my external appearance and went about unkempt and slovenly."

"The two extremes," suggested the young man discouragingly.

"Yes, the two extremes, but with neither alone was I happy. Without clothes I found I could not go among my fellows in comfort, and thus the social side of me became atrophied. Without knowledge and an inward appreciation of the important fundamentals of life I could not be happy in my own company."

"Wherefore," observed the young man, "you struck a happy medium by compromising on both."

"Yes. Now I pay strict attention to my external appearance, while inwardly I laugh at the folly of the world which makes it necessary."—Life.

Washington Irving.

To Washington Irving more than to any other writer belongs the high honor of being the "creator of American literature." Irving was not the first American to write good literature, but he was the first American to write in a way to catch and hold the European attention. It was through Irving's writings that the old world was made aware of the fact that there was an American literature. Hildreth, Prescott, Cooper, Poe and others of the pioneers came in for a full measure of praise, but Washington Irving will always hold his title as father of our literature.—New York American.

Hub of the Social Universe.

"We do not hesitate to call the Covent Garden Opera House 'the hub of the social universe,'" says the London Sphere. "We have been in the opera houses of Munich, Dresden, Milan, Berlin, Paris and Vienna, and there is nothing quite so impressive in any one of these as can be found at Covent Garden in the height of the season. To visit Covent Garden Opera House in the season is to know life at its most majestic point."

At the Wrong Door.

"My health and digestion are perfect, doctor," began the caller in the office of the medical man. "I haven't an ache or a pain. The trouble with me is that I cannot sleep at night."

"Well, if that is the case, sir," said the busy physician, "I suggest that you consult your spiritual adviser rather than me."—Lippincott's.

"When I was writing my first short stories," he resumed, "we had civil servants of a different stamp. An oldish resident of my native Urbana sought out, back in those days, his congressman.

"'Congressman,' he said, 'I supported you at the polls, and now I expect you to get my boy a good civil service job.'

"'All right, friend,' the congressman answered. 'What can your boy do?'

"'Do?' snorted the other. 'What can he do? By gosh, man, if he could do anything do you think I'd be bothering you?'"—New York Tribune.

SUPERSTITIONS OF THE SEA.

Origin of Most of Them Is Wrapped in Deep Mystery.

While most sailormen will stoutly deny that they hold superstitions and that the occult has no stronger hold on them than on land men, the popular belief is to the contrary. It is likely that the seaman's isolation from outside influences and the weeks and months spent afloat with only his mates for company served to foster superstitious notions in the days of sailing vessels, while the general spread of knowledge works but slowly in these occult matters, concerning which Jack is peculiarly unreasoning.

"The Finn is the most superstitious of all sailors," according to a writer in The London Globe. "There are many of this race who still believe in the ominous portent of the phantom ship, the folly of starting a voyage on a Friday (a notion by no means confined to seafaring men), the low burning blue lights which are ghost spirits hovering near to give warning of approaching disaster, and many other things, all of which

'Fill the sailor's mind with murmurings,
And speak to him of wrecks.'

"A story is told of a brigantine which numbered several extremely superstitious men among her crew. One night when there was no moon and a slight ground swell was running, the watch, who happened to be the most superstitious of them all, heard an unearthly wailing coming apparently from the very surface of the sea. The mate and the helmsman also heard it, but the former lacked imagination and although he was certainly interested, he nearly blew the watch's head off when he ventured to express [illegible]. The helmsman did not feel quite happy, but he had to stick to the wheel. The watch was pale with terror, but he kept silence owing to the mate's complimentary references to his courage and abilities. Slowly the sound began to move along the ship's side, becoming more and more agonized as it approached. This annoyed the mate, and going to the side of the vessel he waited until he had located the sound and then emptied a bucket of water over the rail. There was a gasp and then dead silence, and nothing more was heard that night.

"When the watch went off duty he, of course, gave a detailed and lurid account of the incident to his shipmates, who listened, as he thought in awed silence, and then called on one of the audience for his version of the matter. This man, a Tynesider, who dearly loved a joke and had no respect at all for hoary superstitions, had conspired with his fellows to play a trick on the watch. On the night in question he had crept over the bows without a sound, carrying with him the ship's cat, secured in a bag. Crouching under the stays, the joker let the cat's head out of the bag, which he tied round the animal's neck so that it could not escape. He then applied his teeth to the unfortunate animal's tail. Everybody knows the fearsome sounds an angry cat is capable of producing, and those to which a cat whose tail is being bitten gives vent are among the most hair-raising. The sound was more or less regulated by squeezing the luckless beast's body. The mate's bucket of water was as unwelcome as unexpected, and caused the Tynesider to beat a hurried retreat.

"Not only is the origin of many sea superstitions wrapt in mystery, but also any logical explanation of cause and effect. It would puzzle any one to say why it should be unlucky for the ship's boy to whistle on the weather bow, except that it is generally unpleasant from a music lover's point of view for a boy to whistle on any bow at all. Nor would it be easy to explain why a sneeze is [illegible] disaster, and why should the squeaking of a pig at night be considered an evil omen? At the mere sight of an overturned hatch many a seaman will declare that another ship has just gone to the bottom, and he will say the same should the salt box or the cracker bunge (anglice) biscuit box be upset."

Fire From Friction.

The Australian bushman uses a method of his own to prepare a light. First he selects two pieces of light wood, each about a foot long, from the cork tree or black fig tree. One, a flat piece, he lays on the ground amid a pile of dry leaves. Upon this strip of wood he kneels in order to hold down the ends. Then he rolls the other pointed stick between the palms of his hands so as to bore a hole into the flat strip of wood. This makes fine wood dust, which catches on fire, sending its sparks among the dry leaves. By blowing upon the tiny light the bushman soon has a fire, which he feeds with these leaves.

Not Pie.

A tall, nervous looking man entered the department in the railroad station where lost articles are kept.

"Anything turned in here today?" he queried to the man at the desk.

"ROBIN ADAIR."

Famous Love Song Had Its Origin in Eighteenth Century.

"Robin Adair" is one of those old-fashioned love songs which has lived for more than a century, and has retained its popularity probably more by reason of its pretty and plaintive melody than the words written by Lady Caroline Keppell. It is old-fashioned, for it must be confessed that a lady of to-day would scarcely lay aside her modesty to the extent that did Lady Keppell, to tell Robin how much she was enamored of him. In spite of what may be the feeling of a young woman in love at present, she would hardly dare to address the object of her affection in such endearing terms and then publish that confession to the world. She affirms that the "town was dull without him," the "assembly stupid," and that she can "ne'er forget him"; she prayed for him, tried to make him jealous by confessing that "many had made love to her," and ended by begging him to "come to her heart again."

[illegible] nearly a century and a half ago there lived in Dublin a young Irishman named Robin Adair. At the time he was studying for the medical profession in that city, and getting into some sort of trouble, the exact nature of which is not clear, he was compelled to leave the city. He started for London, but on arriving at Holyhead he found that his purse would not pay for the journey by coach, and so he set off on foot. He had not gone far when he came upon an overturned carriage, the owner of which happened to be a well-known lady of fashion.

The lady had received some slight injury, and our medical student proceeded to exercise his art in having her set right. Presently the journey was resumed, Robin having a place in the carriage bound for London, as that happened to be the lady's destination as well as that of Adair. Arriving at the metropolis, Robin found himself in the possession of a check for a hundred guineas and an invitation to visit his fellow-traveler as often as he pleased. With the money placed at his disposal, he completed his medical studies, and soon acquired an excellent practice.

One night Robin was at a dance given by his benefactress, where he met Lady Caroline Keppell, second daughter of the Earl of Albemarle. On both sides it was a case of love at first sight; but its course was naturally far from smooth. On the part of the lady's family the idea of such a mesalliance was not to be thought of, and every means was taken to disillusionize her. She came home, and a residence at Bath was tried. It was all to no purpose.

What's this dull town to me?
Robin's not near.

At last the union was reluctantly consented to, and in The Grand Magazine of Universal Intelligence those who are interested may to-day read the following chronicle of the event:—

"February 22nd, 1758.

"Robin Adair, Esq., to the Right Hon. the Lady Caroline Keppell."

Shortly after the marriage Adair was made Inspector-General of Military Hospitals, and later on, the King having taken a fancy to him, he was appointed Royal Surgeon-General and Surgeon of Chelsea Hospital. Adair lived until 1790, but Lady Caroline died many years before in giving birth to her third child. A son of the union, the Right Hon. Sir Robert Adair, died in [illegible].

The tune to which "Robin Adair" has always been sung is of Irish origin, having been composed by Gerald O'Daly, one of the native harpers, and first associated with a song entitled "Eileen Aroon." Its popularity in England dates from the second half of the eighteenth century, about which time it was much sung by Tenducci, the Italian vocalist.

A SNAKE STORY.

The Wonderful Old Time Serpent That Talked Like a Man.

In John Ashton's "Curious Creatures of Zoology" there is a quotation from "a little Latine booke printed at Vienna in the yeare 1551" which tells a most wonderful story. Ashton quotes as follows: "There was found in a mowe or rycke of corn almost as many snakes, adders and other serpentes as there was sheafes, so as no one sheafe could be removed but there presently appeared a heape of ougly and fierce serpentes. The countrie men determyned to set fire upon the barne and be attempted to do, but in vaine, for the strawe would take no fire, although they laboured with all their wittes and policye to burn them up.

"At last there appeared unto them at the top of the heap a huge great serpente, which lifted up his head and spake with a man's voyce to the countrie men, saying, 'Cease to prosecute your devise, for you shall not be able to accomplish this burning. For wee were not bredde by nature, neither came we here of our owne accord, but were sent by God to take vengeance on the sinnes of men.'"

Ashton leaves us in the dark as to what the "vengeaunce" was [illegible], but it is natural to suppose that they vanished at once.

Origin of the Safety-Pin.

An historian of invention tells us that to the wails of a long-suffering infant we owe the boon of the safety-pin. Here is the story: A little boy, named Harrison, an English blacksmith's son, had to look after his baby brother. The baby often cried, and its tears were usually traced to pin punctures. The boy tried a long time to bend the pins in such a form that they could be used with safety to his brother's flesh. In this he failed; but his father, the blacksmith, perceiving the utility of the idea that the lad had been at work on, took it up on his own account and eventually turned out the safety-pin that is in use to-day all over the world. Whether the safety-pin would have still remained in oblivion but for the tormenting of one little English baby no one knows, of course.
